Mich.—Hays v. City of Kalamazoo, 25 N.W.2d 787, 316 Mich. 443.

Reason for rule

Expenditure of municipal funds for a membership in a municipal league in a reasonable effort by municipal authorities to learn the manner in which complex municipal problems, arising from operations involving both governmental and proprietary capacities of municipality, are being solved in sister cities, thereby improving quality of service it renders its own taxpayers, is for a "public purpose".—City of Glendale v. White, 194 P.2d 435, 67 Ariz. 231.

Public policy

A contribution of public funds in payment of dues to municipal league for services thereof in presenting to members and committees of legislature statistics, information and arguments respecting merits of legislation affecting municipal problems, such as operation of public utilities, is not against public policy, although league officers and agents may take position at variance with that of city in particular instance.—Hays v. delegates to a conference of a municipal league or association, since such disbursement is for a public purpose;⁴⁵ but it has also been held that payment of expenses for such a purpose is too remote to be regarded as disbursement for a public purpose.⁴⁶

Fire-fighting equipment. A municipality, under its general charter powers or under express authorization, generally has authority to make expenditures to provide and maintain the means necessary for the extinguishment of fires,⁴⁷ and pledge the municipal credit therefor,⁴⁸ unless the creation of municipal indebtedness is forbidden.⁴⁹

Rewards for apprehending criminals. It is generally,⁵⁰ but not always,⁵¹ held that a municipality has no authority to appropriate money to the payment of rewards for the apprehension of criminals. Authority of a municipal corporation to offer rewards for the apprehension of criminals is discussed in the C.J.S. title Rewards § 11, also 54 C.J. p 780 note 94—p 781 note 5.

Purpose of statute

(1) To avoid waste and extravagance and yet permit municipalities and other taxing subdivisions of the state to function so as to supply the governmental wants and needs of the people.—State ex rel. Ward v.

such limitations may be imposed by charters.⁵⁴ The adoption of a constitutional provision limiting the indebtedness of municipal corporations will operate to repeal any inconsistent provisions contained in existing charters.⁵⁵ Although a constitutional limitation may be further limited by statute,⁵⁶ a limitation which the constitution has imposed may not be changed except as provided by the constitution,⁵⁷ and may not be changed by the legislature⁵⁸ or by the courts,⁵⁹ nor may it be disregarded or ignored by public officials, the legislature, the courts, or the people;⁶⁰ but it is the duty of the courts and municipal officers to see that it is strictly enforced.⁶¹ A statutory restriction may be removed by subsequent legislation.⁶² The rules governing the repeal by implication of statutes generally are applicable to statutes of this character.⁶³

b. Application

Statutes and constitutional provisions limiting the amount of indebtedness which a municipal corporation may incur have been applied to various kinds of municipal corporations and to the incurring of indebtedness for various purposes, and, according to some authority, have been held to constitute a limitation on the taxing power.

A limitation on the indebtedness of a class of municipal corporations is not applicable to municipalities not within the class.⁶⁴ General statutes limiting the amount of indebtedness which a municipality may incur bind all municipalities not having special authority from the same source,⁶⁵ but according to one view they do not apply to cities operating under special charters⁶⁶ or home-rule charters,⁶⁷ although there is some authority holding such statutes applicable to home-rule cities.⁶⁸ Furthermore, there is authority holding that a limitation imposed by general law pursuant to a constitutional provision that the power of municipalities to incur debts may be limited by state law applies to all municipalities whether operating under charter or otherwise.⁶⁹ Sometimes a constitution makes special provision with respect to municipalities which, at the time of its adoption, have an aggregate indebtedness exceeding the general limitation prescribed.⁷⁰ Charter limitations on municipal indebtedness are applicable only to ordinary operations, and not to additional undertakings inaugurated pursuant to additional legislative action.⁷¹ The mere showing that a municipal corporation has reached its constitutional limit of indebtedness does not, in all instances, prevent the appropriation and expenditure of money.⁷²

Restrictions as to indebtedness for general purposes are sometimes held not to apply to indebtedness incurred for special objects.⁷³ At any rate, a special provision, constitutional or statutory, may authorize a transgression of a general limitation,⁷⁴ as for certain special purposes⁷⁵ or where, in case of emergency, the public health or safety shall so require;⁷⁶ but an exception allowing a municipality to exceed a general limit for a particular purpose does not apply to indebtedness for any other purpose,⁷⁷ and, as discussed infra § 1848, any limitation of the amount of indebtedness for a special purpose must be observed. A constitutional provision authorizing the enactment of laws to limit the power of municipalities to incur debts for local purposes has no application to liability arising by virtue of proceedings under another constitutional provision dealing with mortgage bonds for public utilities.⁷⁸

A constitutional limitation on the indebtedness of the state is inapplicable to the indebtedness of a city or other political subdivision of the state.⁷⁹

Where the territory of a municipal corporation proper and that of another political body are coincident in whole or in part, constitutional or statutory debt limitations are applicable to each separately,⁸⁰ and each may contract indebtedness up to the constitutional or statutory limit without reference to the indebtedness contracted by the other.⁸¹ Where, however, some independent board or commission, which although technically a separate corporation is only an agency of the town or city, incurs or seeks to incur a debt, the courts ought to look behind fiction to see what the real fact is.⁸² Bonds for school purposes, which are issued by a municipality, have been held to be the debts of the municipality and not of the board of education within the meaning of constitutional debt limitations.⁸³ The constitutional provision limiting municipal indebtedness does not prevent the annexation or the consolidation of two or more municipal corporations, even if one or more of them has reached the constitutional limit, as there is no resultant increase of corporate debt.⁸⁴

Procedure

(1) Legislature has sole jurisdiction to set up procedure whereby body, seeking approval under constitutional amendment providing that limitations on expenditures can be exceeded if state board of equalization sanction it, can present its application for permission to exceed the allowable.—Skelly Estate Co. v. City and County of San Francisco, 69 P.2d 171, 9 Cal.2d 28.

(2) Since no maximum or minimum time for notice, filing, or hearing is provided for in constitutional amendment providing that limitation on expenditures of municipality may be exceeded by approval of state board of equalization, legislature in its discretion could make any provision it desired consistent with orderly course of business in board of equalization.—Skelly Estate Co. v. City and County of San Francisco, supra.

84. Ill.—Kocsis v. Chicago Park Dist., 198 N.E. 847, 362 Ill. 24.

While a limitation on the tax rate that may be levied and a limitation on the amount of indebtedness permissible necessarily bear a relation to each other,⁸⁵ nevertheless they are separate and distinct limitations;⁸⁶ and each is confined to the subject matter covered thereby.⁸⁷ It has been held, however, that a constitutional provision imposing a tax limit by implication imposes a debt limit,⁸⁸ and, although there is some authority to the contrary,⁸⁹ that a limitation on the amount of indebtedness is a limitation on the taxing power.⁹⁰ A limitation on the amount of an additional tax which may or must be raised for a special purpose is not a limitation on the amount that may be appropriated for that purpose where funds from other sources are available.⁹¹

c. Construction

and customary meaning; statutory limitations are construed in accordance with the general rules of statutory interpretation.

A constitutional limitation on the amount of municipal indebtedness is to be read in the broadest sense which will give effect to it;⁹² it is to be construed to advance the benefit sought⁹³ and to suppress the evil intended to be suppressed;⁹⁴ and, where it does not contain any technical terms, its words should be given a meaning in accordance with their usual and customary signification⁹⁵ and their fair intendment.⁹⁶ Where it is impossible to apply a literal meaning to the provision, the court is at liberty to take the most feasible view; one which is in harmony with the rules of construction applicable under the conditions presented, and one which works the least harm.⁹⁷ Different provisions affecting such limitations should be read together.⁹⁸

Purpose to limit taxation

(1) Purpose of constitutional provision limiting municipal indebtedness was to place restrictions on taxing power.

(2) It is also to protect taxpayers.—Barnes v. Lehi City, supra.

(3) Thus, while constitutional provision provides merely a limit on power of city to contract indebtedness and not on power of taxation, underlying purpose of provision is to serve as a limit to taxation as a protection to taxpayers.—In re Petition of City of Philadelphia, 16 A.2d 32, 340 Pa. 17.

Invalidity of tax levied to pay for hidden debt

Although the constitutional provision limiting the amount of municipal indebtedness is not against the rate of a tax, and does not limit the rate of taxation by which the obligations of a municipality may be met, a tax levied to pay an indebtedness in excess of the constitutional limitation is invalid.—People v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 97 N.E. 310, 253 Ill. 191.

amount of municipal indebtedness⁹⁹ unless the case comes within a statutory rule of interpretation,¹ but it has been said that a statutory debt limitation should receive the same interpretation as one existing in a constitution.² A limitation in a home-rule charter should be given a fair construction so as to accomplish the purpose for which it was enacted.³

d. Operation and Effect

- (1) In general
- (2) Validity of statutes and ordinances
- (3) Time of taking effect

(1) In General

Constitutional and statutory limitations on the amount of municipal indebtedness are generally held mandatory, so that no debt can be created in excess thereof; and ordinarily necessity is no excuse for exceeding the limit prescribed. Every one dealing with a municipal corporation is charged with notice of a limitation on the amount of its indebtedness; a constitutional or statutory limitation is not a grant of power or authority to contract indebtedness.

A few statutory limitations on the amount of municipal indebtedness have been regarded as directory only,⁴ acting as inhibitions on officers, but not as absolute restrictions on the municipal corporation.⁵ Generally speaking, however, a limitation on the amount of municipal indebtedness is mandatory,⁶ regardless of whether such limitation is imposed by the constitution⁷ or by statute,⁸ so that it is a general rule that, when the amount of the indebtedness of a municipal corporation is limited by law, no debt can be created in excess thereof,⁹ even though none of the citizens of the municipality objects thereto.¹⁰ A debt exceeding the limitation is void,¹¹ and so is the contract creating the indebtedness.¹² The fact that the debt limitation is exceed-

The rule that in common honesty a municipality is under an implied obligation to pay for benefits which it has received under agreements entered into by the municipal authorities has no application where the effect of permitting recovery on such a quasi-contractual claim would be to violate the constitutional limitation on municipal indebtedness.—Pittsburgh Paving Co., for Use of Iron & Glass Dollar Sav. Contract in violation of budget law

(1) Contract under which city incurred binding obligation in excess of amount provided in city budget for such purpose was held void ab initio and unenforceable, since it was in violation of budget law prohibiting creation of obligation in any one year in excess of amount specified in budget for that year, in absence of showing that there were funds not covered by budget law available for such purpose at time

ed, however, does not render invalid debts contracted before the limitation was reached;¹³ and a contract for indebtedness partly within and partly beyond the limitation is void only as to the excess.¹⁴ A contract requiring no expenditure of money is not void.¹⁵ Warrants are invalid where they have the effect of increasing the indebtedness of the municipality beyond the prescribed limit.¹⁶

In determining whether existing indebtedness is valid, each item thereof must be analyzed and must stand or fall by itself.¹⁷ The last indebtedness incurred may be valid, and other and prior indebtedness may be invalid.¹⁸ The fact that the total existing indebtedness is excessive is not the determining factor as to the validity of any particular indebtedness.¹⁹ The constitutional limitations have been held to prohibit a municipality from filing in a court a pleading that admits an indebtedness in violation of the prohibition.²⁰

Necessity is no excuse for exceeding the limit prescribed²¹ unless the limitation is construed not to be applicable to indebtedness for expenditures necessary to maintain the corporate existence of the municipality²² or unless, as discussed supra subdivision b of this section, the constitution or statute imposing the limitation makes special provision for an emergency. Likewise, it is not an excuse that the municipality has accumulated property greater in value than the amount of its outstanding indebtedness.²³

Everyone dealing with a municipality is charged with notice of a limitation on the amount of its indebtedness,²⁴ and, while a person need not anticipate that illegal claims will be incurred by officers willing to violate the constitution,²⁵ he must take notice of an error in an ordinance overestimating the municipal receipts or appropriating sums materially less than required to meet charges fixed by law or contract;²⁶ but a municipal corporation which has authorized a proper expenditure cannot by a subsequent resolution, of which persons advancing money for the expenditure have no notice, limit the amount of its liability.²⁷ A constitutional or statutory limitation of the amount of municipal indebtedness is not a grant of power or authority to contract indebtedness.²⁸ Also, a constitutional limitation of the amount of municipal indebtedness is restrictive only of the amount of municipal indebtedness²⁹ and not of the form or evidence thereof;³⁰ indebtedness may be incurred in any mode within the amount limited without violating the limitation.³¹ A statute authorizing municipalities to in-budget was made.—American-La France & Foamite Corporation v. City of Phoenix, 54 P.2d 258, 47 Ariz. 133.

(2) Fact that at time of entry into contract of purchase and at time apparatus was delivered cash balance of city funds was in excess of cost of apparatus was insufficient to show existence of funds not subject to budget law or to validate contract in violation of budget act in creating obligation in excess of amount specified in budget.—*American-La France & Foamite Corporation v. crease the amount of their indebtedness, but setting no maximum, is limited by a constitutional provision setting a maximum.³²

(2) Validity of Statutes and Ordinances

Statutes and ordinances which conflict with a constitutional limitation on municipal indebtedness are void, and an ordinance providing for indebtedness in excess of a statutory limitation is void; but a statute or ordinance which authorizes the expenditure of money, but does not purport to authorize the incurring of a debt beyond the prescribed limit, is not void.

Statutes³³ and ordinances³⁴ which conflict with a constitutional limitation on municipal indebtedness are void, as the limitation is a curb on all legislative power,³⁵ and not only prohibits a municipal corporation from incurring indebtedness in excess of the limit, as discussed supra subdivision d (1) of this section, but also prohibits the legislature from authorizing it to do so.³⁶ An ordinance providing for an indebtedness in excess of a statutory limitation is also void,³⁷ and, in the case of a territory, a limitation imposed by act of congress is a limitation, as to the creation of municipal indebtedness not only on the municipal authorities,³⁸ but also on the legislature of the territory.³⁹ On the other hand, a constitutional provision limiting the amount of municipal indebtedness is not violated by a statute which authorizes a municipality to incur indebtedness, but does not purport to authorize it to incur indebtedness beyond the prescribed limit,⁴⁰ or which creates a school district in an area identical with that of a town and empowers the district to borrow money.⁴¹ An ordinance which provides for a contract when financial conditions will permit is not void.⁴² In determining whether a given proposition violates the constitutional debt limitation, the result attempted to be brought about by the proposal is the prime consideration,⁴³ and the controlling test is to be found by regarding substance rather than form⁴⁴ and in looking at its practical operation and effect when considered in the light of the constitutional restrictions.⁴⁵ An ordinance fixing salaries of councilmen has been held not unconstitutional as contravening the power of the legislature to control municipal indebtedness.⁴⁶

(3) Time of Taking Effect

Provisions limiting the amount of municipal indebtedness are not retroactive, but a constitutional provision limiting such indebtedness operates immediately on promulgation.

Provisions limiting the amount of municipal indebtedness are never retroactive,⁴⁷ and hence do not affect the validity of preëxisting indebtedness;⁴⁸ but a constitutional provision operates immediately on promulgation,⁴⁹ and before the enactment of a

§ 1847. Particular Limitations

- a. Per cent of value of taxable property
- b. Yearly revenue
- c. Expenditure for previous year

a. Per Cent of Value of Taxable Property

Provisions that a municipal corporation shall not become indebted to an amount exceeding a specified per cent of the value of the taxable property therein, or to an amount exceeding the assessed value, have been construed and applied according to their terms in determining the valuation and the taxable property to be considered on the question whether the prescribed limit has been exceeded.

Under some constitutional provisions municipal indebtedness is limited to an amount, including existing indebtedness, in the aggregate not exceeding a specified per cent of the value of the taxable property in the municipality;⁵² and a constitutional restriction merely on the power of the legislature to permit the indebtedness of a municipal corporation to exceed a stated per cent of the value of its taxable property will not operate to repeal a clause in a preëxisting charter limiting the amount of the indebtedness to a smaller per cent.⁵³

Under the construction placed on some provisions,

the value of the taxable property is its actual value,⁵⁴ rather than its assessed value,⁵⁵ at least where, by statute, the assessment of property for taxation is limited to a certain per cent of its true or actual value.⁵⁶

Under the express provisions of some constitutional limitations, however, the value of the taxable property is ascertained by a specified assessment made prior to the incurring of the indebtedness, generally according to a prior assessment made for state and county purposes,⁵⁷ and such provisions are construed to contemplate a completed assessment,⁵⁸ including equalization or other action by a state board or agency charged with duties in connection therewith;⁵⁹ but in the absence of such a provision it has been held that, while a completed assessment is contemplated,⁶⁰ nevertheless the valuation to be considered is one made by municipal authorities⁶¹ as a basis for taxation for city purposes,⁶² rather than one made for state or county tax purposes.⁶³ In determining whether a particular tax is for municipal or state purposes within the meaning of the foregoing rules, the statute which authorizes its imposition is controlling,⁶⁴ rather than the use made of the revenue derived thereby.⁶⁵ In determining the debt limit, it has been held that the court may not revise or add to the tax list by which the value of

Quasi-judicial act

An assessment, within constitution under which the assessed value of property in town as evidenced by last preceding assessment for state purposes must be taken as basis for determining limit of debt contracting power, is a quasi-judicial act consisting in making out a list of the taxpayer's taxable property and fixing its valuation or appraisal.—First Nat. Bank v. Town of Luverne, 180 So. 283, 235 Ala. 606.

Validity of indebtedness evidenced by municipal funding bonds is determinable from last assessment for state and county purposes previous to incurring of indebtedness.—Alexander v. Board of Education of Town of Carmen, 18 P.2d 863, 161 Okl. 287.

the taxable property is required to be ascertained.⁶⁶

Under most limitations of municipal indebtedness, the value of the taxable property is ascertained according to the last tax assessment made prior to the incurring of the indebtedness,⁶⁷ but under a few provisions resort is had to the assessment next preceding the last.⁶⁸ The limit of indebtedness which may be incurred is to be estimated by assessments made as provided by law and cannot be estimated by the opinion of witnesses as to what a future assessment may be.⁶⁹

The validity of a debt is to be determined by the ratio of indebtedness to the assessed valuation in effect when the debt was created.⁷⁰ If a debt is valid when created it will not become invalid thereafter even if it should exceed the stated per cent of some future assessment;⁷¹ and, conversely, if the debt is invalid when incurred because of the constitutional inhibition, a subsequent increase in the assessed valuation of taxable property will not render it legal.⁷² Overassessment, even though the overassessing is imposed with uniformity, is invalid, since it opens the door to contracting an excessive debt.⁷³

A new municipality not organized long enough to have made the tax assessment on which a constitutional or statutory debt limitation is based is nevertheless subject to the limitation;⁷⁴ it may incur indebtedness prior to the making of a tax assessment,⁷⁵ and such indebtedness is valid when within the limit as determined by the assessment subsequently made,⁷⁶ but not otherwise.⁷⁷

Particular kinds of taxable property. Taxable property, within the meaning of limitations of municipal indebtedness to a specified per cent of the value of the taxable property in the municipality, includes personal property,⁷⁸ unless such property is not subject to taxation⁷⁹ or unless the limitation is by its terms restricted to real estate,⁸⁰ and even in that case all property which the statutes make taxable as real estate is included.⁸¹ The assessed value of railroads, bridges, and telegraph and telephone companies within the city is properly included in the aggregate valuation,⁸² and so, it has been held, are franchise assessments,⁸³ and also the assessed value of properties which had been bid in by the city treasurer at a tax sale⁸⁴ and of properties against which the city holds tax liens,⁸⁵ even though the annual city taxes are not extended to them.⁸⁶

Under some provisions a municipal corporation is prohibited from incurring an expense or creating an indebtedness in any one year in excess of the revenue provided for that year, or from incurring debts payable out of the revenues of future years, or is limited as to the amount of deficit payable from the revenues of the next succeeding year which it may incur.

Under the provisions of some statutes or charters a municipal corporation is prohibited from incurring an expense or creating an indebtedness in any one year in excess of the revenue provided for that year,⁸⁷ and under such provisions it has been held that the right of a municipality to contract and incur obligations is limited by the amount which it did collect, and not what might have been collected.⁸⁸ Under such provisions a municipal corporation may continue to function although it does not have cash on hand each year to pay obligations contracted in such year if its expenditures do not exceed its revenues, but it may not increase its indebtedness.⁸⁹ Debts contracted during a fiscal year are not invalid unless in excess of the revenues for that year, and may be paid out of revenue of succeeding years.⁹⁰ Under some statutes or charters a municipality is prohibited from incurring debts payable out of the revenues of future years,⁹¹ and under some charters, when the revenues in any one year are insufficient to meet legitimate expenditures, the municipality may incur a deficit in a limited amount payable from the revenues of the next succeeding year.⁹² Under some provisions, which are discussed infra § 1859, a municipal corporation is prohibited from incurring any indebtedness or liability in any year in excess of its income and revenue for such year unless authorized to do so by a specified proportion of the electors voting at an election held for the purpose of passing on the question.

c. Expenditure for Previous Year

Under some statutes the total of amounts in the budget proposed for expenditures may not exceed by a certain per cent the aggregate of actual expenditures for the previous year, exclusive of certain expenditures.

Under some statutes the total of amounts in the budget proposed for expenditure may not exceed by a certain per cent the aggregate of actual expenditures for the previous year, exclusive of certain expenditures,⁹³ and under such statutes it has been held that a sum expended from surplus revenues received from sources other than direct taxation constitutes an actual expenditure, and is properly included in the limitation base.⁹⁴ A provision that the amount of tax levies for emergency liabilities should be excluded from the base on which the limitation for the succeeding year should be determined has been construed to exclude the amount of emergency expenditures authorized by the state tax commission only where a tax levy was necessary to meet the emergency liabilities.⁹⁵

§ 1848. Limitations for Particular Purposes

A limitation of the amount of indebtedness which a municipal corporation may incur for a special purpose will be given effect according to, but not beyond, its terms.

The legislature may,⁹⁶ and sometimes does,⁹⁷ limit the amount of expenditure which a municipal corporation may make or the amount of indebtedness it may incur for a special purpose. Such a limitation will be given effect according to,⁹⁸ but not beyond,⁹⁹ its terms.

be called on to pay, and includes both bonded and floating indebtedness; but any debt expressly excepted by law is not to be included. Moreover, a limitation on municipal indebtedness is aimed at an actual, rather than a theoretical, indebtedness.

Generally speaking, the existing indebtedness of a municipal corporation comprehends its valid outstanding obligations which it can be called on to pay,¹ and includes all classes of indebtedness,² whether bonded³ or floating.⁴

In computing the amount of existing municipal indebtedness with reference to constitutional and statutory limitations, however, the language of express provisions on the subject is controlling,⁵ and any debt expressly excepted by law is not to be included.⁶ Where the limitation in express terms is applicable in cases requiring the assent of the voters, indebtedness not requiring such assent is not to be computed as a part of the existing indebtedness.⁷ A limitation of indebtedness, moreover, is aimed at an actual, rather than a theoretical, indebtedness.⁸

Accordingly, the existing indebtedness of a municipal corporation, within the meaning of a limitation, does not include indebtedness, the money to pay which is in the municipal treasury⁹ or which is payable from a special fund,¹⁰ municipal stocks or bonds in the hands of the sinking fund commission,¹¹ illegal or void obligations,¹² unliquidated and disputed claims,¹³ a contract under which a debt may arise,¹⁴ indebtedness proposed to be incurred thereafter,¹⁵ merely optional obligations,¹⁶ or in-

Presumption of sufficiency of current revenues

In determining whether maximum permissible limit of indebtedness had been exceeded by city when bonds were issued, interest accruing on bonds and overdrafts in general fund and police fund could not be included in indebtedness since in absence of proof to the contrary it was to be assumed that the current revenues of the city were sufficient to discharge interest due and take care of the overdrafts.—City of Jackson v. debtedness of a separate taxing unit whose boundaries are coincidental with that of the city.¹⁷ The amount of money in the city treasurer's hands which can be properly applied for sinking fund purposes does not represent a debt from the city to the sinking fund.¹⁸ A sum temporarily transferred from one fund to another, for the repayment of which a tax has been levied, is not a debt of the municipality, since the obvious purpose of such temporary transfers is to avoid borrowing of money and thus creating a debt.¹⁹ Anticipated or uncollected income from special assessments or publicly owned utilities may not be considered as reducing the required millage to service special assessment and waterworks bonds for the purpose of determining whether general obligation bonds which have not been approved by the voters would come within the constitutional limitation.²⁰

Obligations to be computed as part of the municipal indebtedness include judgments rendered against the municipality,²¹ its liability to reimburse a special fund for money which it has unlawfully diverted therefrom,²² outstanding unpaid warrants against appropriations for prior years,²³ and, under the construction placed on some constitutional provisions, loans to the municipality which have been authorized but not actually consummated.²⁴ In determining whether a proposed bond issue is within the constitutional limitation, it has been held that the outstanding unvoted bond indebtedness of all overlapping political subdivisions must be included.²⁵

Current expenses. Current expenses covered by current revenues are not considered as debts of the municipality in computing existing indebtedness,²⁶ and neither are liabilities for proper current expenses for the payment of which funds could lawfully be raised during the year in which the liabilities were incurred.²⁷ So, where a municipality contracts for annual services for a series of years to be paid for by annual payments, only the amount which may become due within a certain year or other period need be considered in determining whether the debt limit has been exceeded.²⁸ If loans made by a municipality to meet current expenses do not overreach current revenues and do not extend beyond the present means of payment possessed by the municipality, no debt is created in the constitutional sense,²⁹ but the rule is otherwise where the

Indebtedness incurred before adoption of constitution or charter. According to some authorities, indebtedness incurred before the adoption of the present constitution is not to be considered in determining the amount of municipal indebtedness³¹ unless the total indebtedness has, since the adoption of the constitution, been reduced below the prescribed limit.³² Likewise it has been held that indebtedness incurred prior to the passage of a charter imposing a limitation is not to be computed as a part of the indebtedness of the municipality.³³

Interest. Accrued,³⁴ but not unaccrued,³⁵ interest on the obligations of a municipality is to be included in computing its indebtedness at a particular time.

b. Debts or Liabilities Arising from Improvements, Utilities, or Taking of Property

The existing indebtedness of a municipal corporation includes its liability under contracts for public improvements to be met by an issue of bonds to be paid for by future taxation, but not where the debt is payable from special assessments; and under some constitutional provisions debts incurred for municipally owned public utilities may be excluded from the gross total in determining whether the debt limit has been reached.

The existing indebtedness of a municipal corporation includes its liability under contracts for public improvements where such liability is to be met by an issue of bonds and the bonds are to be paid for by future taxation,³⁶ but the rule is otherwise as to debts for local improvements payable from special assessments.³⁷ Prior to the extension of credit to a municipality for the amount of public benefits, and in the absence of a showing that the municipality is not ready to raise the amount by taxation, public benefits are not to be counted as debts;³⁸ but after there has been an extension of credit for the purpose of the improvement it has been held that they are considered to be debts.³⁹ Assessments against municipal property for improvements made payable by general tax levy have been held to constitute municipal obligations or debts.⁴⁰ Betterments may be considered against portions of lots divided by improvement district boundaries to determine whether the cost of an improvement exceeds the legal limitation.⁴¹

Some,⁴² but not other,⁴³ courts have held that the amount owing by a city to the owners of property taken for a public use is to be included in computing the existing indebtedness of the city. An estimate, made by a municipal officer charged with the duty of making it, of the damages caused by a street improvement⁴⁴ and of the cost of doing the work⁴⁵ has been held a sufficient basis for including the amount thereof in a computation of the indebtedness of the city.

Under some constitutional provisions and the construction placed thereon, debts incurred for public utilities owned by the municipality may be excluded or deducted from the gross total in determining whether the debt limit has been reached,⁴⁶ and this rule has been applied where the obligation is payable out of the revenues of public utilities or improvements,⁴⁷ or where provision is made for the exclusion of an indebtedness created for the purpose of purchasing, extending, adding to, improving, operating, or managing a public utility, secured solely by the property or income of such public utility.⁴⁸ Under a constitutional provision that no obligations to provide for the construction or acquisition of specified public utilities shall be considered a debt of the municipality if the net revenues therefrom are sufficient to pay interest and sinking-fund charges, bonds issued to provide funds for the operation, enlargement, and repairs of an existing plant must be included in a computation of the existing indebtedness of the municipality;⁴⁹ and under a constitutional provision of this character the court has no power to declare that the amount of an improvement loan exceeding the debt limit should be excluded from calculation of the amount of debt in determining municipal borrowing capacity where the revenue therefrom, exclusive of revenues derived from taxation, is insufficient to make the loan self-liquidating,⁵⁰ even though a special fund would be created.⁵¹

c. Debts Permitted to Exceed General Limitation

Although there is authority to the contrary, it has been held that, where a municipal corporation is authorized to exceed the general limitation for specified, exceptional purposes, debts incurred for such exceptional purposes before the limitation has been reached are not to be included in computing existing indebtedness to determine whether a further indebtedness not for an exceptional purpose may be incurred.

Some authorities take the view that, even though a municipal corporation is authorized to exceed the general limitation for specified exceptional purposes, nevertheless debts incurred for such exceptional purposes before the limitation has been reached are to be included in computing its existing indebtedness for the purpose of determining whether it may incur a further indebtedness not for an exceptional purpose;⁵² but other authorities take a contrary view,⁵³ and hold that the two classes of indebtedness are entirely separate and distinct,⁵⁴ so that the indebtedness incurred under one class is not to be considered in determining whether the constitutional limitation on the other class has been exceeded.⁵⁵

At any rate a debt which, at the time it was incurred, exceeded the limitation, and was contracted by popular vote in pursuance of constitutional authority to exceed the limit with the assent of the electors, is not subsequently to be computed as part of the indebtedness subject to the limitation.⁵⁶

d. Deduction of Assets

While a few decisions hold that a limitation of municipal indebtedness refers to outstanding debts and not net indebtedness, it has generally been held that in computing the existing indebtedness of a municipal corporation a deduction may be made from gross indebtedness of municipal assets applicable to the payment of such indebtedness.

The method of determining whether a new indebtedness will exceed a debt limit is a subject of more or less conflict.⁵⁷ According to a few decisions, a limitation of municipal indebtedness refers to outstanding debts and not to net indebtedness,⁵⁸ and accordingly it has been held that the amount of such indebtedness is not reduced by the amount of cash such municipal corporation may have on hand in the treasury subject to general disbursement;⁵⁹

but this principle does not apply to cash or bonds in a sinking fund created by law, which may be applied solely to the discharge of certain indebtedness,⁶⁰ the rule being that, in order that cash in the hands of a municipality may be deducted to ascertain whether the constitutional debt limitation has been exceeded, it is necessary that such fund be clearly designated as being usable solely for the purpose of discharging some outstanding indebtedness in such a manner that its application to such purpose can be enforced by law.⁶¹

On the other hand, it has generally been held that in computing the existing indebtedness of a municipality a deduction may be made from gross indebtedness of municipal assets applicable to the payment of such indebtedness;⁶² and in some jurisdictions it is so provided by statutes⁶³ which are held to be constitutional.⁶⁴

Where deduction is authorized in accordance with the general rule, particular assets which may be deducted include cash on hand⁶⁵ and solvent debts due

Assets exclusive of assets to be used during current year

(1) Under statute providing that whenever it shall be necessary to compute the indebtedness of a taxing district, taxes levied for the current year and cash on hand received for the purpose of carrying on the business of such taxing district for the current year shall be considered as assets only as against indebtedness incurred during such current year which is payable from such taxes or cash on hand, in determining whether indebtedness of city incurred by action of city council exceeded constitutional limit, cash assets exclusive of assets to be used during current year for carrying on municipal business could be deducted from total indebtedness of the municipality.⁶⁶ Bonds or other securities in a sinking fund are to be deducted from the indebtedness of the municipality⁶⁷ unless the sinking fund is one especially pledged for the retirement of obligations which are not computed as part of the indebtedness of the municipality within the meaning of constitutional limitations, in which case such bonds or securities cannot be allowed as a deduction or offset against the general debt of the municipality.⁶⁸ It has been held that unexpended money borrowed for a specific purpose should not be deducted,⁶⁹ but it has also been held proper to deduct cash in the treasury consisting of the unallotted proceeds of bonds issued to pay debts which were previously incurred and which are included in computing the indebtedness of the municipal corporation.⁷⁰ Damages for a contractor's failure to complete work within the time specified are not to be subtracted from the amount due on the contract, in determining whether the indebtedness has exceeded the legal limit.⁷¹

Taxes, special assessments, and income from licenses. It has been held that it is proper to deduct due and unpaid taxes,⁷² including unpaid taxes of prior years⁷³ and, except as otherwise provided by statute,⁷⁴ taxes assessed for municipal purposes during the year in which the indebtedness is contracted;⁷⁵ but according to other authority neither uncollected taxes⁷⁶ nor the levy for the current year⁷⁷ can be deducted. At any rate, it is improper to deduct taxes which have been delinquent for such a period of time as to give rise to a presumption of payment,⁷⁸ or revenue anticipated from license fees or taxes⁷⁹ or from a tax roll not yet in the hands of the collector.⁸⁰ Uncollected special assessments may be deducted after they have become liens for fixed amounts,⁸¹ but not prior to that time.⁸² Where it is apparent that the full amount of unpaid taxes and assessments cannot be collected, this item of credit on the gross indebtedness may be reduced accordingly.⁸³ If delinquent taxes which the municipality expects to collect within the year are treated as current revenues, for the payment of current expenses, they cannot properly also be deducted from the indebtedness of the municipality;⁸⁴ and it follows that taxes pledged for the payment of loans made to a municipality to enable it to pay current expenses cannot be used as an asset in computing the municipal debt.⁸⁵

Misapplied revenue. Revenue of the current year, which has been wrongfully applied by the municipality to obligations of a preceding year while there were outstanding legal claims for the current year, will be considered as still in the treasury in determining whether a constitutional or statutory limitation of indebtedness has been exceeded.⁸⁶

§ 1850. New Debts, Expenditures, or Transactions Subject to Limitation

A debt within the constitutional debt limitation is a pecuniary liability of a municipal corporation or a charge against its general credit, and, generally, subject to some qualifications and exceptions, the limitation applies, as of the time when the debt comes into existence, to all municipal indebtedness voluntarily created, regardless of its nature, form, or purpose, but not to contingent liabilities or to involuntary obligations or liabilities.

Where the amount involved in a municipal transaction, together with the previous debts and liabilities of the municipal corporation, does not in the aggregate exceed the amount of indebtedness limited by constitutional or statutory provision, it is immaterial, as far as the particular transaction is concerned, whether or not it constitutes a liability or indebtedness within the limitation.⁸⁷ On the other hand, where, on a proper computation thereof, it appears that the existing indebtedness of a municipality equals or exceeds the constitutional or statutory limit, and it purposes to incur an additional financial obligation, it becomes necessary to consider whether such obligation constitutes a "debt" or "indebtedness" within the meaning of the constitutional or statutory limitation. In determining this question many and varied controversies arise,⁸⁸ and some judicial statements of what constitute "debt" or "indebtedness" are so formulated in the light of the peculiar language of the context in which they appear as to be of little service in prescribing rules of universal application.⁸⁹

Some authorities hold that the words "debt" and "indebtedness," as used in constitutional and statutory limitations, are to be taken in their ordinary and popular meaning,⁹⁰ but others take the view that these words are to be given a meaning less broad and comprehensive than they bear in general usage.⁹¹ According to some holdings, the debt limit has reference to an actual indebtedness for the payment of which a tax must be levied,⁹² and so it is held by some authorities, as discussed infra § 1853 a, that any obligation paid or contracted to be paid out of a fund that is the product of a tax levy is a debt within the purpose of the constitutional limitation. At any rate it is not disputed that no municipal indebtedness arises unless an obligation of some kind on the part of the municipality to pay money is created;⁹³ a debt within the constitutional

Existing obligation

(1) A debt, within the meaning of constitutional provisions limiting the debt of a municipal corporation, is created when an obligation is undertaken to pay in the future for consideration in the present and imports a present and actual creditor as an incident to the transaction.—Graham v. City of Philadelphia, 6 A. 2d 78, 334 Pa. 513.

(2) A debt within the constitutional prohibition does not contemplate possible obligations accruing by act of God or by possible laws to be passed in the future, but merely contemplates an existing obligation presently enforceable against the property or funds of a municipality generally, or an obligation presently existing, enforceable in the future.—Graham v. City of Philadelphia, supra.

Unconditional obligation

A debt in the constitutional sense implies that an obligation has arisen out of contract express or implied which entitles the creditor unconditionally to receive from the debtor limitation is a pecuniary liability of a municipality or a charge against its general credit.⁹⁴ The words "debt" or "liability" should not be so interpreted as to paralyze the legal functioning of such municipal corporations as might have reached or exceeded their existing debt limits.⁹⁵

The question whether a particular indebtedness is within the limitation does not depend on whether there is a right of action against the municipality,⁹⁶

and a debt may be created against a municipal corporation in violation of the constitutional provision, even though no liability is placed on the municipality which may be enforced in the future by the compulsory levy of taxes.⁹⁷

Generally speaking, the time which is controlling in determining whether a debt in excess of the constitutional limitation is created is the time when a municipal debt comes into existence,⁹⁸ rather than a sum of money which the debtor is under a legal, equitable or moral duty to pay without regard to any future contingency.

Obligation to be met with funds or property

In order to constitute a debt against a municipality within constitutional debt limitation, there must be an obligation which municipality must, if need be, meet with its funds or property.

Obligation to render service

(1) Debt contemplated by constitutional provision limiting indebtedness means obligation to pay money, not to render service when its breach imposes no duty to pay money—Oppenheim v. City of Florence, 155 So. 859, 229 Ala. 50.

(2) When promise by city to render a service is made, and as part of it there is expressed an agreement that city shall not be pecuniarily liable if it is broken, there is conclusive agreement that debt as contemplated by constitutional provision limiting indebtedness will never thereby accrue, and, if city breaks its contract not to convert funds or divert them, such breach is not debt when covenant is made.—Oppenheim v. City of Florence, supra.

(3) A contract to furnish water does not constitute a debt within meaning of statutes pertaining to municipal fiscal affairs.—City of McAlester v. State ex rel. Board of Public Affairs, 154 P.2d 579, 195 Okl. 1.

Amount of claim not determinative

Amount for which court found city indebted for engineer's services, not amount of his claim presented to council, is proper basis for determining whether indebtedness exceeds city's revenue for fiscal year in which incurred.—Brooks v. City of Gilroy, 29 P.2d 212, 219 Cal. 766.

Limit dependent on population

(1) Under constitutional provision limiting indebtedness of cities, city may incur debt permitted to cities having population of six thousand or more if city has population of six thousand when indebtedness is created, regardless of whether preceding decennial federal census shows city to have population of six thousand.—Taxpayers and Citizens of City of Fort Payne v. City of Fort Payne, Ala., 40 So.2d 439—Town of Camden v. Fairbanks, Morse & Co., 86 So. 8, 204 Ala. 112—Ryan v. Mayor, etc., of City of Tuscaloosa, 46 So. 638, 155 Ala. 479.

(2) Purpose of statutes relating to taking of municipal census is to provide procedure for obtaining official census, with all the advantage of an official census, and legislature did not intend to alter rights of municipalities to incur indebtedness under constitution.—Taxpayers and Citi-

the time when it matures,⁹⁹ a claim is presented for payment,¹ a warrant is issued,² or the debt is funded,³ since a debt payable in the future is, obviously, no less a debt than one payable presently,⁴ at least where the obligation is one to pay in the future for a consideration received in the present.⁵ A contract by a municipal corporation which, when properly construed, does not fix the amount of the liability from its date, however, does not create a present indebtedness, within the meaning of a constitutional restriction on municipal indebtedness.⁶

Where a municipality contracts for annual services for a period of years to be paid for by annual payments, the whole amount which may ultimately become due does not constitute a debt within the constitutional limitation,⁷ but regard is to be had only to the amount that may become due within a certain year or other period;⁸ and, except in some jurisdictions,⁹ an obligation to pay for work to be performed in the future and paid for when performed does not become an indebtedness until the performance of the work.¹⁰ The effect of the constitutional provision cannot be avoided, however, by providing for installment payments on a present indebtedness running through a series of years.¹¹

Nature, form, and purpose of indebtedness. It has been said that the constitutional limitation is directed solely against the incurring of new debt,¹² and includes all indebtedness¹³ without regard to its nature¹⁴ or the manner in which it may be incurred,¹⁵ and regardless of whether it is expressly

(3) Where last municipal census taken under statute showed population of city to be under six thousand, but population allegedly exceeded six thousand when city instituted proceeding to validate general obligation street improvement warrants, the amount of which if validated would cause city to exceed constitutional debt limitation imposed on cities having population of less than six thousand but would not cause city to exceed debt limitation imposed on cities having population of six thousand or more, population when proceeding was instituted, rather than as shown by municipal census would control as to which debt limitation was applicable.—Taxpayers and Citizens of City of Fort Payne v. City of Fort Payne, supra.

(4) Under charter provision limiting cost of government to stated amount per person, city in fixing budget in August and September, 1930, under charter provision for 1931, was governed by 1930 federal census announced in July, without any addition.—Sommers v. City of St. Paul, 237 N.W. 427, 183 Minn. 545.

assumed, or is implied in fact, or is implied in law.¹⁶ According to some decisions, an agreement to pay for material purchased creates an indebtedness no matter from what source the funds are to be derived from which the payment is to be made,¹⁷ and the fact that an indebtedness incurred by a municipality is to be paid only from some source other than ad valorem taxation does not render inoperative the constitutional limitation,¹⁸ although, as discussed infra § 1853 b (1), the general rule is that restrictions on municipal indebtedness are not applicable to obligations which are payable only out of a fund derived from the income and revenue of specific revenue-producing properties constructed or purchased by the municipality. The limitation applies to obligations on which the municipality pledges full faith and credit, called general obligations,¹⁹ and, as considered infra § 1853 b, in some jurisdictions, but not in others, it is held to apply also to obligations to secure which the municipality pledges existing property or revenue from existing sources to be derived in the future. It applies to debts incurred by proprietary functionings as well as to expenses of governmental functions.²⁰

pose is expressly excepted from the limitation, or is made subject to a different limitation, a limitation of the amount of municipal indebtedness applies to all municipal indebtedness voluntarily created regardless of its form²² or purpose.²³ It has been held, however, that a constitutional provision, prohibiting municipalities whose debt has reached the limit from contracting any further liability, will not prevent a municipality whose indebtedness is up to the constitutional limit from contracting for the services of an agent or attorney to contest the validity of any part of the indebtedness, or to secure a reduction of the amount thereof.²⁴

Contingent liabilities. An obligation imposing on the municipality merely contingent future liability does not create an indebtedness before the happening of the contingency,²⁵ at least where the arising of the contingency is solely within the control of the municipality and can occur only by its subsequent choice voluntarily made;²⁶ but it has been held otherwise where the contingency is morally certain to take place irrespective of any action taken or option exercised by the municipality in the future,²⁷ and it has been held that a debt payable on a contingency, as on the happening of some event, such as the rendering of service or the delivery of property, is some kind of a debt, and, therefore, within the prohibition.²⁸ A contract, lease,

Involuntary obligations or liabilities. While it has been held that the fact that the debt of a municipal corporation is involuntary rather than voluntary does not of itself remove the constitutional limitation on the power of the municipality to become indebted beyond a certain amount,³⁰ as a general rule, limitations of the amount of municipal indebtedness apply only to debts created by voluntary act or contract³¹ and not to obligations imposed on the corporation by law³² or against its will,³³ or to liabilities for what is done without right,³⁴ or what is done negligently,³⁵ or to obligations arising ex delicto;³⁶ but, if the law will not imply a promise

Firemen's salaries

Where city fixed the number of firemen necessary in its discretion, the obligation to pay an amount equivalent to their combined salary fixed by law was a "voluntary obligation" and not a "preferred claim" absolutely fixed by law within the rule that all voluntary obligations incurred after the exhaustion of the full amount of revenues on hand or in valid expectancy are "debts" which are invalid as to their payment by a city which has incurred debts in an amount equal to the limit fixed by the constitution, and any deficit on salaries which is carried over into the next year becomes a "debt" within the contemplation of the constitutional limitation if thereby the total indebtedness of the city is exceeded and is invalid.—*State ex rel. Obligation of municipality to pay sales tax on sales of electric energy from municipal light plant to consumers residing within corporate limits of city, being a liability imposed by statute, is not a contractual obligation within debt-limiting provision of constitution.—City of Claremore v. Oklahoma Tax Commission, 169 P.2d 299, 197 Okl. 223.

In Illinois

(1) It has been said that the constitutional provision imposing debt limitations on municipalities applies even to obligations imposed by law.—Hancock v. Village of Hazel Crest, 47 N.E.2d 557, 318 Ill.App. 170.

(2) But it has been held that the right of the holder of special assessment bonds to bring an action in assumpsit against city for money had and received is based, not on consent of the parties, but on a fiction which the law supplies, and is not the kind or character of assent on part of the city that is covered by constitutional provision prohibiting municipality from incurring excessive indebtedness.—Indiana Harbor Belt R. Co. v. Calumet City, 63 N.E.2d 369, 391 Ill. 280.

(3) Where civil engineer rendered services in connection with proposed construction of a new sewerage system, and thereafter voters at election held voted against the improvement, municipality's liability for engineer's services constituted a debt within constitutional debt limitations as against contention that liability was imposed by quasi contract.—Hancock v. Village of Hazel Crest, supra.

Breach of duty

(1) The constitutional provision limiting indebtedness which city may incur does not apply to indebtedness based on city officials' breach of duty in making proper application of proceeds of special assessments collected, and bonds issued by city in payment of judgments based on such breach of duty were valid, although debt limitation was exceeded.—Indiana Harbor Belt R. Co. v. Calumet City, 63 N.E.2d 369, 391 Ill. 280.

to refund money because as a promise it would be a prohibited debt, it will not under the same circumstances and for the same reason fix a so-called involuntary duty to refund the money as damages for the tort committed in its conversion.³⁷ The quasi-contractual theory of recovery for the value of benefits received and accepted cannot be applied so as to permit municipalities to be plunged into debt by officials acting in utter disregard of the constitution.³⁸

§ 1851. — Current Expenses

According to some authorities limitations on the amount of municipal indebtedness are not violated by incurring indebtedness for current expenses at least where such indebtedness is payable from current revenues; and some authorities take the view that a municipal corporation having an aggregate indebtedness exceeding the limitation imposed by law is powerless to create an additional debt for current expenses, but hold that no such debt is created where there are sufficient funds available to pay such expenses.

According to some authorities limitations of the amount of municipal indebtedness are not violated by incurring indebtedness for ordinary current expenses,³⁹ at least where such indebtedness can be paid from current revenues,⁴⁰ that is, money in the treasury,⁴¹ taxes levied but not collected,⁴² and, in some jurisdictions, taxes which can be lawfully levied during the current year,⁴³ even though such

(2) Judgment rendered against city for breach of duty in collection of improvement warrant assessments was held not to create a debt within constitutional provision.—G. W. Jones Lumber Co. v. City of Mar-marth, 272 N.W. 190, 67 N.D. 309.

(3) If court should assume that city officers would negligently fail to perform their duties with respect to issuance of revenue bonds for acquisition to toll bridge, such failure would not create a debt within constitutional provision limiting municipal indebtedness, since at most such neglect of city officers might give rise to action for damages against city.—Mettet v. City of Yankton, S.D., 25 N.W.2d 460.

(4) Where municipality agrees to pay out of a fund to be realized in a certain way, there is an implied obligation to set up the mechanism to provide for payment, and a failure to set up the fund to liquidate its obligation imposes a general liability sounding in tort against municipality irrespective of constitutional inhibitions.

Or.—Morris v. City of Salem, 174 P. 2d 192, 179 Or. 666.

(5) Where city, in order to avoid constitutional limitation on indebtedness in construction of municipal building, entered into arrangement whereby private corporation borrowed funds from Reconstruction Finance Corporation and thereafter on completion of building conveyed it to the city, subject to mortgage, and neither private corporation, nor city complied with provision of federal statute requiring a method of self-liquidating the loan to be set up, city could be held generally liable for full amount of mortgage debt, although it exceeded its constitutional debt limitations, on special fund analogy.—*Reconstruction Finance Corp. v. Quasi contract

(1) A municipality may undertake to pay out of current revenues for equipment or supplies to be used or services to be rendered notwithstanding constitutional limitation has been exceeded, since no debt is added thereby to the sum total of municipal indebtedness, and a quasi contract may be imposed on a municipality to pay for fair rental value of equipment furnished to, and used by, it under similar circumstances.—American La France Fire Engine Co., to Use of American La France & Foamite Industries v. Borough of Shenandoah, C.C.A.Pa., 115 F.2d 866.

(2) So, where written contract under which municipality used fire trucks was invalid because its execution was not properly authorized by ordinance, but there was no showing that there had been any conscious attempt to evade municipal debt limitations, and fair rental value for trucks sought to be recovered was well within the reasonably anticipated ability of the municipality to pay out of current revenues, the fair rental value of trucks could be recovered.—*American La France Fire Engine Co., to Use of American La France & Foamite Industries, v. Special taxes

When a contract made by a municipal corporation pertains to its ordinary expenses and is, together with other like expenses, within the limits of its current revenues and expenses are not actually paid out of current revenues and some portion of them is carried over into succeeding years;⁴⁴ but it has been held that an obligation for a current expense to be paid out of current revenues will be a debt or liability within the debt limitations if there are no current revenues available for its payment at the time the current expense is incurred.⁴⁵ A municipality already overburdened may not, by contract, increase annual expenses beyond annual revenue.⁴⁶

According to some authorities, a municipal corporation having an aggregate indebtedness exceeding the limitation imposed by law is powerless to create any additional debt even for its ordinary current expenses;⁴⁷ but it has been held that, if the municipality has in its treasury or at its immediate command by the collection of taxes levied or presently payable sufficient funds to pay current expenses, then as to such expenses no debt is created within constitutional or statutory limitations,⁴⁸ the rule being that as long as the current expenses of the municipality are kept within the limits of the moneys and assets actually in the treasury, and the current revenues collected or in process of immediate collection, the municipality may be fairly regarded as doing business on a cash basis, and not on credit, even though there may be for a short time some unpaid liabilities.⁴⁹ Furthermore, the levying of a tax is not the incurring of an indebtedness, and, if a municipality is indebted beyond the amount which it may constitutionally contract, it may still levy taxes for the payment of its current expenses.⁵⁰

Obligations necessary to maintain corporate existence. Obligations necessary to maintain corporate existence are not debts within the constitutional limitation.⁵¹ Furthermore there is authority to the effect that in order to authorize the incurring of municipal obligations in excess of the debt limit, it is not enough that they be incurred for municipal purposes, convenient and useful, or broadly intended to promote the public good; the purposes must be such as are strictly essential to the continued existence of the municipality.⁵² The fact that services for which expenditures are made are autho-

such special taxes as it may legally and in good faith intend to levy therefor, such contract does not constitute increases of indebtedness within the meaning of the constitutional provision limiting the power of municipal corporations to contract debts—*American La France Fire Engine Co., to Use of American La France & Foamite Industries, v. § 1852. — Property, Utilities, Improvements, and Works

- a. In general
- b. Rental or installment contracts

a. In General

Indebtedness for public works or improvements or for the purchase or improvement of public utilities is subject to a limitation of the amount of municipal indebtedness, unless authority to transcend the limitation for such purpose is specially granted or payment is to be made out of current revenues or cash in the treasury; and, in the absence of constitutional or statutory authority, a municipal corporation may not avoid debt limitations by purchasing property for public purposes subject to liens.

The question whether a municipal corporation already indebted to the constitutional limit has power to incur a further indebtedness for a local improvement cannot arise before the municipality incurs or proposes to incur a debt for this purpose.⁵⁴ Indebtedness incurred by a municipality for the purchase or construction of a public utility,⁵⁵ or for the subscription to, or purchase of, stock therein,⁵⁶ does not violate a limitation of the amount of indebtedness where the amount for which the municipality becomes obligated, together with its other indebtedness, does not exceed the limitation. Ordinarily excessive indebtedness may not be incurred for the purchase of property on the ground that it is worth more than the price⁵⁷ and will increase the municipal revenue;⁵⁸ but under some constitutions bonds issued for a specific undertaking from which the city or town may derive revenue is not subject to the limitation,⁵⁹ and, as shown infra § 1853, a municipality already indebted to the limit may purchase property where the purchase price is payable exclusively from a special fund to be derived from the income and revenue of the property.

Indebtedness for streets, sewers, or other public works or improvements is subject to a limitation of the amount of municipal indebtedness,⁶⁰ unless authority to transcend the limitation for such purposes is specially granted,⁶¹ or the improvement is to be paid for out of current revenues,⁶² cash in the municipal treasury,⁶³ or, as discussed infra § 1853 a, the proceeds of special assessments. In a suit to determine the validity of improvement bonds, where the controlling question turns on the validity of other obligations held by bondholders not made parties to the suit, as to whom no binding adjudication can be made, no question is presented for consideration.⁶⁴

A constitutional or statutory limitation of the amount of indebtedness applies to indebtedness for

Sewage disposal plant

Construction of sewage disposal plant essential for operation of sewer system of city constitutes construction of sewer within constitution authorizing city to become indebted in specified amount without regard to existing indebtedness for purpose of constructing sewers.—Anderson v. City of Fargo, 250 N.W. 794, 64 N.D. 178.

"Sewerage"

(1) Under constitutional and statutory provisions relating to limit on indebtedness for purpose of construction of a system of "sewerage," the term "sewerage" is usually applied to a system of sewers and "sewage" to the matter carried off, although the terms are frequently used interchangeably.—Anselmi v. City of Rock Springs, 80 P.2d 419, 53 Wyo. 223, 116 A.L.R. 1250.

(2) In the absence of provisions limiting sewers to sanitary sewers, proposed storm ditch to carry off flood waters within municipality was authorized by such provision, and general bonds of municipality could be issued therefor, since the term "sewer" includes a storm sewer as well as a sanitary sewer.—Anselmi v. City of Rock Springs, supra.

Public housing project

If a school is a facility incidental or appurtenant to a public housing project within meaning of constitutional and statutory provisions authorizing additional debt limit of two per cent, it is for city alone to determine whether cost of school should be financed within general ten per cent debt limit or within two per cent additional debt limit, but, if the school is not such a facility, then cost can not be charged against two per cent additional debt limit, and such charge would be an illegality justifying judicial interference.—Diehl v. O'Dwyer, 84 N.Y.S.2d 109, 193 Misc. 1032.

Effect of mortgage or lien. b. Rental or Installment Contracts

Although there is some authority to the contrary, it is generally held that a contract by a municipal corporation to pay for water, lights, etc., at stated times in the future does not, within the meaning of debt limitation provisions, create an indebtedness for the aggregate amount of all the payments; but, where the consideration is received in the present and all at one time, an indebtedness for the full amount of the contract price is created notwithstanding the price is to be paid in installments.

A contract by a municipal corporation to pay for water, lights, sewerage, and the like, at stated times in the future, is generally held not to create an indebtedness within the meaning of a provision limiting the indebtedness of municipalities,⁷⁹ or, if it does create an indebtedness, it is one only for the amount of the payment or payments due the first year,⁸⁰ and not for the aggregate amount of all the payments.⁸¹ Each installment becomes a debt as it falls due.⁸² In a few jurisdictions, however, such a contract is, within the meaning of limitations of the amount of indebtedness, deemed to create a debt⁸³

for the aggregate amount of the payments,⁸⁴ but the rule has been held not to apply where the city is not obligated, under the contract, to continue to take and pay, but may at any time, without violating the contract, decline and refuse to do so.⁸⁵

A contract for the purchase or construction of a public utility plant or for the purchase of other property, the consideration being received in the present and all at one time, creates an indebtedness for the full amount of the contract price, notwithstanding the price is to be paid in installments during a series of years⁸⁶ or an attempt is made to avoid a debt limitation by contracting in form to pay rental.⁸⁷

poration has exceeded its debt limit does not prevent it from contracting a debt payable expressly out of a special fund,⁸⁸ but the rule is subject to some qualifications and exceptions.⁸⁹

Indebtedness payable out of fund raised by taxation. Some authorities have held that any obligation paid or contracted to be paid out of a fund which is the product of a tax levy is a debt within the purpose of the constitutional limitation;⁹⁰ and, under this view a municipality which has reached the constitutional limit of indebtedness cannot create a debt to be paid directly or indirectly, in whole or in part, from funds raised by taxation, or from a fund which must be replenished by funds raised by taxation.⁹¹ An indebtedness or liability is incurred when by the terms of the transaction a municipality is obligated directly or indirectly to feed the special fund from general or other revenues in addition to those arising solely from the specific improvement contemplated.⁹²

Pledging faith, credit, and taxing power

It has been said that bonds issued by political subdivisions of state which are payable out of special funds do not create debts of the political subdivisions, within constitutional limitations or indebtedness of the subdivisions, although the full faith, credit, and taxing powers of the subdivisions are pledged for payment of such bonds.—Clarke v. South Carolina Public Service Authority, 181 S.E. 481, 177 S.C. 427.

Municipal improvement district bonds do not constitute a debt of the municipality in the constitutional sense of the word, or an obligation which is payable from the general funds of the municipality, although bonds issued in name of the municipality to be paid only from the special fund created by the enabling act, and so limited on the face of the obligation, are the bonds of the municipality.—Montgomery v. Payment for water or electricity

(1) City's obligation to pay hydrant rental, which, with rates to be paid by private consumers, provides fund for payment of principal and interest on revenue bonds issued by city for construction of waterworks, would create an indebtedness obnoxious to constitution if in excess of limitations thereof.—State ex rel. City of Blue Springs v. McWilliams, 74 S.W.2d 363, 335 Mo. 816.

(2) So contract for purchase of equipment for municipal electric plant, payable in installments from net revenues of plant, was held to create indebtedness prohibited by constitution, where city was to pay at regular rate for power used by city for public purposes and debt limitation was exceeded.—Hagler v. City of Salem, 62 S.W.2d 751, 333 Mo. 330—Hight v. City of Harrisonville, 41 S.W.2d 155, 328 Mo. 549.

Indebtedness payable out of proceeds of special assessment. A municipal corporation may, without increasing its indebtedness within the meaning of constitutional and statutory limitations, contract an indebtedness payable out of the proceeds of a special assessment,⁹³ provided, at the time of the making of the contract, no liability on the part of the municipality, other than to pay over the assessment when collected, is created.⁹⁴

Assessment against municipality. Where an assessment to pay for an improvement is made against the municipality for benefits received, the question whether its liability for the amount of such assessment comes within a constitutional debt limitation depends on whether the assessment is to be paid by general taxation, including taxation of personal property, or whether the assessment is made only on abutting real property owned by the municipality, the limitation being applicable in the former case⁹⁵ but not in the latter.⁹⁶ Although a special assessment levied against a city within an improvement district for special benefits accruing to the city has been held a debt within the constitutional limitation,⁹⁷ it has also been held that, where an assessment for an improvement involving a territory much wider than the city itself is imposed by a district corporate entity, a state agency, under legislative authority, and is required to be paid by uniform tax on all taxable property in the municipality, such assessment does not create an indebtedness.⁹⁸

Loss accruing where special fund insufficient. A municipality has been held to incur an indebtedness

(3) However, a stipulation, that, if city should, from time to time, voluntarily elect to take electric energy from hydroelectric system for its own use, it would pay to special account an amount equal to the cost of furnishing the energy so taken, in no event to exceed a fair and reasonable amount, was held not a covenant importing liability to taxation available to bondholders, so as to invalidate revenue bonds as a general indebtedness of city, but was rather an assurance on part of city to pay for such energy as a necessary municipal expense out of current revenues.—McGuinn v. City of High Point, 8 S.E.2d 462, 217 N.C. 449, 128 A.L.R. 608.

Loans from revolving fund

The possibility that part of bonds issued by special improvement district may have to be paid with moneys obtained from revolving fund, which in turn is created by tax levy on property of the city, does not mean that the bonds create a city debt within constitutional provision fixing debt limitation, since plan is merely an arrangement whereby the city, through the revolving fund, lends money to the district.—Hansen v. City of Havre, 114 P.2d 1053, 112 Mont. 207, 135 A.L.R. 1278.

Substitution of general obligations of city for improvement warrants

Where city proposes to issue new improvement warrants under provisions of statute, and special improvement warrants have been legally issued and are in default, city council may issue refunding special improvement warrants, but, where city has already exceeded its debt limit, city council cannot make such refunding warrants general obligations of city, and city council will be restrained from doing so.—Schieber v. City of Mohall, 268 N.W. 445, 66 N.D. 593.

b. Revenues of Municipally-Owned Property

- (1) In general
- (2) Improvements to, or extensions of, existing property or system

(1) In General

As a general rule, restrictions on municipal indebtedness are not applicable to obligations payable only out of a fund derived from the revenue of specific revenue-producing properties constructed or purchased by the municipal corporation; but, where a lien is imposed on property already owned by the municipality, or on property other than that purchased, an indebtedness is incurred within debt limitation provisions.

Although there is some authority to the contrary,¹ it is the general rule that restrictions on municipal indebtedness are not applicable to obligations which are payable only out of a fund derived from the income and revenue of specific revenue-producing properties constructed or purchased by the municipal corporation,² such as public housing projects³ or light or waterworks plants or other public utilities,⁴ particularly where no part of the system has

1. Okl.—Zachary v. City of Wagoner, 292 P. 345, 146 Okl. 268.

Reason for rule

The rule followed in some jurisdictions that the purchase of property does not create an indebtedness if the purchase price is to be paid out of the income therefrom is but another attempt to nullify and evade the wholesome constitutional limitations on the power of municipalities to create indebtedness and to usurp powers never intended to be granted to municipal officers.—Zachary v. City of Wagoner, supra.

Utah.—Barnes v. Lehi City, 279 P. 878, 74 Utah 321.

Reason for rule

The special fund doctrine is based on theory that an obligation incurred in acquisition, construction, or extension of income-bearing property, and payable solely from income of that property, is not a debt of the municipality.—People ex rel. City of Chicago v. Barrett, 26 N.E.2d 478, 373 Ill. 393.

Specific constitutional authorization

Legality of contractual provisions which made bonds which city undertook to issue payable out of revenues from passenger terminal could not be questioned where such provisions were specifically authorized by constitutional amendment permitting city to construct and operate passenger stations.—Hotard v. City of New Orleans, 35 So.2d 752, 213 La. 843, appeal dismissed 69 S.Ct. 67, 335 U.S. 803, 93 L.Ed. —.

Statute construed

The statute providing for slum clearance and low-cost housing with provision for financing by means of self-liquidating revenue bonds could not be construed as authorizing a violation by the city of debt limit imposed by legislature on home-rule cities.—In re Brewster Street Housing Site in City of Detroit, 289 N.W. 493, 291 Mich. 313.

Obligations of housing authority

Statutes creating authorities for purpose of eliminating and rehabilitating blighted sections of municipalities, and specifically providing that bonds or any other obligations of an authority created under the law which are payable from its revenues generally, shall not be debts or liabilities of any municipality, are not violative of constitutional provisions relating to debt limits for counties, cities, and other municipalities and incorporated districts.—Belovsky v. 44 C.J. p 1181 note 62.

Contract whereby city agreed to purchase water from another city was held not violative of constitutional limitation on theory that water rentals due under contract would be charge against general revenues, since rentals were to be paid from revenue derived from distribution of water.—McGehee v. Williams, 87 S. W.2d 46, 191 Ark. 643.

Cost partly derived from general funds

Proposed municipal revenue bonds to be issued in obtaining a portion of funds needed for construction of municipal water system did not create a debt in excess of statutory limitations, notwithstanding part of cost of project was to be derived from general fund of city and part from sale of general obligation bonds.—Ritchie v. Council of City of Harrisville, 289 N.W. 197, 291 Mich. 415.

Voluntary contributions from general funds

A city may voluntarily, but not as a matter of obligation, make contributions from general revenue sources to liquidate revenue bonds payable solely from income arising from operation of enterprise built or purchased from proceeds of such bonds, and such contributions do not invalidate the issue of such bonds because of constitutional debt limitations, where they are made from existing or presently available revenues.—State ex rel. Public Institutional Bldg. Authority v. Griffith, 22 N.E.2d 200, 135 Ohio St. 604.

County revenue bonds

Where expense for constructing proposed sewage disposal system for district in county would be paid by grant from federal government and by issuance of county revenue bonds, bond issue was not an obligation of political subdivisions of the district within debt limitation provisions of statute and constitution.—Drain Com'r of Oakland County v. City of Royal Oak, 10 N.W.2d 435, 306 Mich. 124.

Test whether city contract for purchase of machinery is within constitutional limitation of indebtedness is whether price is to be paid wholly out of earnings of improvement or otherwise.—Bell v. City of Fayette, 28 S.W.2d 356, 325 Mo. 75.

Provision affording notice of bondholders' rights

Provision, in revenue bonds issued by municipality for purpose of financing construction of hydroelectric system, that bonds should be payable solely out of revenues of the system would put bondholders on notice that they had no right to compel levy of any tax to enforce payment of principal or interest, as respects whether bonds were invalid as a general indebtedness of city.—McGuinn v. City of High Point, 8 S.E.2d 462, 217 N.C. 449, 128 A.L.R. 608.

Source of supply

Stipulation that city would not purchase, for resale through its presently owned electric distribution system, electric energy from any source other than proposed municipal hydroelectric system when and as long as energy from system was available, to be paid for solely out of the gross revenues of the presently owned electric distribution system and to be considered merely as an expense of operating such system, was in harmony with special-fund doctrine, as respects whether bonds were invalid as a general indebtedness of the city.—McGuinn v. City of High Point, supra.

Indebtedness payable from revenue of improved or extended system see infra subdivision b (2) (b) of this section.

Completion of unfinished system

(1) Where proposed improvements will be, in effect, the completion of an unfinished system left incomplete through error or miscalculation or will, in effect, create a new system, a proposed issue of bonds has been held not invalid as causing a city to exceed its constitutional debt limit.—Fuller v. City of Cullman, 27 So. 2d 203, 248 Ala. 236.

(2) Thus where sewage disposal system of city was inadequate as originally constructed, system would not produce further revenue if it remained unfinished, outstanding bondholders agreed to purchase proposed additional bonds for completion of the system, to be issued on a parity with outstanding bonds, and no revenue of city other than that derived from operation of the system would be pledged to payment of the additional bonds, the proposed bond issue would not create an indebtedness of city affected by constitutional debt limitations.—Fuller v. City of Cullman, 199 So. 2, 240 Ala. 309.

though the municipality is obligated to fix and maintain rates sufficient to pay the principal and interest,⁶ especially where it is stipulated that the breach thereof shall never constitute an indebtedness.⁷

Effect of mortgage or lien. Where, in order to secure payment of an obligation payable from the revenue of income-producing property, a mortgage or lien is imposed on property already owned by a municipality, or on property other than that purchased, an indebtedness is incurred within the limitations on indebtedness,⁸ even though the mortgage itself cannot be foreclosed⁹ and although the city does not otherwise obligate itself to pay;¹⁰ but the mortgaging of property purchased to the party from whom it is purchased is not a violation of the debt limitation provisions.¹¹

Covenant to maintain existing rates

Rule held inapplicable

(1) Inclusion of land purchased, in pursuance of obligation imposed by waterworks contract, by village as situs for waterworks as property incumbered by trust deed securing mortgage certificates given in payment for waterworks was held not to make entire purchase price additional municipal indebtedness so as to exceed constitutional limit, where trust deed and certificates provided that no municipal liability was thereby created, since land when acquired became a part of the property and plant which village agreed to buy.—Morris v. Ellis, 266 N.W. 921, 221 Wis. 307.

(2) Addition of new well to village water system was held not to constitute increase of municipal indebtedness so as to increase indebtedness beyond debt limit, where trust deed on system securing mortgage certificates given in payment therefor provided that it should constitute lien on additions, and that no municipal liability was thereby created.—Morris v. Ellis, supra.

(b) Indebtedness payable from revenues of entire system

(a) Indebtedness Payable Exclusively from Revenues of Addition or Improvement

According to some authorities, where improvements to, or extensions of, an existing system measurably increase the revenues of the system, the making of a contract will be upheld where the increased revenue or savings alone are pledged to the payment of the price.

There are decisions which hold that, where improvements to, or extensions of, an existing system increase the revenues of the system and such increase can be segregated and measured, the making of a contract or purchase will be upheld where the increased revenues or savings alone are pledged to the payment of the purchase price,¹² and that a breach of such a contract which might

If the property once owned by the city may be thereby taken out of its control and operation, and put in the control of a receiver for the bondholders and the income from its operation may be taken away from the city, such authority has the effect of creating a debt, even though no foreclosure is authorized. Thereby the effects theretofore owned by the city became subject to be taken from it and devoted to the payment of the claim. This creates a debt, although its payment is thus limited.—In re Opinion of the Justices, supra.

Deduction for depreciation

(1) Provision, in contract for purchase of equipment for municipally-owned electric utility to be paid for solely out of saving in cost of production of electricity, that cost of production should include operation, maintenance, and upkeep of plant, equipment, and building, was provision for deduction of depreciation, create a liability is not a debt created by the contract within the constitutional limitation;¹³ and there is authority holding that the sale of bonds to acquire and improve certain property secured by mortgage on such property only and payable out of the income to be derived from such property does not create a debt within the constitutional limitation.¹⁴

(b) Indebtedness Payable from Revenues of Entire System

The authorities are in conflict on the question whether an indebtedness is created, within the meaning of constitutional or statutory limitations, where a municipal corporation improves or extends an existing public project or utility plant and pledges or sets aside the revenue of both the existing plant and the additions or improvements for the payment of the cost of the improvement or extension.

Where a municipal corporation improves or extends an existing public project or utility plant and pledges or sets aside the revenue both of the existing plant and of the additions or improvements for the payment of the cost of the improvement or extension, the authorities are in conflict on the question whether an indebtedness is thereby created within the meaning of constitutional or statutory limitations on municipal indebtedness. There is authority holding that such a transaction does not create a debt or liability;¹⁵ but the rule that net revenues from the plant can be pledged for the construction of, or improvements to, the plant does not authorize the creation of debts independent of, and not merely incidental to, the main transaction.¹⁶ On the other hand, there is authority holding that, where the purchase price of property sold to the city is not to come solely from the earnings of such property, an obligation to pay income from property other than that purchased is not different from an obligation to pay with any which is an operating cost or expense, and hence, contract did not cast incidental tax burden on city, so as to be void under constitutional provision limiting municipal indebtedness payable out of tax revenues.—Fairbanks, Morse & Co. v. City of Wagoner, C.C.A.Okla., 81 F.2d 209, modified on other grounds 86 F.2d 288.

(2) Where equipment purchased for municipally-owned utility was to be paid for solely from savings in cost of production of electricity, reasonable reserve for depreciation should be deducted in computing savings.—Fairbanks, Morse & Co. v. City of Wagoner, Okla., supra.

Voluntary application of income of existing facilities

Where provision of municipal light plant ordinance regarding mortgaging of property specifically excluded existing utility property or income therefrom, and city was not obligated to apply income from existing facilities to payment of utility certificates secured by mortgage, city's voluntary application of such income to payment of certificates would not create debt within constitutional limitation.—*Hairgrove v. Reason for rule

In effect the sale of bonds, purchase of property, and execution of mortgage were simultaneous. Under the statute authorizing the transaction, the city has not and will not contribute property or expend money in aid of the improvement. The sale of the bonds, purchase of the lands, and execution of the mortgage lodged in the city no beneficial interest in the properties covered by the mortgage. The city holds only the legal title to the properties, conditioned on acquiring, if ever, the beneficial interest by payment of the bonds from income derived from the properties. It follows that the city could lose no property by a foreclosure of the mortgage. In this connection it may be argued that a debt is inherent in the nature of the mortgage, but even so, it may not be a debt within the meaning of the constitution.—*State ex rel. Insurance coverage

(1) A municipality did not incur a debt by covenanting to carry insurance on municipally-owned waterworks, the premiums for which were presumably payable out of revenue of the waterworks and which provided for protection of holders of warrants issued to pay for addition to and improvement of system, since such covenant was for the performance of an act.—Struble v. Nelson, 15 N.W.2d 101, 217 Minn. 610.

other funds,¹⁷ and accordingly it has been held that, where a contract for machinery for a municipally-owned public utility contemplates payment from the earnings of the entire plant, such a contract creates a debt within the constitutional limitation,¹⁸ and this rule has been held to apply where a municipality having an existing public project or utility plant issues bonds for constructing extensions and improvements thereto and pledges revenues from the entire system for payment.¹⁹ The status which creates a city debt by pledging revenue from its property then owned contemplates such revenue as the city would own free of restraint but for the pledge of it,²⁰ and, where income from property is held by a city in trust for a specific purpose and the income cannot be used for any other purpose, enlargement of that purpose and pledge of such income to that end are a use within the contemplation of the trust, and do not create a debt within the constitutional limitation.²¹

§ 1854. — Transactions Involving Existing Debts or Funds

A constitutional or statutory limitation on municipal indebtedness neither authorizes repudiation nor affects the making of terms for the payment of existing legal liabilities; and, accordingly, a municipal corporation does not incur a new debt or increase its indebtedness within the meaning of the limitation when it compromises, funds, or extends an existing debt, or issues duplicate bonds in lieu of bonds which have been lost, destroyed, or mutilated.

A constitutional or statutory limitation on municipal indebtedness neither authorizes repudiation nor affects the making of terms for the payment of existing legal liabilities.²² A municipal corporation does not incur a new debt or increase its indebtedness, within the meaning of constitutional or statutory limitations, when it expends accrued funds;²³ draws a check on funds in the treasury²⁴ or a warrant on such funds;²⁵ enters into a contract or incurs an obligation which is to be, and can lawfully be, satisfied out of money on hand;²⁶ compromises a debt;²⁷ issues duplicate bonds in lieu of bonds which have been lost, destroyed, or so mutilated as to be unfit for circulation;²⁸ or uses a trust fund for which it is already liable.²⁹ A judgment against a city does not create a debt within the constitutional limitation; it is evidence and an adjudication of an indebtedness already created.³⁰

or extends³² an existing indebtedness, as by issuing funding bonds.³³ This rule is universally followed where a municipality issues new securities and exchanges them directly for old ones, or in the payment of a valid existing indebtedness, since the new securities as soon as issued extinguish the old debt, and, therefore, the aggregate outstanding indebtedness is the same at all times;³⁴ and the rule is generally followed even where the scheme is for the issuance of new securities in the market and the proceeds thereof are to be used to pay outstanding indebtedness at a later date;³⁵ but there is authority holding that in the latter case the issue and sale of the new securities increase the indebtedness of the municipality within the constitutional prohibition against incurring indebtedness beyond a specified amount.³⁶ Under constitutional provisions prescribing one limit for

(2) Where local improvements were completed and accepted by city which obtained credit for the public benefits, confirmation judgments assessing public benefits in the proceeding were debts within the constitutional debt limitation, and substitution of bonds for payment of the judgments in a subsequent year did not create a new debt, and, hence, the constitutional debt limitation was not exceeded in subsequent year by including the judgments in bond issue for that year.—People ex rel. Reason for rule

It is evident that, if new bonds are issued without a cancellation or surrender of the old ones, the aggregate debt outstanding, and on which the corporation is liable to be sued, is at once and necessarily increased, and, if new bonds equal in amount to the old ones are so issued at one debts authorized by the council and a different limit for debts authorized by the electorate, a bond issue authorized by the council to refund bonds authorized by the electorate is properly classified as a debt authorized by the electorate.³⁷ The debt limit cannot be extended by the process of bond refunding unless the limit is extended by competent lawmaking authority.³⁸

§ 1855. — Anticipation of Current Revenues

An overburdened municipal corporation may enter into a contract, make an appropriation, or draw a warrant in anticipation of its revenues for the current year; and an indebtedness valid when incurred will not be invalidated by subsequent acts or events; but municipalities should not be permitted to anticipate their revenue to such an extent as to impair the force or nullify the spirit of constitutional or statutory debt limitations.

A contract may be entered into, appropriation made, or a warrant drawn by an overburdened municipal corporation in anticipation of its revenues for the current year,³⁹ such as taxes already levied and to be collected subsequently,⁴⁰ and according to some,⁴¹ although not other,⁴² authorities, taxes which may thereafter be lawfully levied during the current year. An indebtedness incurred in anticipation of current revenues, which was valid when incurred, will not be rendered invalid by the mere fact that it was in excess of the amount actually collected;⁴³ nor will it be invalidated by the subsequent acts of the municipality,⁴⁴ or by its failure to meet this and other obligations when they matured,⁴⁵ or because the municipal officers failed to pay it out of the proper tax money when collected;⁴⁶ and it has been held that judgment may be entered on such contract in the absence of allegation and proof that taxes available for payment had been collected from the levy of the year in which it was made.⁴⁷ However, municipal corporations should not be permitted to anticipate their revenue to such an extent as to impair the force or nullify the spirit of constitutional or statutory provisions limiting indebtedness;⁴⁸ and it has been time, is doubled; and it will remain at the increased amount until the proceeds of the new bonds are applied to the payment of the old ones, or until some of the obligations are otherwise discharged.—District Township of Doon, Lyon County, Iowa v. 4. EXERCISE OF POWER

There must be a substantial compliance with constitutional, statutory, and charter provisions as to the mode of exercising a municipal power to incur indebtedness or make expenditures. Apart from statute, such power is to be exercised by the governing body of the municipal corporation.

The power of a municipal corporation to incur indebtedness or to make expenditures is to be exercised by its governing body⁵¹ rather than by other boards, officers, or committees,⁵² unless authority is conferred on the latter by statute⁵³ or authorized action of the municipal council.⁵⁴ Constitutional,⁵⁵ statutory,⁵⁶ and charter⁵⁷ provisions as to the mode of exercising the power to incur indebtedness or to make expenditures are mandatory, and a substantial departure therefrom invalidates the corporate action;⁵⁸ statutory provisions with reference to the incurring of public indebtedness by a municipality must be strictly construed if proceedings are instituted before the City council of city of the first class had implied power to purchase overcoats for firemen—Calmenon Clothing Co. v. Kruger, 281 N.W. 203, 66 S.D. 224.

Appropriation for volunteer fire companies

Under statute authorizing annual appropriation of money to be paid to volunteer fire companies, the power to appropriate could be exercised only through mayor and city council, and only they could prescribe permitted statutory condition to grant, and the council could not delegate any part of such power to its fire committee, although it could provide that disbursement should be under supervision of such committee, such supervision being required to be essentially administrative and not of a policy-making nature; and neither the committee alone nor mayor and committee together had power to make any agreement with fire companies, concerning distribution of money, that would be binding on council.—Greenwood Volunteer Fire Co. v. Dearden, 12 A.2d 408, 64 R.I. 868.

Liabilities resting on city in invitum, such as state and county taxes and judgments of courts, do not fall within act providing that city departments shall not incur liability except with approval of board of finance.—Broadhurst v. City of Fall River, 179 N.E. 586, 278 Mass. 167.

Approval of state board; routine business

(1) The statute creating the state bond and tax board and declaring void any contract incurred by any of named political subdivisions, including municipalities, without consent and approval of the board, was not intended to affect obligations incurred by a public body in the conduct of its routine business.—Smith v. Town of Vinton, 25 So.2d 237, 209 La. 587.

(2) Application of such statute is not restricted to political subdivisions specifically granted power to levy taxes under state constitution and laws.—National Bank of Commerce in New Orleans v. Board of Supervisors of La. State University and Agricultural and Mechanical College, 20 So.2d 264, 206 La. 913.

indebtedness has actually been incurred,⁵⁹ and when it is proposed by ordinance to create an indebtedness against the city for which the property of every citizen will be liable, and at least part of which must be paid by future generations, there should be a strict compliance with every preliminary prerequisite.⁶⁰ Where no method or procedure for the disbursement of funds is prescribed, a municipal council is free to adopt any usual, reasonable, and adaptable means.⁶¹

An ordinance is necessary when expressly required,⁶² but not when not required by any law;⁶³ and the approval of a public service commission has been held not required for the purchase of a city hall with utilities surpluses and the crediting of utilities with part payment of a debt to the city.⁶⁴ The mayor may be given power by charter to veto all orders, resolutions, or ordinances of the council for the expenditure of money.⁶⁵

A municipal indebtedness may be created by contract at the time the contract is made or may be created, or undertaken to be created, at a later date pursuant to contract.⁶⁶ A contract between a municipality and a housing authority obligating the former to eliminate unsafe and unsanitary dwelling units, to open and close streets, and to supply other municipal services, but providing that none of its provisions shall be construed as obligating the municipality to levy taxes or as creating a financial obligation on its part, has been held not to necessitate the creation of a debt against the municipality.⁶⁷

see that the transaction be done and recorded as required by law.⁶⁹

Delegation of authority. Under a statutory provision vesting in the mayor and council the care, management, and control of municipal finances, a council is not authorized to delegate, by resolution, to the mayor or other members of the council authority to incur financial obligations for the municipality by contract not approved or ratified by the council.⁷⁰ An ordinance empowering the board of trustees of a municipal employees' retirement system to determine the amount of the municipality's contribution to a reserve fund without fixing any standards to guide the board except by provisions that it shall adopt mortality and other tables deemed necessary and compute such amount on the basis of actuarial valuation of the system's assets and liabilities under such tables, has been held invalid as delegating the power to make appropriations to an administrative board, contrary to statute;⁷¹ but a contract under which money is to be deposited with trustees, to be paid out by them to persons entitled thereto, has been held not invalid as an unlawful delegation of the right to disburse public funds, where no discretionary power is conferred.⁷²

Emergency. Where a municipal charter provides that an ordinance may be declared an emergency measure on certain grounds, in which case the period required by charter for an ordinance to go into effect may be remitted, it is competent to raise, in an injunction suit, the question whether an emergency exists as to an ordinance appropriating money for the payment of special counsel but containing no declaration as to what the emergency

Constitutional provision held inapplicable

As used in constitutional provision that no town shall contract any "debt by loan in any form" except by means of an ordinance, quoted phrase does not include indebtedness incurred by town for expenses, as evidenced by warrants, or case where supplies are provided or services rendered to municipality without receiving payment at time.—Georgetown Bank of Idaho Springs, 64 P.2d 132, 99 Colo. 519.

Statute held inapplicable

Under statute forbidding cities to contract any "pecuniary liability" except by ordinance, the prohibition did not extend to a debt for gas lighting of streets, which was for the city's current expenses, and payable out of the current revenues of the several years in which it was contracted.—Laycock v. consists of, and no showing of the grounds named by the charter as constituting an emergency.⁷³

Statement of indebtedness; showing of validity of debt. A municipal corporation may be required to file a statement of indebtedness before it can incur additional obligations.⁷⁴ An ordinance providing for the funding of the floating indebtedness of a municipality has been held not invalid because of its failure to set forth facts showing the validity of the debt.⁷⁵

Waiver of autonomy. Municipalities within a waterworks district, by joining in an authorization to incur debt for constructing and maintaining a waterworks system for the district as created, surrender or waive any independent autonomy they may possess with reference to the subject matter at issue.⁷⁶

§ 1857. Petition by Property Owners

A statutory requirement of a petition of citizens or property owners as evidence of assent to the incurring of municipal indebtedness is mandatory.

A statutory requirement of a petition of a majority of citizens or property owners, as evidence of taxpayers' assent to the incurring of municipal indebtedness, does not confer power, but is a condition precedent to the exercise of power conferred by statute.⁷⁷ Such a provision is mandatory,⁷⁸ and compliance therewith is essential to the validity of the corporate act creating a debt;⁷⁹ but such a petition is not a condition precedent to a valid contract for lighting the streets for a number of years,⁸⁰ since such a contract does not create a debt or liability;⁸¹ and it has been held that such a requirement covers only current indebtedness and such matters as ordinarily arise from year to year in the administration of municipal affairs,⁸² and does not apply to a debt incurred for an indispensable matter.⁸³ The petition is not annulled by an election not required by law.⁸⁴ The representations of municipal officers, who are authorized to borrow money on obtaining the written assent of a certain proportion of taxpayers, that such assent has been obtained do not bind the municipality.⁸⁵

§ 1858. Submission to Popular Vote

Constitutional or statutory provisions requiring the submission to popular vote of the question of municipal expenditure or indebtedness confer no power on municipal corporations to incur debts, but are a limitation on such power; ordinances, by-laws, and contracts in violation of these requirements are void.

While it has been declared that, as a general rule, a municipal corporation may evidence its legal obligations by the issuance of nonnegotiable warrants payable in future years out of taxes levied for the purpose, without first submitting the matter to a vote of the qualified voters of the municipality,⁸⁶ the submission to a popular vote of the question of municipal expenditure or indebtedness in certain cases is frequently required by constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions,⁸⁷ and or-

(2) City did not have constitutional power, without such vote, to guarantee any deficiency in special fund for payment of sewer certificates, to be paid from general revenues of the city.

to an action on quantum meruit or implied contract;⁸⁹ nor may a municipality, in advance of such approval, enter into a contract which will give rise to an indebtedness,⁹⁰ even though the contract is conditioned on such approval.⁹¹ The action of a city council may, however, be validated by an election held subsequent to such action.⁹²

A constitutional provision of this nature confers no powers on municipalities to incur debts;⁹³ it is a limitation on such power⁹⁴ and, as discussed in Constitutional Law § 52, is not self-executing. Such a provision is a restriction imposed on the municipality alone⁹⁵ and not on the legislature;⁹⁶ so, within the limits permitted by the constitution,⁹⁷ a legislature may authorize a municipality to incur a debt with or without an election.⁹⁸

Under a statute requiring a stated number of days' publication for ordinances, within which a petition for referendum may be called for, and exempting ordinances necessary for the support of existing public institutions of the municipality, a desired municipal auditorium for the construction of which the electors have authorized a bond issue is not such an institution.⁹⁹

Pledge or obligation of taxing power. Any scheme, which may involve or be interpreted as constituting a direct, indirect, or contingent pledge or obligation of a municipality's taxing power will bring it within a constitutional inhibition of the creation of an indebtedness without the consent of the freeholders in an election called to determine the question.¹

§ 1859. — Indebtedness or Expenditure Exceeding Prescribed Limit

- a. Per cent of value of taxable property
- b. Income and revenue of year
- c. Other limitations

a. Per Cent of Value of Taxable Property

Constitutional or statutory provisions precluding a municipal corporation from incurring indebtedness exceeding a specified per cent of the value of the taxable property therein, unless authorized by a prescribed portion of the voters, are mandatory.

Under some constitutional or statutory provisions, a municipal corporation is precluded from incurring an indebtedness in excess of a specified per cent of the value of the taxable property therein,

(3) Hence, such certificates, payable from special assessments, were void in so far as they made any deficiency payable, without such election, from general revenues of city, although valid in so far as they were payable from special assessments.—City of Santa Fé v. First Nat. Bank, supra.

(4) The provision of a city charter that the city shall pay bonds of special improvement districts which have paid four fifths of the bonds outstanding is not invalid as providing for the creation of a debt or as issuance of bonds or creation of loan, without required authorization by electors.—Montgomery v. City and County of Denver, 80 P.2d 434, 102 Colo. 427.

unless authorized to do so by a prescribed portion of the voters,² but within that limit it may incur indebtedness without a vote,³ provided, as discussed supra § 1850, its total indebtedness does not exceed the general limit prescribed by law. Also, under at least one statute a village cannot make expenditures exceeding a specified per cent of the value of the taxable property unless authorized to do so by a majority of the voters.⁴

b. Income and Revenue of Year

- (1) In general
- (2) Meaning and application of terms

(1) In General

A provision that a municipal corporation shall not incur any indebtedness or liability in any year in excess of the income and revenue provided for such year, unless authorized by the electors, is to be construed so as to effectuate its purpose, and any liability not incurred in conformity therewith is void. Whether an indebtedness is valid under such provision must be determined as of the date of incurring it.

It is not infrequently provided by constitution, statute, or charter that a municipal corporation shall not incur any indebtedness or liability in any year in excess of the income and revenue provided for such year unless authorized by a vote of a stated proportion of the electors.⁵ Under such a provision the validity of a claim against a municipality depends on whether, at the time the indebtedness was incurred, unappropriated revenues remained to meet such indebtedness,⁶ and a claim is valid if at that time such indebtedness, together with all previous valid indebtedness incurred during that fiscal year, did not exceed the income and revenue of the municipality provided for that year.⁷ Such a provision is mandatory⁸ and should be strictly interpreted⁹ so as to make effective the obvious and salutary purposes sought to be ac-

Such a provision must be read together with another provision relating to limitation on municipal indebtedness.—Payne v. City of Covington, 123 S.W.2d 1045, 276 Ky. 380, 122 A.L.R. 321.

Such constitutional provision does not conflict with constitutional provisions governing amount of ad valorem tax and increased rate for public buildings.—Oklahoma County Exercise Board v. Kurn, 115 P.2d 113, 189 Okl. 203.

Municipal utility district is not within constitutional prohibition against incurring indebtedness to be repaid from revenues of a succeeding year without assent of two thirds of electors; but under statute an ordinary indebtedness of municipal utility district may not be incurred to be paid from resources derived in future years, without approval of electors.—Strain v. No discretion

The provision leaves nothing to the discretion of the legislature, judiciary, or administrative officials but to obey and scrupulously regard complished thereby,¹⁰ although it has also been held that the provision should be liberally construed¹¹ so as to accomplish its wholesome purpose.¹² Any liability sought to be incurred otherwise than in conformity with the constitutional or statutory requirement is void and unenforceable,¹³ despite the

Purpose

(1) The primary purpose of such a constitutional provision is to require the political subdivisions of the state enumerated to do business on a cash basis and to avoid reckless expenditures and improvident bond issues.—Marsing v. Gem Irr. Dist., 48 P.2d 1099, 56 Idaho 29.

(2) The intention and plain purpose of such a provision is to require municipal corporations to carry on their corporate operations on a cash or pay-as-you-go plan or basis.

fact that such a provision may have the effect of compelling a municipality to pay a higher rate of interest on its borrowings than it otherwise might have to pay.¹⁴ Rights under a charter provision are subject to a constitutional provision of this nature.¹⁵

The determination of whether or not an indebtedness that has been incurred is valid must be made as of the date of the incurring thereof,¹⁶ and not as of the time when the claim is presented for payment,¹⁷ or the warrants¹⁸ or bonds¹⁹ evidencing the indebtedness are issued, or as of the date on which the indebtedness is merged into judgment;²⁰ if the indebtedness is valid when incurred, it remains valid²¹ without regard to the form of the evidence thereof²² or any subsequent change in conditions.²³ In the absence of some showing on the subject, it will not be presumed that a violation of the constitutional provision will result.²⁴

If the contract was valid when made, it could not thereafter be invalidated by the municipality by making expenditures for other purposes in excess of its revenue for the year.—City of Winchester v. City's liability for deficiencies arising from failure of special assessment liens to yield enough to satisfy bonds payable out of money collected on special assessments did not exist when bonds were issued, but arose when deficiencies developed after exhaustion of legal remedies to collect full assessments, and where such deficiencies could not reasonably have been anticipated, constitutional debt limitation did not preclude enforcement of liability therefor.—Knepple v. for satisfaction of his claim to the income of the year in which the obligation is contracted,²⁷ and the municipality is precluded, in such case, from paying,²⁸ or contracting to pay,²⁹ the indebtedness out of the income and revenue of future years. However, where indebtedness incurred in a particular year without approval by the electors is limited to the revenue of that year, provision may properly be made for payment after the expiration of the year;³⁰ and where money is available for the payment of an obligation during the fiscal year in which it is incurred, but it is not paid during that year, the creditor is not barred from subsequently recovering³¹ even though such available funds were subsequently expended for other purposes.³² The provision applies without regard to whether the expenditure is on the governmental or the corporate side of municipal powers.³³

Such a provision is not a limitation on the power of a municipality to become indebted in any manner or for any purpose to an amount not exceeding, in any year, the income and revenue provided for that year;³⁴ it is not a limitation on the amount of indebtedness which may exist,³⁵ and is only a limitation on the amount of indebtedness that may be incurred and the manner in which it may be incurred.³⁶

Such a constitutional provision has been held a limitation on the power of the municipality only,³⁷ and not to restrict the power of the legislature in taxation matters;³⁸ but it has also been held that it is binding on the legislature as well as the municipality,³⁹ that it is not a mere restriction on the power of the legislature to enact laws respecting the subject with which it deals,⁴⁰ and that the legislature may no more impose the debt on the city than the city may voluntarily incur it.⁴¹ Such a provision does not apply to a board of commissioners which is an independent legal entity.⁴²

Emergency. The existence of an emergency has been held not to authorize a bond issue without the vote required by the constitution or statute;⁴³ and it has been held that the only emergency which can legalize municipal expenditure exceeding constitutional limitations without such a vote is the performance of a constitutional governmental duty imposed by law.⁴⁴

Public utilities. A constitutional provision permitting incorporated cities and towns, by an election of the voters, to become indebted for the purpose of purchasing, constructing, or repairing public utilities, to be owned exclusively by the municipality, is mandatory⁴⁵ and must be strictly construed.⁴⁶ There is no inconsistency between such a provision and a further provision of the constitution requiring the assent of the voters to an indebtedness exceeding current revenues and also placing a limitation on the amount of indebtedness which may be so incurred.⁴⁷ The provision is a grant of power to the people of municipalities to incur debt in an amount larger than that permitted for debts incurred for other purposes,⁴⁸ and not a limitation on the legislature;⁴⁹ more particularly, it is a grant of power to cities and towns of the state,⁵⁰ and not a limitation on the legislature preventing it from conferring such powers on other municipal corporations,⁵¹ such as water improvement districts.⁵² Such a provision applies without regard to the source from which the funds pledged to the payment of the indebtedness are to be derived⁵³ or to whether the expenditure is on the governmental or the corporate side of municipal powers.⁵⁴

(2) Meaning and Application of Terms

- (a) Income and revenue
- (b) Indebtedness or liability
- (c) Year

(a) Income and Revenue

The term "income and revenue," in a provision limiting the indebtedness which a municipal corporation may incur in any year, without the voters' assent, to the income and revenue of that year, includes taxes and sums from other sources. License fees or taxes collectable during the current year are to be included if the return thereon has become stabilized and dependable, but not fines, or miscellaneous receipts, to be received in the future.

The term "income and revenue," as used in a provision limiting the indebtedness and liability which a municipal corporation may incur in any year, without the assent of the voters, to the income and revenue of that year, includes not only taxes,⁵⁵ but also sums coming into the municipal treasury from sources other than taxation;⁵⁶ and even where the word "taxes" is used it is interpreted as having the same meaning as "revenue."⁵⁷ "Or-

Indebtedness incurred before effective date of opinion

(1) An indebtedness incurred prior to the effective date of the opinion in Payne v. City of Covington, supra, was valid as long as the expenditures did not exceed in any one year the amount of revenue which might have been produced had the city made maximum levy.—Mitchell v. City of Glasgow, 156 S.W.2d 824, 288 Ky. 512.

(2) Payments which city was required to make prior to such effective date on its bonded indebtedness would be excluded from consideration in determining whether floating indebtedness was contracted in violation of the constitution.—Payne v. City of Covington, 123 S.W.2d 1045, 276 Ky. 380.

Taxes actually levied or permissible. In Kentucky, under a constitutional provision fixing maximum tax rates and providing that no municipality shall become indebted to an amount exceeding, in any year, "the income and revenue provided for such year," without the assent of two thirds of the voters thereof, it was formerly held that the quoted phrase did not mean the revenue actually levied, but the revenue which would have been produced from a levy of the maximum amount specified in the provision;⁶⁸ but a later decision, referred to as revolutionary⁶⁹ and declared, by itself, to be prospective only,⁷⁰ expressly overruled the prior decisions on this point,⁷¹ so that the validity of a proposed indebtedness depends on whether an amount equivalent thereto would have been available to the municipality had it realized its anticipated revenue based on the taxes actually levied for the year in which it is proposed to incur the indebtedness.⁷²

(3) Where uncollected taxes for the year in which the opinion became effective, plus additional taxes which city might have levied for the year within limitations prescribed by the constitution, would exceed the floating indebtedness, as much of the floating indebtedness as accrued during such year was not incurred in violation of the constitutional provision.—Payne v. City of Covington, 123 S.W.2d 1045, 276 Ky. 380, 122 A.L.R. 321.

Reason for decision

To say that the words "income and revenue provided for such year" contemplate or mean the maximum levy that might have been made under the section is to license officials to make levies below the maximum allowed in order to curry public favor and then to make expenditures in excess of the income and revenue provided by such levies and otherwise, and thus from year to year incur floating indebtedness to be later funded and passed on to future generations; such a construction subverts and defeats the clear and manifest purpose of the constitution.—Payne v. City of Covington, 123 S.W.2d 1045, 276 Ky. 380, 122 A.L.R. 321.

72. Ky.—Payne v. City of Covington, 123 S.W.2d 1045, 276 Ky. 380, 122 A.L.R. 321.

The acquirement of immediate and necessary funds, when not exceeding a bona fide anticipation of final collections by municipality for year in which funds are procured, is not creation of inhibited indebtedness.—Waddle v. City of Somerset, 134 S.W.2d 956, 281 Ky. 30.

(b) Indebtedness or Liability.

- aa. In general
- bb. Obligation as to payments in future years
- cc. Source of funds for payment

aa. In General

While the terms "indebtedness" and "liability," as used in provisions prohibiting municipal corporations from incurring indebtedness or liability, without the voters' assent, in any one year exceeding the amount of income and revenue provided for that year, have been broadly interpreted, such provisions have been held to apply only to liabilities voluntarily incurred, and contracted for, and to the creation of new debts, and not to liabilities imposed by law, or arising out of tort, or to speculative or contingent liabilities.

As used in a provision prohibiting municipal corporations from incurring indebtedness or liability, without the voters' assent, in any one year exceeding the amount of income and revenue provided for that year, the words "indebtedness or liability" have been held to cover all character of debts and obligations for which the corporation may become bound.⁷³ However, such a provision has been held not to apply to liabilities which are not voluntarily incurred,⁷⁴ and "indebtedness" has been held to mean a liability to pay money voluntarily contracted by a municipality.⁷⁵ The word "liability" as used in such a provision is a term of broad import,⁷⁶ more sweeping and comprehensive than the word "indebtedness;"⁷⁷ it signifies the state of being bound to pay a debt or discharge some obligation,⁷⁸ and is not dependent on the ability of the creditor to enforce his claim by a judgment for money.⁷⁹

Such a provision has been held to apply only to an indebtedness which the municipality contracts⁸⁰ or to a liability which results in whole or in part from some act or conduct on its part,⁸¹ or, in other words, its application is limited to debts or liabilities which the municipality has discretion to incur or not to incur;⁸² it does not apply to other obligations or liabilities imposed on the municipi-pality by law⁸³ or by the sovereign power as expressed in the constitution and valid acts of the legislature,⁸⁴ or arising out of tort⁸⁵ or out of the neglect of municipal officials to do their duty.⁸⁶ Also, such a provision applies only to the creation of a new debt,⁸⁷ and does not prevent the funding,⁸⁸ refunding,⁸⁹ or renewal⁹⁰ of an existing debt without an election; but it is held that a new debt is created when the municipality agrees to pay a definite amount in settlement of uncertain, contingent, and unliquidated claims for damages.⁹¹ Such a provision does not apply to an indebtedness or liability before it is definitely contracted or incurred;⁹² it does not apply to an optional obligation before the option is exercised,⁹³ to a remote and speculative obligation,⁹⁴ to a contingent liability, before the happening of the contingency,⁹⁵ or, before the authority is exercised, to a mere authorization to contract an indebtedness at a future time;⁹⁶ and the happening of the contingency has been held not to constitute the incurring of a debt within the meaning of the constitutional provision.⁹⁷

(1) The validity of the obligation must be determined as of the time it was incurred; otherwise, the whole doctrine of contingent liability is repudiated.—American Co. v. City of Lakeport, supra.

(2) Validity as of time of incurring indebtedness generally see supra subdivision b (1) of this section.

Judgments. Since a liability in tort is not within the provision, a judgment for a tort,⁹⁸ or the funding of such a judgment,⁹⁹ is likewise exempt from the operation of the provision; but a claim otherwise within such a provision is not withdrawn from its application by being reduced to judgment.¹

Ordinary or necessary expenses. Such a provision has been held not to apply to necessary governmental expenses;² and ordinary and necessary expenses authorized by the general laws of the state are sometimes expressly excepted from the operation of a provision requiring approval by popular vote in order to authorize a municipality to incur any indebtedness or liability in any year exceeding the income and revenue provided for that year.³

The sums which a municipal corporation contracts to pay over a series of years generally cannot be added so as to make a present indebtedness, in the year in which the contract is made, of the entire aggregate, as where the consideration is to be received from time to time in the future; but where the entire consideration is received when the contract is entered into, as in the case of a sale, an indebtedness for the aggregate of the yearly payments is deemed incurred at that time.

The sums which a municipal corporation may be required, under a contract, to pay over a series of years generally cannot be added together so as to make a present indebtedness, in the year in which the contract is made, of the entire aggregate.⁴ However, notwithstanding an arrangement for yearly payments or expenditures by the municipality, an indebtedness for the aggregate amount of the payments is deemed to be incurred during the year when the contract is entered into where the entire consideration is received at that time,⁵ or where each installment is not in payment of the consideration furnished that year,⁶ as where, despite its form, the transaction is really a single purchase of property;⁷ but, despite authority to the contrary,⁸ the rule is otherwise where the consideration is to be received from time to time in the future,⁹ as where there is a contract for water supply¹⁰ or the disposal of sewage,¹¹ or a lease of land to a municipality, for municipal purposes, at an annual rental for a term of years with option to purchase,¹² or an agreement for the construction and leasing of an incinerator to a municipality at a monthly rental, with option to purchase,¹³ it being sufficient in such cases if sufficient income may be provided in each year to meet the payments falling due in that year.¹⁴

Sec. Source of Funds for Payment

A provision of the character under consideration has been held to apply regardless of the source of the funds pledged to the payment of the indebtedness, and to a contract for the purchase of utility to be paid for out of the revenue therefrom; under other authority it does not ordinarily apply to an obligation which is payable solely out of a special fund and is not a general obligation of the municipal corporation, such as an improvement payable solely from special assessments.

A provision limiting the indebtedness and liability which a municipal corporation may incur in any year, without the assent of the voters, to the income and revenue of that year, has been held to apply regardless of the source from which the funds pledged to the payment of the indebtedness incurred are to be obtained or derived;¹⁵ but under other authority it does not apply to an obligation which is payable solely out of a special fund and is not a general obligation of the municipality,¹⁶ except when by the terms of the transaction the municipality is obligated directly or indirectly to feed the special fund from general or other revenues in addition to those arising solely from the specific improvement contemplated,¹⁷ or when, by the terms of the transaction, the municipality may suffer a loss if the special fund is insufficient to pay the obligation incurred.¹⁸ The requirement does not apply to indebtedness for an improvement the cost of which is payable only from special assessments,¹⁹ but it does apply to an indebtedness for an improvement which is payable from the proceeds of a sale of bonds which are the obligations of the city,²⁰ even though the city is entitled to reimburse itself from special assessments on abutting property;²¹ and it has been held that the requirement applies to a contract for the purchase of a waterworks system²² or an electric power plant or system, or electric power machinery,²³ to be paid for out of the revenue or earnings thereof, to a bond issue for the improvement of an existing waterworks system, to be paid for out of revenues from the operation of the system,²⁴ to transactions connected with a municipally owned public utility

Utilities

(1) In Missouri, if the obligation to pay the municipal indebtedness is not payable in whole or in part from taxation, the constitutional provision is not violated.—Dodds v. Kansas City, 152 S.W.2d 128, 347 Mo. 1193.

(2) Bonds payable solely from the revenue of a municipal utility do not come within such provision; hence the provision of an ordinance as to the maturing and callability of revenue bonds is not in conflict with such provision, since the latter provision does not apply to revenue bonds.—Dodds v. Kansas City, supra.

(3) Where municipal bonds for part of cost of constructing bridge are payable solely from tolls collected, they need not be submitted to voters for approval, since they do not create indebtedness within constitutional provision, and ordinances providing that, if such tolls are insufficient, municipality will pay operation, maintenance, and repairs from moneys derived from other sources, did not create indebtedness within provision.—State ex rel. City of Hannibal v. Smith, 74 S.W.2d 867, 335 Mo. 825.

(4) Use of income from an existing utility as well as from extensions thereof to pay bonds issued for the extensions does not create indebtedness within such provision, if the extensions are necessary to make the utility function adequately; where proposed extensions were necessary, fact that ordinance authorizing waterworks bond issue provided that net income from the existing system and from any extensions should be placed in a special fund and used to pay the bonds did not create indebtedness within provision.—City of Lebanon v. when the method of operation is such that the funds derived from its operation are directly or indirectly connected with taxation,²⁵ and to a debt contracted by a loan for the purpose of constructing a hospital, to be repaid out of the proceeds of the operation thereof.²⁶ An ordinance authorizing the payment of interest on unpaid registered warrants of a municipality has been held not invalid as creating an indebtedness or liability exceeding the year's revenue, since interest as well as principal is payable from such revenue.²⁷

The word "year," as used in a provision prohibiting a municipal corporation from incurring any indebtedness or liability in any year in excess of the income and revenue provided for such year, unless properly authorized by the voters, means a calendar, and not a fiscal, year.

The word "year," as used in a provision prohibiting a municipality from incurring any indebtedness or liability in any year in excess of the income and revenue provided for such year, unless authorized by a specified proportion of the electors, means a calendar,²⁸ and not a fiscal,²⁹ year; hence, the showing that a deficit between receipts and disbursements would exist at the end of a fiscal year because taxes levied and payable during the year became delinquent and were not collected does not show a violation of such provision.³⁰

c. Other Limitations

In a provision that no vote by the common council or any branch of a municipal government "which shall require" an expenditure of more than a stated amount for certain purposes shall be valid unless approved by vote at a municipal meeting, the quoted words mean that the test is the cost to the municipality as estimated by the proper municipal board.

It is to be assumed that the legislature, in enacting a charter provision that no vote by the common council or any branch of a municipal government "which shall require" an expenditure of more than a stated amount for certain purposes shall be valid unless approved by vote at a municipal meeting, had in mind the other provisions of the municipal charter.³¹ The reasonable meaning to be attributed to the quoted words is that the test is the cost to the municipality as estimated by the proper municipal board,³² rather than the ultimate cost to which the municipality may be put by reason of facts which neither such board nor the common council could anticipate.³³

- a. New debts other than for temporary loans
- b. Debts other than for necessary expenses
- c. Indebtedness for public utilities
- d. Extraordinary expenditures
- e. Business enterprises
- f. Other purposes

a. New Debts Other than for Temporary Loans

Whether a particular contract violates a provision prohibiting a municipal corporation from incurring any new debt, except for a temporary loan to supply casual deficiencies of revenue, without the assent of the electors, is to be determined by considering the beneficial purpose and intent of the provision. No new debt is incurred, within the provision, by a contract to pay a specified sum from money on hand or which can be collected from taxes that have been, or may lawfully be, collected during the year in which the contract is made.

In at least one jurisdiction a municipal corporation is prohibited by constitutional provision from incurring any new debt, except for a temporary loan to supply casual deficiencies of revenue, without the assent of two thirds of the qualified electors of the municipality.³⁴ The question whether or not a particular contract violates such a pro-

Effect of constitutional amendment

(1) Debt limitation held not altered by constitutional amendment.—DeJarnette v. Hospital Authority of Albany, 23 S.E.2d 716, 195 Ga. 189.

(2) Where constitutional amendment limited municipal authority to issue revenue anticipation certifi-

vision is not to be determined merely by prescribing any exact, exhaustive definition of the word "debt," covering all cases; and applying it as a verbal yardstick to the particular contract,³⁵ but rather by considering the beneficial purpose of the constitution and the intent of that instrument in making the provision.³⁶ In various cases a municipality has been held to incur,³⁷ or not to incur,³⁸ a new debt, without the assent of the electors, within the meaning of the provision. The fact that a municipality may not be generally bound for the debt beyond the assets pledged for its repayment will not change the character of the transaction and prevent it from constituting a debt.³⁹

A municipality may, without the assent of the electors and without incurring a new debt within the meaning of the constitution, obligate itself to act as agent in collecting and paying over special assessments for improvements,⁴⁰ or contract to pay a specified sum from money on hand⁴¹ or which can be collected from taxes⁴² that have been⁴³ or may lawfully be⁴⁴ levied during the year in which the contract is made; but a municipality is not justified in incurring a debt without the assent of the electors on the ground that it has sources of revenue consisting of fines and forfeitures⁴⁵ or charges for water and light⁴⁶ from which it is contemplated that money will arise which can be used to discharge the debt.

b. Debts Other than for Necessary Expenses

A constitutional provision prohibiting a municipal corporation from contracting any debt, except for necessary expenses, without authorization by the voters, must be rigidly observed. What constitutes a "necessary expense" is a matter for judicial, rather than legislative, determination; the term is restricted to expenses involving some phase of municipal government.

Some constitutional provisions prohibit a city, town, or other municipal corporation from contracting any debt, or incurring any indebtedness or liability, except for necessary expenses, or ordinary and necessary expenses, unless authorized to do so by a vote of a majority of the qualified voters.⁴⁷ Such a provision is mandatory⁴⁸ and a rigid observance thereof is necessary.⁴⁹ On the other hand, where such a constitutional provision exists, a popular vote is not necessary to authorize a debt for necessary expenses⁵⁰ unless required by cases for acquisition of revenue-producing undertakings to projects specifically authorized and enumerated, not including electric distribution systems, city was without power to issue certificates to acquire such system without a vote.—City of Valdosta v. Singleton, 28 S.E.2d 759, 197 Ga. 194.

Debt up to or beyond constitutional limitation

(1) A city has authority to contract debt for necessary expense up to constitutional limitation without vote of majority of qualified voters or legislative authority and in excess of such limitation by legislative authority without vote of people.—Williamson v. City of High Point, 195 S.E. 90, 213 N.C. 96.

(2) Limitation of amount of debt generally see supra §§ 1846-1855.

Limitation on issuance of bonds

(1) Purpose of amendment to constitutional limitation on increase of public debt is to limit authority of governing boards of local units to issue bonds for necessary expenses without vote of the people; under such amendment, local unit may create debts and issue bonds for necessary expenses without vote of people or approval of legislature if taxes in excess of constitutional limitation are not required and total

some charter or statutory provision.⁵¹

What constitutes "necessary expenses," within the meaning of a constitutional provision of this character, is a matter for judicial,⁵² rather than legislative,⁵³ determination; the courts determine whether a given project is a necessary expense of the municipality,⁵⁴ but the governing authorities of the municipality determine in their discretion whether such project is necessary or needed in the designated locality,⁵⁵ and, except in cases of fraud, the courts cannot control the exercise of discretion on the part of the authorities.⁵⁶

The term "necessary expenses" cannot be defined

generally so as to fit all cases which may arise in the future;⁵⁷ what is a necessary expense for one locality may not be for another.⁵⁸ The test of a necessary expense is the purpose for which the expense is to be incurred;⁵⁹ while the term is not confined to expenses incurred for purposes absolutely necessary to the very life and existence of a municipality,⁶⁰ it is restricted to expenses which involve some phase of municipal government.⁶¹

Particular matters held to come within the meaning of the term include a necessary municipal building,⁶² a municipal market,⁶³ the maintenance, repair, or improvement of streets⁶⁴ and sidewalks,⁶⁵ provision for light, water, and sewerage,⁶⁶ the ex-amount of bonds issued during year does not exceed two thirds of amount of reduction of unit's debt during preceding year, in determining which question all bonds issued, whether or not approved by vote, must be included, except bonds issued for specified purposes which render popular vote unnecessary under constitution.—Gill v. City of Charlotte, 195 S.E. 368, 213 N.C. 160.

pense of a course in police training,⁶⁷ and the expense of providing for the medical treatment and hospital care of the indigent sick and afflicted poor of the municipality.⁶⁸

Wharves, docks, terminals,⁶⁹ public school buildings,⁷⁰ a public library,⁷¹ a municipal airport,⁷² and the maintenance of a municipal hospital⁷³ have been held not to be necessary expenses, and an agreement by a municipality to make payments for the use of a street sprinkler has been held not to evidence an ordinary or necessary expense.⁷⁴

A municipality does not contract a debt or loan its credit without the sanction of a popular vote, within the meaning of such a constitutional prohibition, where it makes an expenditure from funds on hand without imposing further liability on itself or involving the imposition of future taxation.⁷⁵

c. Indebtedness for Public Utilities

There must be a compliance with provisions requiring the submission to popular vote of questions involving the incurring of debt by municipal corporations for public utilities, or the encumbrance of such utilities, and such provisions are applied according to their terms.

Express provision is sometimes made for submission to a popular vote on the question of incurring a debt for the purchase, construction, maintenance, or operation of a public utility by a municipal corporation.⁷⁶ Some provisions of this nature are so worded and construed as to be applicable

where a municipal corporation proposes to incur any general indebtedness for this purpose,⁷⁷ although not otherwise,⁷⁸ but other provisions apply only in particular cases, as where it is proposed to purchase property subject to outstanding indebtedness against it,⁷⁹ or to incur indebtedness which, although in excess of, is within an exception to or extension of, a general limitation of the aggregate amount of municipal indebtedness.⁸⁰

Apart from such a provision, bonds issued by a municipal corporation, under legislative sanction, to finance a self-liquidating public project or utility, the bonds being payable solely out of the revenues from the utility, do not create a debt within the meaning of a constitutional inhibition against the creation of a public debt without a vote of the people.⁸¹

A statute requiring a vote for the encumbrance, over a certain amount, of municipal light, water, or sewer systems except for certain purposes, including extensions, must be complied with;⁸² but such statute has been held not to apply where there has been no attempt to encumber the municipal waterworks system to raise money for the purpose of improving such system.⁸³ As used in such statute, the term "extensions" does not apply to the construction of a water reservoir and a pipe line,⁸⁴ or to a project including the purchase of land, the building of a dam, and the laying of a pipe line to provide an additional supply of wa-

However, money which was collected pursuant to a tax levy for an undesignated purpose under the name of "contingent fund" which was in fact derived from ad valorem tax could not be used without a vote for a use which would not be for necessary expense within the constitution, which would authorize a direct tax for such purpose, and municipal authorities could not do indirectly what the constitution forbade them to do directly.—Sing v. City of Charlotte, 195 S.E. 271, 213 N.C. 60, distinguishing Adams v. Durham, 126 S.E. 611, 189 N.C. 232.

ter,⁸⁵ since such a project is rather for the building, improvement, and enlargement of the water system.⁸⁶

Under a statute requiring a referendum for the purchase of plant or equipment for a public utility, the purchase of a city hall with utilities surpluses is not such a purchase of plant or equipment, but an investment,⁸⁷ so that a referendum is not required,⁸⁸ and an adverse vote on a referendum held is not binding on the municipal council.⁸⁹

Debts contracted for the supplying of water to a city or town may be expressly excepted by the constitutional provision from the requirement of a vote of electors.⁹⁰ Under a statute requiring a vote for the establishment and maintenance of a waterworks, a municipality cannot incur an indebtedness to complete such works unless the electors authorized the expenditure for the entire system.⁹¹

Loan of credit. A statute authorizing a municipality to sell bonds to governmental agencies in order for the municipality to acquire an electric power plant and distribution system has been held not to authorize the municipality to lend its credit to any outside agency, so as to come within a constitutional requirement of an election.⁹²

A municipal charter may require a popular vote on the question whether an extraordinary expenditure shall be made.

The charters of some municipal corporations require a submission to a vote of the taxpayers or electors of the question whether an extraordinary expenditure shall be made.⁹³ Expenditures for a municipal lighting plant⁹⁴ and for voting machines⁹⁵ have been held extraordinary.

e. Business Enterprises

Operation of a public transportation system by a municipal corporation is not a business enterprise within a provision denying it the power to engage in certain business enterprises without the electors' prior approval.

The operation of a public transportation system by a municipal corporation, as empowered by charter, is not a business enterprise, but a public purpose, within a charter provision denying it the power to engage in certain business enterprises without prior approval by the electors.⁹⁶

Provisions prohibiting the creation of a municipal debt without the assent of the voters have been applied with respect to various purposes.

In addition to the particular purposes discussed in the preceding subdivisions of this section, provisions prohibiting the creation of a municipal debt without the assent of the voters have been applied with respect to various purposes.⁹⁷ A statute providing that if a city undertakes to prohibit live stock from running at large within the corporate limits it shall fence off the city and provide gates is not violative of a constitutional provision prohibiting the creation of a municipal debt without the assent of the voters;⁹⁸ and revenue bonds issued by a municipality to aid in the completion of a hospital owned by it, pursuant to an act authorizing municipalities to issue bonds for the construction or maintenance of municipal public works, do not constitute an indebtedness within a similar prohibition,⁹⁹ despite the fact that the ordinance authorizing the issuance of the bonds provides that the municipality shall pay the legally established rates for the use of the hospital.¹

1. W.Va.—Warden v. City of Grafton, supra.

Reason for rule

The municipality is not required to make use of the hospital and, therefore, no debt is established against it by the ordinance or the buildings or alterations shall first be authorized by the city governing board has been held not repealed by a subsequent statute providing that an appropriation of money by the council for such purposes shall be subject to review by referendum;² the statutes are valid, harmonious, and consistent, and can be enforced together;³ thus, a resolution appropriating money for constructing an addition to a city hospital is subject to review by referendum.⁴

§ 1861. — Debts Not Payable in Current Year

Some statutes or charter provisions prohibit a municipal corporation from contracting debts not payable during the current year without a popular vote.

Under some statutes or charter provisions debts not payable during the current year shall not be contracted by a municipal corporation without the assent of a specified proportion of the voters or taxpayers or a referendum.⁵

§ 1862. Sufficiency of Submission

In an election on the incurring of municipal indebtedness, the proposition submitted must clearly disclose the purpose and amount of the indebtedness, and, where more than one proposition is submitted, opportunity to vote separately on each must be given, unless a statute provides otherwise. There must be a compliance with constitutional or statutory provisions as to petition for election, notice of election, ballots, method of voting, and conduct of the election.

Where an election is held on the question of incurring municipal indebtedness, the proposition must be submitted to the voters in such form as clearly to disclose the purpose⁶ and amount⁷ of the indebtedness or expenditure, and, where more than one proposition is submitted, so as to afford the voters an opportunity to vote separately on each proposition,⁸ unless the statute under which the election is held expressly or by clear implication allows a departure from the rule.⁹ Municipal officials have been held to have discretion as to the form of proposition, not inconsistent with constitutional provisions, to be submitted to the voters for their approval.¹⁰ The vote must be on a question which proposes a lawful purpose unencumbered by a purpose which is unlawful and therefore cannot be carried out.¹¹ Where the election is necessary in order to authorize the creation of a debt in excess of a certain limit, as discussed supra §§ 1859, 1860, it has been held sufficient to submit a proposition to issue bonds in a specified amount for a specific purpose,¹² without also submitting a proposition to incur indebtedness in excess of the limit¹³ or to enter into a contract calling for the expenditure of the money to be raised by the issuance and sale of the bonds.¹⁴

The legislature may prescribe the mode of submission,¹⁵ as well as the method of voting.¹⁶ Under at least one statute the first step to be taken by the municipal authorities is to give expression by ordinance or vote of their desire to increase the indebtedness of the city,¹⁷ but a separate ordinance is not necessary for this purpose,¹⁸ and it is sufficient to include the subject matter in the ordinance which provides for a submission of the question to the voters.¹⁹

A resolution or order authorizing an election is sufficient where a formal ordinance is not expressly required;²⁰ such an order, in the absence of a statutory requirement to that effect, need not state generally or specifically the rate of taxes to be levied.²¹ An ordinance providing for submission of the question to the voters is not subject to attack on the ground that it was not passed until after the regular registration day.²²

Petition for election. Under a statute providing for the calling of an election on the question of incurring a municipal indebtedness for the acquisition of a public utility on the filing of a petition for such election signed by a specified percentage of qualified electors, a petition has been held not insufficient because of the lack of indorsement or affidavit as to the authenticity of the signers or their qualifications as electors.²³ A person is a qualified elector, within such statute, if he satisfies the requirements of the state constitution for voting,²⁴ even though he is not registered.²⁵ A person alleging the insufficiency of the petition on the ground of the ineligibility of petitioners has the burden of proving the ineligibility of a sufficient number of the names appearing on the petition to render it ineffective.²⁶

In the absence of a statutory requirement to that effect, a petition for an election need not state generally or specifically the rate of taxes to be levied.²⁷

The notice of election must comply with constitutional or statutory requirements,²⁸ but need not conform to an order or ordinance of the municipal council which departs from the requirements prescribed by law;²⁹ any information gained by voters about a proposed election from unofficial or informal sources cannot dispense with the official notice required by law.³⁰ Statutory requirements as to the time or length of notice are mandatory,³¹ and giving less notice than that called for in the statute cannot be regarded as a substantial compliance therewith;³² but variations as to the form of notice which could not mislead voters may reasonably be held to be a substantial compliance.³³

The ballots used must be official ballots³⁴ in the form prescribed by a valid statute;³⁵ variations as to the form of ballots, which could not mislead voters, may reasonably be held to be substantial compliance with statutory requirements.³⁶ The details of expenditure need not appear on the ballot.³⁷

Conduct of election. The election is usually conducted in accordance with the general election laws of the state, applicable to municipalities,³⁸ unless special provision is made.³⁹ In at least one jurisdiction it has been held that the counting or canvassing of the returns by a court is not required or contemplated by any statute.⁴⁰

Resubmission. Where a statute so provides, a proposition rejected at an election may not be resubmitted until after the lapse of a specified period of time.⁴¹ However, a general statute prohibiting resubmission of the question within a specified period of time after its rejection at an election is not applicable to a municipality incorporated under a special law containing provisions inconsistent in this respect with the general law.⁴²

§ 1863. — Vote Required and Qualifications of Voters

- a. Vote required
- b. Qualifications of voters

a. Vote Required

Except where a constitution or statute provides otherwise, a proposition to incur municipal indebtedness is carried when it receives the required proportion of the votes cast thereon, and need not receive such proportion of all the votes cast at the election or of all the eligible voters.

It has generally been held that a proposition to incur municipal indebtedness is carried when it receives the required proportion of the votes cast on the proposition,⁴³ and that it is not necessary for it to receive the stated proportion of all the votes cast at the election at which the question is submitted⁴⁴ or the concurrence of a stated proportion of all the eligible voters or electors of the municipality;⁴⁵ but it is sometimes expressly provided by the constitu-

General election as for particular purpose

Where propositions authorizing excess levies by municipalities were submitted at a general election, the election as far as it related to the propositions was a special election within meaning of constitutional provision prohibiting municipalities from becoming indebted in an excessive amount without assent of three fifths of voters voting at an "election to be held for that purpose."—American Smelting & Refining Co. v. tion⁴⁶ or a valid statute⁴⁷ that the concurrence of a specified proportion of all the voters of the city is necessary. A constitutional provision requiring, for the creation of a debt for other than necessary expenses, the approval of a majority of the qualified voters, does not conflict with a provision under which, in order to overcome the restriction placed thereby on the creation of debt, it is only necessary to have the approval of the majority of those voting.⁴⁸

b. Qualifications of Voters

The qualifications of persons participating in an election on the incurring of municipal indebtedness are determined by constitutional or statutory provisions.

The provisions of the constitution or statute under which an election on the question of incurring municipal indebtedness is held are the sole criterion as to the qualifications of those who participate therein.⁴⁹ Constitutional provisions dealing with the qualifications of voters prevail over statutory provisions dealing with the same subject.⁵⁰ A statute requiring submission to the "taxpaying electors" is to be distinguished from another statute requiring submission to the "electors;"⁵¹ particular constitutional and statutory provisions have been held to limit an election to qualified freeholders, as against the contention that all registered and qualified electors of the municipality were entitled to vote,⁵² and to require the construction of "public taxpayers of the parish" as meaning "property taxpayers."⁵³ Within a constitutional provision that in an election for expending money only voters who own taxable property in the city shall be qualified to vote, the fixing of minimum salaries for city officers and employees does not constitute "expending money."⁵⁴

§ 1864. — Invalidity and Contest of Election

Elections on the question of incurring municipal indebtedness may be held invalid on the ground of departures from constitutional or legislative requirements.

Elections on the question of incurring municipal indebtedness may be held invalid on the ground of departures from constitutional or legislative requirements.⁵⁵ However, such an election will not be set

Payment of taxes

(1) City cannot require payment of taxes as condition to right of elector, otherwise qualified under statute, to vote on proposal to create or increase city's indebtedness, statute respecting elections on proposals to create or increase indebtedness of city supersedes statute relating to who are taxpayers in so far as elections for purposes specified in former are concerned.—Weber v. City of Helena, 297 P. 455, 89 Mont. 109.

(2) The purpose of constitutional provision permitting "qualified property taxpaying voter" to vote is to render ineligible on those qualified voters who do not pay taxes on real or personal property; such provision and statute defining "qualified property taxpaying voter" as qualified elector paying taxes and having legal tax receipt therefor dated within twelve months prior to election, did not require voter to possess physically a receipt and to present it to election officers as proof of his eligibility to vote, as, for example, where, due to press of business, no receipt had been issued for taxes paid, but voter could establish his eligibility by other means; election officials must decide what proof convinces them of the fact that voter is a qualified taxpaying voter, and their decision should be exercised reasonably so as not to disfranchise a voter, and, in absence of statute to contrary, they can accept from prospective electors affidavits of their eligibility to vote, and the attorney general's advice for many years to that effect amounts to an administrative construction of the law on the subject.—Henry v. Oklahoma City, 108 P.2d 148, 188 Okl. 308.

Rendition of property for taxation

Purpose of constitutional provision that only property owners who have duly rendered their property for taxation shall be qualified to vote is to restrict and limit power of nonproperty owning or nontaxpaying citizens to pile tax burdens and obligations on citizens who own and hold property and pay taxes, and statutes governing rendition of property for taxes or relating to collection of taxes cannot, in absence of fraud or wrongdoing, deprive property owner who has duly rendered property for taxation of right to vote; citizen whose property is on tax rolls and who is liable for taxes assessed, in regular order, has "duly rendered" property for taxation, as far as right to vote is concerned, without regard to particular manner or form through which rendition was made; husband and wife may be represented by each other in renditions of property for taxation without losing right to vote.—Campbell v. aside unless it is made to appear that it was not properly and fairly held;⁵⁶ so, such an election will not be held invalid by reason of mere irregularities, unaccompanied by fraud and not preventing a fair and honest expression of the will of the voters,⁵⁷ or even on the ground of improper influence on the electorate where it does not appear that any voter was actually coerced to cast his ballot contrary to his wishes.⁵⁸ The invalidity of the election on one proposition may not affect its validity as to another proposition separately submitted on the same ballot.⁵⁹ In a jurisdiction where no method of contesting the result of the election is provided by constitution or statute, a court of equity will afford relief in a proper case,⁶⁰ but after certification of the result it will not interfere on any ground relating simply to the conduct of the election.⁶¹

Questions which go to the preliminaries of a popular submission on the question of increase of municipal indebtedness must be raised before the vote takes place;⁶² if not raised until afterward, the action of the electorate will be regarded as having been intelligently taken, with full notice and knowledge of the resulting burdens,⁶³ and if, in the question voted on, there was sufficient and proper indication of the main purpose intended, effect is to be given to the voters' approval.⁶⁴

Cure by validating acts. Irregularities and defects in connection with an election may be cured by subsequent validating acts.⁶⁵

§ 1865. Operation and Effect of Submission

Municipal indebtedness or expenditures authorized at a valid election may be incurred; the expenditure must be confined to the purpose and amount so authorized. Apart from special statutory provision, approval by popular vote does not validate indebtedness exceeding the legal limit.

Municipal indebtedness or expenditures authorized by vote at a valid election authorized or required by law may be incurred,⁶⁶ even though its amount exceeds that which could be incurred without a vote.⁶⁷ Proper methods of executing the authority granted may be adopted,⁶⁸ and a single election is sufficient to authorize original and supplementary expenditures within the amount limited.⁶⁹

The authorization by the municipal voters to the municipal authorities to contract a debt, as required by the constitution, must be clear and explicit.⁷⁰ The expenditure must be confined to the purpose⁷¹

Sufficiency of election see supra § 1862.

Discretion

In contest of election on incurring indebtedness for municipally-owned public utility improvements, evidence was held to show that refusal to order ballot boxes opened to permit an examination of affidavits that were used to investigate eligibility of affiants to vote was not abuse of discretion.—Henry v. Oklahoma City, 108 P.2d 148, 188 Okl. 308.

and amount⁷² authorized or approved by the vote; and approval by popular vote does not validate municipal indebtedness exceeding the amount limited by law,⁷³ unless the case falls within a provision allowing the limit to be exceeded either generally, or for a particular purpose, on approval of the excessive indebtedness by a specified proportion of the electors, as discussed supra §§ 1859, 1860, and even then a higher limitation imposed by the law authorizing the vote must be observed.⁷⁴

Expenditures made after a void election are unauthorized;⁷⁵ but voters have been held not prevented by statute from ratifying a previous ordinance and contracts, where a previous election was void for defective procedure.⁷⁶

The fact that the electors of a municipality have approved the issuance of bonds for a municipal building project does not preclude a referendum election on the question whether the municipality should accept a conditional offer of the government to buy the bonds and give additional financing, where the conditions imposed by the government require serious practical and legal questions and may prove extremely burdensome.⁷⁷

§ 1866. Appropriation or Provision for Payment

a. In general

b. Construction of provisions generally

a. In General

Constitutional and statutory provisions prohibiting the incurring of a municipal indebtedness without a prior appropriation or provision for payment are mandatory, and ordinances and contracts not complying therewith are generally void. The validity of a contract, under such a provision, must be determined as of the time when the indebtedness or liability is incurred.

There is no general principle of law that a municipal corporation is not bound by a contract made in its behalf, by officers duly authorized, merely because no appropriation exists out of which the contract can be performed;⁷⁸ and, in the absence of a requirement of prior appropriation or provision for payment, a contract is not ultra vires, even though no appropriation has been made or funds provided for the performance of the contract.⁷⁹ The failure of a municipality to make provision for the payment of a debt in a certain way does not prevent recovery on the debt where the statute authorizes, but does not require, the municipality to make such provision.⁸⁰

It is frequently provided by constitution, statute, or charter that a municipal corporation, or an officer or department thereof, shall not incur an expense or indebtedness, or stated types thereof, unless an appropriation covering it has been previously made,⁸¹ with exceptions, in some instances, in case

Where the procedure followed has not been in accordance with law, proceedings had thereunder must be held void, but this in no way precludes the ultimate municipal authority, the people, from again exercising in a lawful manner its authority for the purpose of correcting errors due, not to a basic want of power, but to defective procedure; the case does not involve an attempted ratification of acts essentially and inherently ultra vires.—Jones v. City of Centralia, 289 P. 3, 157 Wash. 194.

Purpose

(1) The purpose of these enactments is to narrow and limit the powers of public officials in making contracts.—Dyer v. City of Boston, 172 N.E. 235, 272 Mass. 265.

(2) The object sought by such a provision is to place a curb on tax-spending municipal bodies and to protect the people against extravagant expenditures and burdensome taxation.—Tribune Co. v. Thompson, 174 N.E. 561, 342 Ill. 503.

(3) The purpose of the budget law is to prevent a deficit in the funds of the municipality at the end of the fiscal year—Shouse v. Board of Com'rs of Cherokee County, 99 P.2d 779, 151 Kan. 458.

Effect of reasonable necessity of expenditure

Officials had no authority to contract for expenditures exceeding appropriation for construction of plant, even though such expenditures might be found reasonably necessary in building the structure for which the money was appropriated.—Dyer v. City of Boston, 172 N.E. 235, 272 Mass. 265.

Inclusion in budget; "contemplates"

The word "contemplates," in charter providing that expenditure which initiative ordinance contemplates and which is not included in current budget shall not be lawful until next budget, means to have in view as contingent, probable, or possible.—State ex rel. Thorp v. Devin, 173 P.2d 994, 26 Wash.2d 333.

Independence from assessment power

Power of enacting assessment ordinances and power and purpose of adopting appropriation ordinances or appropriation bills vested in certain cities are derived from distinct grants of power, found in separate legislative provisions, and are mutually independent and unrelated except as statute provides to the contrary.—LeBarron v. City of Harvard, 262 N.W. 26, 129 Neb. 460, 100 A.L.R. 767. Particular cities held within budget law

An order of city council declaring extreme emergency involving health and safety of people due to extreme amount of snow and directing director of engineering to expend necessary sums to relieve condition was held not compliance with statute; such order did not have any presumptive or evidential force in establishing existence of emergency; there is no analogy between powers of council acting under such statutory limitations and power of general court to declare a law an emergency law under the constitution.—Continental Const. Co. v. City of Lawrence, 9 N.E.2d 550, 297 Mass. 513, 111 A.L.R. 699.

Bonds; warrants

(1) The constitutional provision to this effect is designed to protect bondholders—Pulaski County v. Ben Hur Life Ass'n of Crawfordsville, Ind., 149 S.W.2d 738, 286 Ky. 119.

(2) Under such provision, political subdivisions in creating public debt are required not only to raise by annual taxation money sufficient to discharge interest on bond issue, but also to raise by taxation, annually and from inception of debt, amount sufficient to amortize bond issue when it becomes due—McDonald v. City of Lexington, 69 S.W.2d 1065, 253 Ky. 585.

(3) Municipal bonds do not create a debt within the meaning of such provision until they are issued, sold, and delivered to a purchaser.—Town of Freeport v. Sellers, 190 S.W.2d 813, 144 Tex. 389.

(4) The issuance of bonds secured by a mortgage on a city's waterworks system, to finance improvements to the system, is not the incurring of a debt within the provision.—City of Hamlin v. Brown-Crummer Inv. Co., C.C.A.Tex., 93 F. 2d 680, certiorari denied Brown-Crummer Inv. Co. v. City of Hamlin, 58 S.Ct. 831, 303 U.S. 664, 82 L.Ed. 1122.

under some provisions a municipality is prohibited from making any contract, or issuing any evidence of indebtedness, in excess of the revenue for the year in which the contract is made,⁹¹ or from incurring any liability, to be paid in any fiscal year, in excess of the revenues for such year,⁹² or from incurring an indebtedness that cannot be met out of the revenue of the current fiscal year;⁹³ or it may be provided that no contract shall be entered into in excess of the funds provided for carrying it out,⁹⁴ or that no fiscal body may enter into a contract the performance of which involves the expenditure of money in

A person claiming compensation under a contract with a municipality subject to such a requirement must show compliance with the requirement⁹⁶ or that it is not applicable to the obligation in question,⁹⁷ and may not claim exemption from the provisions of the law by reason of the fact that he did not know it had been violated,⁹⁸ but it has also been held that the burden of proving a failure to provide for payment rests on the party setting up the illegality.⁹⁹

When applicable, such provisions are mandatory¹

(5) Under such provision, city was not required to make provision for payment of street improvement debt before warrants were issued, since no debt exists until such issuance.—Simms v. City of Mt. Pleasant, Tex. Civ. App., 12 S.W.2d 833, error dismissed.

Deferment of payment

Under such provision, debts within lawful power of municipality to incur may be contracted without providing for direct annual tax, unless payment is deferred to fixed future period.—Stripe v. Yager, 180 N.E. 915, 348 Ill. 362.

The number of a town's inhabitants is to be determined as of time town asserts a right given it under such provision, and not at time of last federal census.—Town of Freeport v. Sellers, 190 S.W.2d 818, 144 Tex. 389.

Revenue provided for year

Such provision precludes a city from incurring valid obligations to pay any more than its revenue already provided will enable it to pay; provision means that liabilities incurred in a particular year, which exceed revenues provided for the year in which they are to be paid, are void.—Public Market Co. of Portland v. City of Portland, supra.

93. Ky.—City of Jackson v. First Nat. Bank of Jackson, 157 S.W.2d 321, 289 Ky. 1.

Overdraft

Where it was not pleaded or established that in creating overdraft, and in effect borrowing money from bank, the municipality exceeded anticipated revenues for the year, the overdraft was to be considered a valid indebtedness of the municipality.—City of Jackson v. First Nat. Bank of Jackson, supra.

Effect of failure to pledge revenues

The fact that current revenues were not specifically pledged by ordinance of municipality directing execution of note or by the note itself did not render note invalid, since the current revenues would be pledged by operation of law and the holder of the note had the right to compel the application of the revenues to the discharge of the note.—City of Jackson v. First Nat. Bank of Jackson, supra.

A mere expression of policy on the part of a municipality, in a contract, as to future annual appropriations from its general funds does not render the contract violative of a constitutional provision forbidding a municipality to incur any debt or obligation unless sufficient funds, not otherwise appropriated, to pay such debt are actually in the treasury when the debt is incurred—Hotard v. In determining whether a contract violates a provision of this nature, the contract must be regarded as an entirety.¹⁰ The validity of a contract, under such a provision, must be determined as of the time when the indebtedness or liability is incurred;¹¹ so, subject to any exceptions created by statute,¹² a contract in conformity with the requirement of the law when entered into cannot be invalidated by any subsequent malversation or diversion of the fund or appropriation,¹³ or by the fact that a reasonable expectation of ability to pay from anticipated revenues is not realized.¹⁴ Persons seeking payment from budgeted appropriations have been held to have no action against the municipality until there are funds to the credit of such appropriations.¹⁵

An appropriation¹⁶ or a provision for payment¹⁷ is in time when made before the indebtedness is created, and an objection that no appropriation has been made is premature where an ordinance gives only authority to enter into a contract, and no con-

Appropriation

(1) Where a provision in a city's charter is mandatory and requires an appropriation, lack of an actual appropriation does not constitute a defense on the part of the city; where pertinent charter provisions required publication of notices, such requirement plainly implied that the reasonable cost thereof should be paid by the city, notwithstanding there had been no budget appropriation therefor—Brooklyn Citizen v. City of New York, 17 N.Y.S.2d 765, 258 App.Div. 657.

(2) Open market orders by city for lease of pump not exceeding one thousand dollars were not authorized because of charter provision prohibiting expenditures for work or supplies involving less than one thousand dollars unless expenditure was duly authorized and appropriated, since such section did not prevent department head from ordering work until appropriation had been made.—53-04 Ninety-Seventh Place Corporation v. City of New York, 282 N.Y. S. 519, 156 Misc. 706.

Contract on quantum basis

be paid for as were performed or furnished up to time the funds or provided revenues became exhausted or depleted to such an extent that further services could not be paid for.—City of Tulsa v. Langley, 168 P.2d 116, 196 Okl. 680—Public Service Co. of Oklahoma v. City of Tulsa, 50 P.2d 166, 174 Okl. 58—Anadarko Funeral Home v. Scarth, 46 P.2d 539, 173 Okl. 103.

(2) Rule applied to compensation to attorneys for legal services rendered.—City of Tulsa v. Langley, supra.

Participation in unexpended balance

Employees would not be barred from recovery of pay for month in which they worked, and for which appropriation was insufficient to pay full salary, because of statute forbidding any department to incur liability in excess of appropriation made for use of department, where unexpended balance remained on first day of month in which such employees were entitled to participate.—Barnard v. City of Lynn, 3 N.E.2d 264, 295 Mass. 144.

Effect of seller's lack of diligence

Where, during the year in which goods were sold to city, there were funds out of which the seller might have been paid, but he did not bring suit to recover balance due until three years later, and did not ask that suit be tried until seven years thereafter, and at time of trial it was shown that city did not have any funds brought over from year of sale, out of which claim might be paid, seller lost right to collect the claim out of revenues in subsequent years because of lack of diligence.—Eureka Fire Hose Mfg. tract has been entered into.¹⁸ A contract is valid, even though there is no appropriation until after the bid has been made, provided it is available after the approval of the bid and before the contract is awarded,¹⁹ but an appropriation made after a contract is executed will not validate the contract.²⁰

Splitting contract. Where the amount of available funds is limited and the power of the authorities is restricted to making contracts within that amount, they may not evade these provisions by splitting a contract for a larger amount into separate agreements, each within the sum limited.²¹

Appropriation by county. The statutory requirements that money be appropriated or provided by the city are not met by evidence of an appropriation by the county for the same work which the contract was made to cover.²²

b. Construction of Provisions Generally

Provisions prohibiting the incurring of a municipal indebtedness without a prior appropriation or provision for payment must be reasonably construed so as to effectuate their purposes; they constitute limitations on the power of municipal corporations to incur debts. Such a provision has been held not retroactive.

A provision prohibiting the incurring of a municipal indebtedness or expenditure not covered by a prior appropriation or provision for payment must be given a reasonable construction²³ protective of the municipal corporation against official extravagance,²⁴ but not such as to hamstring the municipal corporation in the exercise of its powers;²⁵ it is intended to have some effect in limiting the powers of a municipal body in the incurring of indebtedness,²⁶ and it is the court's duty to give it effect according to the meaning of the words used.²⁷ The terms of such a statute by implication become terms of a contract entered into by a municipality.²⁸ The prohibitions of such a statute must not be weakened, or the exceptions enlarged, by constructions which might tend to break down the safeguards designed to be set up or to admit of the evils intended to be prevented.²⁹

A provision requiring provision for a tax has been held to confer no power on municipalities to incur debts,³⁰ but to be a limitation on such power,³¹ and, as appears in Constitutional Law § 52, not self-executing; such a provision has been held to be a restriction on the municipality alone and not on the legislature.³² Likewise, a provision prohibiting the entering into of any contract in excess of the funds provided for carrying it out limits the power of a municipality to raise and spend public funds.³³

A statute imposing a requirement of prior appropriation has been denied a retroactive effect.³⁴ The requirement of a general statute or charter provision as to prior appropriation or provision for payment is subject to subsequent legislation which may operate to repeal, modify, or create an exception to it,³⁵ and, of course, an exception created

Statute as to bonds

Failure to impose a tax has been held not to render unconstitutional a statute validating municipal assessment bonds and making them obligations of the municipality, or to render void provisions of the statute imposing indebtedness on the city, where the constitution contains no provision stating that any indebtedness of the municipality shall be void if the tax is not provided at or before the incurring thereof.—Bessemer Inv. § 1867. — Application of Requirement

- a. In general
- b. Public service contracts
- c. Source and time of payment

a. In General

The applicability of provisions prohibiting the incurring of municipal indebtedness without prior appropriation or provision for payment depends on the language of the particular provision; such provisions generally apply only to claims arising ex contractu and do not apply to expenses or liabilities imposed on the municipal corporation by law.

Some provisions prohibiting the making of a contract or the incurring of an expense without a prior appropriation are limitations on the powers of all officers and departments of municipal corporations,³⁸ but are not limitations on the power of the municipal council³⁹ or an independent board;⁴⁰ but another such provision has been held a limitation on the lawful exercise of the powers of the council.⁴¹ A prohibition against the incurring of indebtedness or liability without provision for the collection of a tax sufficient to pay it has been held inapplicable to a housing authority.⁴²

While a provision prohibiting the incurring, in any year, of any indebtedness or liability, in any manner or for any purpose, exceeding the income and revenue provided for that year, without provision for the collection of a tax sufficient to pay it has been held to cover all character of debts and obligations for which the city may become bound,⁴³ in general, provisions prohibiting the incurring of municipal indebtedness, liabilities, or expenses, unless funds for the payment thereof are on hand, or a prior appropriation or provision for payment has been made, refer and apply to,⁴⁴ and only to,⁴⁵

Contingent liability

Under provision that no debt shall be created by city unless provision be made to collect sufficient funds to pay interest and create sinking fund, obligation imposing merely contingent future liability does not create "debt" before happening of contingency, at least where arising of contingency is solely within control of city and can occur only by its subsequent choice voluntarily made.—*Ward v. claims arising ex contractu, or indebtedness voluntarily incurred by the municipality,⁴⁶ or as to which it has discretion,⁴⁷ or expenditures which are optional;⁴⁸ they do not apply to an expense or liability imposed on the municipality by law,⁴⁹ or to contracts entered into in the performance of a public duty imposed by statute.⁵⁰ Such restrictions are not to be construed as prohibiting a contract for a reasonable term of years when it is for the best interests of a municipality.⁵¹ As used in such a provision, "liabilities" is a broader term than "debt,"⁵² and includes any kind of debt or liability, absolute or contingent, express or implied.⁵³

It has been decided that such inhibitions do not apply to contracts not involving the creation of debts;⁵⁴ to contracts outside the scope of an appropriation statute expressly limited in its operation to a particular class of contracts;⁵⁵ to necessary current expenses,⁵⁶ as distinguished from extraordinary expenditures such as contracts for permanent improvements;⁵⁷ to ordinary and necessary administrative expenses payable, and expected to be paid, out of the current revenues;⁵⁸ to contracts made in the exercise of implied powers necessary to carry out powers expressly granted;⁵⁹ or to municipal salaries,⁶⁰ although as to the last point there is also authority to the contrary.⁶¹ It is held by some,⁶²

although not other,⁶³ authorities that the requirements apply to a contract for the purchase of fire apparatus; and such a requirement has been applied to the purchase of real property,⁶⁴ although there is authority to the contrary,⁶⁵ and to expenditures for materials.⁶⁶ A requirement of a prior appropriation is applicable to a contract for the purchase of voting machines where the requirement and the statutory grant of authority to make the purchase are not inconsistent,⁶⁷ but the rule is otherwise where the requirement and the statutory grant of authority are so inconsistent as to preclude the view that the legislature intended that appropriations for the purchase of machines should precede their acquisition.⁶⁸

The requirements apply to the renewal of debts barred by the statute of limitations,⁶⁹ but not to the refunding of valid obligations without increase of liability.⁷⁰ Some requirements are limited to funded debts,⁷¹ and are not applicable to such a debt until its amount is definitely fixed.⁷²

b. Public Service Contracts

Provisions requiring prior appropriation or other provision for payment in the case of municipal contracts involving the creation of debt have been held by some authorities, but not by others, to apply to contracts for furnishing a public utility service, such as water or light.

In some jurisdictions, statutory or charter provisions requiring prior appropriations or other provision for payment in the case of municipal contracts involving the creation of debts have been held to apply to contracts for furnishing a public utility service, such as water or light,⁷³ to a municipality or its inhabitants;⁷⁴ and, where such contract is made for a term of years, it is held in these jurisdictions to be void in the absence of a statute excepting such contracts from the rule.⁷⁵ Other authorities have held that the requirements do not apply to contracts for water, sewerage, and light.⁷⁶

The exemption of public utility contracts from the operation of the requirements may be secured by express statutory provision in the form of an exception to the general statute;⁷⁷ where such exception is made, it has been held to apply only to contracts expressly within its terms.⁷⁸ In other jurisdictions, such exception may be brought about either by a judicial construction of the statutes, the legislature being held not to have intended to nullify its grant of a power to provide for a public service by the enactment of the appropriation statute,⁷⁹ or by considering such a contract as not creating an indebtedness beyond the year for which appropriation is made.⁸⁰

which the obligation is incurred, or out of some fund in the control of the municipality; likewise, a prior appropriation is not necessary where a special fund is provided for payment and the general funds of the municipality are not obligated, or where the contract is covered by special legislation providing for the raising of funds therefor.

As used in a provision prohibiting the incurring of a debt by a municipal corporation without at the same time providing for a tax to pay the interest and provide a sinking fund, the meaning of the word "debt" in any given case, and the application of the limitation, may be said to hinge on the facts peculiar to that case.⁸¹ In some jurisdictions the test applied in determining whether a pecuniary obligation of a municipality is within the meaning of a requirement of prior provision for its payment is whether it is payable in whole or in part from the revenues of future fiscal years,⁸² since it is within the application of the requirement where it is so payable,⁸³ but not where it is in good faith intended to, and lawfully can, be paid out of the current revenues of the year in which the obligation is in-

curred⁸⁴ or out of some fund within the immediate control of the municipality,⁸⁵ even though it is not in fact paid out of the revenues or fund contemplated.⁸⁶ However, in other jurisdictions a statute prohibiting cities from making any contracts involving the expenditure of money, unless the funds therefor are in the treasury, has been held not to apply to a contract calling for payments only in future years;⁸⁷ and a lease has been held not to create an obligation for the payment of which there is not money available at the time of incurring or authorizing it.⁸⁸

A prior appropriation is not necessary where a special fund is provided for the payment of the expense and the general funds of the municipality are not obligated.⁸⁹ The statutory requirements are met without a specific appropriation, if funds for payments under the contract are available in the form of a general⁹⁰ or contingent⁹¹ fund, or a departmental provision,⁹² or in some other form;⁹³ and this is so, even though there are other claims on

Taxes collected in future

Attempt of municipality to obligate itself to pay debt from indirect taxes to be collected in future years violates such provision.—Warden v. City of Grafton, 176 S.E. 706, 115 W. Va. 438.

Warrants wrongly made payable

Under a statutory provision prohibiting certain municipalities from incurring an indebtedness which cannot be met out of the revenue of the current fiscal year, the fact that warrants issued to cover purchase price of a lot were payable out of future years' revenues did not invalidate them where the indebtedness was a valid one and the warrants should have been made payable out of current years' revenues.—City of Jackson v. the funds exceeding the total amount thereof,⁹⁴ or the funds are subsequently exhausted, provided at the time the contract was made there was enough of the fund unexpended to meet all claims thereunder,⁹⁵ and even though there is a failure to comply with the requirements of a special statute designed to apply if there are no general funds available for the purpose.⁹⁶ Likewise, a general statute requiring an appropriation will not apply to contracts expressly covered by special legislation providing for the raising of funds therefor by taxation,⁹⁷ or by the issuing of certificates of indebtedness,⁹⁸ unless the statute limits the amount of the tax to be raised and the contract calls for payments in excess of that amount,⁹⁹ in which case the contract is void to the extent of such excess if no appropriation therefor is made.¹

Charter restrictions on the power to incur obligations without providing funds to meet them may be such as to relate only to charges against the general fund which must be raised annually by general taxation in advance of its use;² and a provision requiring prior appropriation has been held to be concerned only with obligations payable out of funds raised, made up, or replenished by general taxation,³ and to be inapplicable to a conditional obligation payable only out of funds on hand and net earnings of a municipal lighting plant, and not a general indebtedness of the municipality,⁴ or to payments to be made for the purchase of a public utility to be paid for exclusively out of the net earnings derived therefrom, where such earnings do not become a part of the general funds of the municipality;⁵ but another such provision has been held to apply not only to funds raised by taxation, but to miscellaneous receipts which are a part of the general funds.⁶ The contract is valid where there is an unexpended portion of a specific appropriation sufficient to meet the contract requirements, regardless of the comptroller's advice to the contrary and the mayor's refusing to approve because of the comptroller's recommendation.⁷

A requirement of the levy of a tax or assessment to defray the cost and expense of a contract has been held not to require taxes to be levied years in advance of their need and the holding of the money for year-to-year distribution on the contract,⁸ particularly where the amount of the tax over the contract term cannot be known in advance;⁹ likewise, a provision prohibiting an expenditure beyond the amount appropriated does not mean that, where a contract is made to run for more than a year, the entire sum to be paid at intervals during the several years must be appropriated at the start.¹⁰

Under a provision prohibiting the incurring of an indebtedness without the provision of a tax, the pledging of the general revenues of a municipality, or any part thereof, on the municipality's promise to pay constitutes a debt.¹¹

The word "revenue," as used in a provision prohibiting the incurring of liability, to be paid in any fiscal year, in excess of the revenue for that year, does not mean the actual money which shall be received in the municipal treasury,¹² but it is the estimated revenues which are contemplated;¹³ such estimates must relate to sources of income which are definite and certain, and not contingent.¹⁴ It has been held that the power to contract debts for municipal purposes should be restricted to such debts as the council could reasonably expect, and

§ 1868. — Certificate as to Funds

A provision requiring, for the creation of municipal indebtedness, a certificate by a designated officer that money sufficient to pay the debt has been appropriated or is available is constitutional and mandatory, and an attempt to create municipal indebtedness without compliance therewith is invalid.

A certificate by a designated officer that an amount of money sufficient to pay the debt involved has been appropriated or is available is sometimes made a condition precedent by statute or charter to the creation of municipal indebtedness by contract or ordinance.¹⁶ Such a provision is constitutional¹⁷ and mandatory,¹⁸ but not retroactive.¹⁹ A requirement of this nature has been held applicable to various contracts and transactions²⁰ and inapplicable to others;²¹ accordingly, such requirements have been construed not to apply to contracts for municipal utilities for a term of years,²² to public utility rate ordinances²³ or service contracts;²⁴ to cases involving the appropriation of the proceeds of bonds issued by the municipality to meet the expenditures authorized by the bond issue ordinance;²⁵ to obligations for the payment of the salaries or compensation of public officers,²⁶ whether elected or appointed;²⁷ to ordinances merely expressing the public policy of the municipality by stipulating minimum salaries and wages for municipal officers and employees;²⁸ to certain emergencies;²⁹ or to cases where the municipal authorities refused to execute the contract.³⁰

Where such requirement is applicable, a resolution, ordinance, or contract attempting to create municipal indebtedness without compliance therewith is ultra vires and invalid,³¹ and a petition failing to

Purpose

(1) The object of a statute so requiring is not only to show the presence in the treasury of sufficient funds unappropriated, but also to prevent such funds from being taken out of the treasury for any other purpose.—Findlay v. Pendleton, 56 N.E. 649, 62 Ohio St. 80.

(2) Such a requirement is the most important provision for safeguarding the people from the reckless extravagance of those who, themselves often irresponsible, incur debts for those responsible to pay.—City of Ft. Pierce v. Scofield Engineering Co., C.C.A.Fla., 57 F.2d 1026.

Only a subdivision or taxing unit is referred to by statutory provision.—State ex rel. Columbus Blank Book Mfg. Co. v. Ayres, 51 N.E.2d 636, 142 Ohio St. 216.

Availability of insurance premium

Such requirement was satisfied, as respects contract with mutual insurance company for insurance of municipally-owned streetcar system, by certificate that amount of premium was available, without certifying availability of amount of contingent liability.—Burt v. City of Cleveland, 62 N.E.2d 274, 76 Ohio App. 451.

Payment without tax authority's affirmation

The statutory power of municipal fiscal officer to authorize payment under contract without taxing authority's affirmation is conditioned on compliance with statutory requirement of filing of such certificate.—Schumacher Stone Co. v. Village of Columbus Grove, 57 N.E.2d 251, 73 Ohio App. 557.

City of Cleveland, 62 N.E.2d 274, 76 Ohio App. 451.

(2) A contract for leasing of parking meters to city with option to purchase was not void because no certificate was made by auditor as to funds applicable, where statute applies only to disbursements of funds arising from a levy on general tax list and payments required by contract were to be made from coins deposited in meters.—Hines v. allege compliance with such requirement is demurrable,³² although in a proper case recovery may be had where the municipality has enjoyed the fruits of the contract.³³ The council³⁴ or the electors³⁵ cannot dispense with the certificate, and the presence of the necessary funds in the treasury does not, in legal effect, dispense with the certificate;³⁶ but where, although it was not placed on the contract until after its execution, it could properly have been placed thereon at the time of its execution and the municipality subsequently ratifies the contract, it is bound.³⁷

Where a statute imposing a requirement of this nature is absolutely irreconcilable with the various statutes regulating and controlling public utilities, and the provisions of the latter particularly and specifically apply, the latter must prevail and become determinative of the necessity of such certificate.³⁸

proof of the existence of the facts which the certificate is designed by statute to cover;³⁹ and, where a sufficient appropriation has been made, the officer's duty to certify to that fact is ministerial,⁴⁰ and he has no discretion to consider other grounds of attack or to base a refusal of certification thereon.⁴¹

§ 1869. Borrowing Money

- a. In general
- b. Submission to popular vote; emergency

a. In General

Municipal corporations have no inherent power to borrow money; when authorized by constitutional or statutory provisions to do so, a municipal corporation must comply with all the requirements of such provisions.

Contract for several years; severable consideration

Where each year's consideration is severable from the remainder of a proposed plan, and municipality's obligation to pay under a contract is conditioned on the rendition of services, the contract is not prohibited by such provision; a municipality's contract to procure the services of an individual for a period of five years is not invalid under such provision and provision requiring certification that revenue anticipated and properly applicable to meet the expenditure will be available to meet it as it becomes due, unless it is shown that any installment coming due in any year is in excess of the incoming revenue of that year.—City and County of San Francisco v. Boyd, 110 P.2d 1036, 17 Cal.2d 606.

Circumstances not constituting non-compliance

To promise payment on the performance of a contract for temporary service out of an unencumbered and unexpended fund set aside for such expenditure is not to contract a liability in violation of such provision, since there is no debt until the service has been rendered, even though some of the contingent payments may become payable five years later; facts that an initial payment by municipality under such contract might prove to have been injudiciously made, and that the scheme might fail of execution for want of appropriation, are immaterial on question of validity of contract under such provision.—City and County of San Francisco v. Boyd, supra.

absence of express authority, the power may be necessarily implied by some special authority granted,⁴⁴ or duty imposed,⁴⁵ for the exercise or discharge of which the power to borrow money is not only convenient but necessary. The right to borrow money, as applied to a municipal corporation, is a power to create indebtedness and procure for its payment funds from others to be paid at a future date;⁴⁶ and the origin of any municipal borrowing power has been said to be in its power to exercise the governmental function of taxation in its area.⁴⁷

When money is borrowed under the provisions of a constitution or statute, there must be a compliance with the constitutional or statutory provision;⁴⁸ so, the power must be exercised in the mode,⁴⁹ and only after compliance with conditions precedent,⁵⁰ prescribed by charter or statute; the procedure necessary to give effect to the borrowing power is not an incident of the power, but a regulation for its proper exercise.⁵¹ Also, constitutional or statutory limitations of amount must be observed;⁵² and a municipality may not so exercise its authority to borrow as to impair its power to perform the essential functions of its government and existence.⁵³

Borrowing for current expenses

A charter limitation on the power of borrowing money has been held

In exercising the power to borrow money conferred on it by charter, a municipal corporation is not exercising sovereign power,⁵⁴ but is responsible for the acts of its agents.⁵⁵ However, a city treasurer has no authority by virtue of his office to borrow money on behalf of the city;⁵⁶ his authority to borrow is limited to that conferred on him by the city council.⁵⁷ Where the council authorizes the treasurer to borrow money from time to time with the approval of the finance committee, the members of the committee may not delegate their duties to the mayor,⁵⁸ but are required to exercise their individual judgment and discretion⁵⁹ as to each separate borrowing.⁶⁰

Various transactions have been held to constitute⁶¹ or not to constitute⁶² a borrowing of money by a municipality. Statutory restrictions on the power of a municipality to borrow money have been held to have no application to money received by it in return for valid bonds sold by it,⁶³ since such money is not an ordinary loan.⁶⁴

Terms of promise to pay. A municipality about to borrow money may fix the terms of its promise to pay.⁶⁵

Interest. It is not against public policy for a municipal corporation to agree to pay interest on money borrowed by it,⁶⁶ but in some instances it is precluded by constitutional provision from doing so.⁶⁷ Where, by the agreement under which money is advanced to a municipality, the funds were not to bear interest, and the municipality has had no beneficial use of the funds equivalent to the interest demanded, a recovery of interest should not be had in a suit based on equitable principles.⁶⁸

Redress of federal government or agency. In case of default in the payment of loans made to the housing authority of a municipality, the federal government, or any governmental agency thereof authorized to make such loans, would have the same redress in the courts in the enforcement of payment as any person or private corporation would have under like circumstances.⁶⁹

Irregularities in papers. Municipal loans otherwise regular ought not to be avoided by irregularities and mistakes, made in the papers filed, which can be corrected by the filing of proper certificates and papers;⁷⁰ such irregularities and mistakes ought to be corrected before approval is granted.⁷¹

b. Submission to Popular Vote; Emergency

Under some constitutional and statutory provisions a municipal corporation may not borrow money unless it is authorized to do so by the vote of its citizens. Where it is provided that such a vote is not necessary in case of an emergency, the existence of an emergency is a question of fact.

Purpose

Purpose of the legislature in limiting authority of directors of people's utility district to borrow money without previous approval of the legal voters is to require the directors to conduct affairs of district on a pay-as-you-go basis.—Fullerton v. ers are not permitted to vote at a municipal election on a proposal to borrow money on the faith and credit of the municipality has been held not to render the election illegal.⁷³

It has been said to be settled that a municipal corporation may borrow in excess of contemplated current revenues to the extent reasonably necessary, and within constitutional limitations, to cope with extraordinary emergencies in municipal affairs.⁷⁴ In a constitutional provision that a mayor and council may, without submission of the matter to the voters, temporarily borrow any amount of money to meet any deficiency in the municipal treasury and may borrow any amount at any time to provide for any emergency arising from the necessity of maintaining the police, or preserving the health, safety, and sanitary arrangements of the municipality, the word "emergency" means a sudden, unexpected, and unforeseen condition or occurrence in municipal affairs as to require forthwith municipal action for which the requisite public money is not presently procurable by the usual and regular methods of acquiring funds for municipal use.⁷⁵ The existence of an emergency, within this provision, is a question of fact,⁷⁶ as to which a finding by the municipal council is primarily sufficient,⁷⁷ but not conclusive,⁷⁸ although such finding is entitled to great weight⁷⁹ and will not be set aside or annulled by a court unless clearly and unmistakably erroneous.⁸⁰ The courts are not permitted, by such a constitutional provision, to make an exception of any one emergency because of fault, or even illegality, in its origin.⁸¹ The term "maintaining the police," in such provision, applies not only to police officers or other agents employed to administer and enforce the laws existing for the protection of the public, but also the measures themselves adopted for that purpose,⁸² and may be accepted as referring to any system of laws and regulations found necessary for preserving the public safety, and to the enforcement of such laws.⁸³ The extent of the power given to the municipality by such constitutional provision cannot be cut down, but is added to, by a statute authorizing emergency borrowing by a municipality to restore funds spent for relief.⁸⁴ As used in such constitutional provision, the natural and ordinary interpretation of the words "deficiency in the city treasury" is the lack of funds needed to perform some imperative and peremptory function of government.⁸⁵ A temporary loan to meet such a deficiency can only mean a loan to meet some casual and unforeseeable expense resulting from the ordinary administration of the business of the city, or some shortage in funds for immediate needs resulting from delay in the payment of taxes, or debts due the city, or from some other like cause.⁸⁶ The

§ 1870. Existence and Extent of Power

- a. In general
- b. Constitutional provisions
- c. Status or purpose of corporation
- d. Particular aid or transactions

a. In General

A municipal corporation has no inherent or implied power to grant aid to, or subscribe to the stock of, a private corporation, and may validly do so only when empowered by valid charter or statutory provision.

A municipal corporation has power to grant aid to,⁸⁹ or to subscribe to the stock of,⁹⁰ a private corporation when, and only when, such power is clearly and expressly conferred on it by the legislature.

A municipal corporation has no inherent or implied power in this respect,⁹¹ and hence it has no implied power to make donations to,⁹² or to subscribe to the stock of,⁹³ a railroad company, to provide funds for the performance of the duty of a railroad company,⁹⁴ or to make donations to an electric company.⁹⁵ All unauthorized municipal transactions of this character are ultra vires and void;⁹⁶ they create no liability on the part of the municipality,⁹⁷ and, where money has been paid in pursuance thereof, it may be recovered back.⁹⁸

On the other hand, when not restrained by constitutional provisions, the legislature may confer on a municipal corporation the power to subscribe to legislative act directing purchase and use of voting machines was not conferred by constitutional authority to borrow money "temporarily" to meet deficiency in city treasury.—Norris v. Mayor and City Council of Baltimore, supra.

the stock of,⁹⁹ or to make appropriations from public moneys for the benefit of,¹ private corporations. The power may be conferred by a general law,² the charter of the municipal corporation,³ or the charter of the corporation to be aided.⁴ A statute empowering municipal corporations generally to aid in the construction of a railway, or to subscribe to the capital stock of railroad companies, may operate to confer such power on a municipality incorporated thereafter⁵ or under a special charter;⁶ but power conferred on a particular class of municipal or public corporations does not extend to another class.⁷

The statutes conferring power should be strictly construed⁸ and not held to confer authority beyond their terms.⁹ It has been asserted that the extent of the legislative authority is merely to confer on a municipal corporation power to be exercised or not exercised at its option;¹⁰ but the fact that a particular statute employs mandatory language does not prevent it from conferring on the municipal corporation the power to act voluntarily thereunder.¹¹

Repeal of statutes. The rules governing the repeal of statutes generally, discussed in the C.J.S. title Statutes §§ 278-303, also 59 C.J. p 899 note 1-p 940 note 67, are applicable in determining whether a statute empowering municipal corporations to grant aid to, or to subscribe to the stock of, private corporations has been repealed by subsequent legislation.¹²

b. Constitutional Provisions

Constitutional provisions prohibiting such aid by a municipality to a private corporation as making a donation, lending or pledging credit, or subscribing to or purchasing stock, or forbidding the legislature to authorize a municipality to take such action, should be construed with reference to the evils they were intended to correct, and such provisions render void any municipal or legislative action prohibited thereby.

ing the amount of aid which may be authorized,²⁰ should be construed with reference to the evils they were intended to correct. Such a provision is a limitation of power,²¹ and not a grant thereof.²² If a general constitutional provision of this nature conflicts with a special constitutional provision, the latter controls.²³

The constitutional provisions are not retroactive,²⁴ and the obligation of existing contracts is not impaired thereby;²⁵ but any municipal or legislative action which is prohibited thereby, and is taken after the limitation goes into operation, is null and void²⁶ and cannot be condoned under the guise of a public development²⁷ or on the ground that a highly commendable public purpose is served thereby.²⁸

A constitutional provision forbidding municipal corporations to grant aid withdraws all power to grant such aid under previous statutory authority;²⁹ but a provision that the legislature shall not authorize municipal corporations to grant aid has been held not to forbid municipalities from acting under previous authority,³⁰ the restriction being merely on the future action of the legislature.³¹ A statute au-

Tex.—Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Galveston County, Civ.App., 161 S.W.2d 530, affirmed 169 S.W.2d 713, 141 Tex. 31.

Purpose

(1) The evident purpose of the prohibition was to confine municipalities to the objects for which they were created and to restrain the legislature from authorizing any perversion of them.—Commonwealth ex rel. City of Philadelphia Police Pension Fund Ass'n v. Walton, 38 A. 790, 182 Pa. 373, 61 Am.S.R. 712.

(2) The mischief interdicted by such provision is business partnership between municipality or subdivision of state and private corporations or associations, and such section forbids union of public and private capital or credit in any enterprise.—Walker v. Cincinnati, 21 Ohio St. 14, 8 Am.R. 24—McGuire v. City of Cincinnati, App., 40 N.E.2d 485, appeal dismissed 38 N.E.2d 1023, 139 Ohio St. 218.

Insurance of public property; Non

Under such a provision, also specifying that it shall not prevent the thorizing a city to subscribe for stock in a corporation confers a power which may be modified, changed, enlarged, restrained, or repealed by a state constitution,³² as such a statute does not import a contract within the clause of the United States Constitution prohibiting a law which impairs the obligation of a contract, as discussed in Constitutional Law § 308. If the contract by the municipal corporation to subscribe to the stock of, or to make a donation to, a railway company was unauthorized, the company may not claim any vested right which would prevent the operation of a constitutional amendment, afterward adopted, forbidding such a transaction.³³ In order to constitute a violation of a provision prohibiting the lending of credit, it is essential that there be an imposition of liability, directly or indirectly, on the municipal body.³⁴

A constitutional provision against state aid does not apply to municipal corporations.³⁵ Likewise, a constitutional restriction on the power of counties does not apply to cities;³⁶ and a restriction on municipal corporations does not apply to an appropriation made by the legislature directly out of the state treasury.³⁷

c. Status or Purpose of Corporation

(1) In general

(2) Another municipality

(1) In General

The type of corporation to which constitutional inhibitions on municipal aid to corporations will apply depends on the language of the provisions; such provisions generally apply only to private, and not to public, corporations and enterprises.

In the absence of constitutional prohibition municipal aid may be authorized and granted to a plank road company,³⁸ a private corporation performing a charitable function,³⁹ a private corporation furnishing water to a municipality,⁴⁰ or to a hospital which cares for a municipality's indigent sick,⁴¹ but not to corporations engaged in manufacturing⁴² or other private enterprises.⁴³ Under a statute authorizing aid to any company incorporated under the laws of the state in the construction of a highway bridge, aid cannot be given to a foreign corporation.⁴⁴

A constitutional provision prohibiting a municipality from subscribing to the stock of, or making an appropriation or lending its credit in aid of, any corporation, has been held to apply only to private, and not to public, corporations,⁴⁵ and a hospital corporation has been held a private corporation within such provision;⁴⁶ a similar constitutional provision prohibiting such action as to any private corporation has been held to apply only to corporations having a capital stock or organized for profit.⁴⁷ Likewise, a constitutional provision forbidding the legislature to authorize any municipality to appropriate money for, or to lend its credit to, any corporation has no application to a public corporation.⁴⁸

or to a private corporation which is really an agency formed and incorporated for the purpose of carrying on a public undertaking to which the municipality, under authority of law, has committed itself and pledged its honor and credit,⁴⁹ but is restricted to the appropriation of public funds to a purely private enterprise.⁵⁰ A constitutional provision may be such as to prevent gifts or loans of public money or property to a private corporation, but not to prohibit gifts of moneys to a public corporation for public purposes,⁵¹ while at the same time permitting the use of its credit by a municipality only for the purposes of such municipality and prohibiting it from giving or lending its credit to or in aid of any public or private corporation;⁵² a school district has been held a public corporation within such provision.⁵³

Municipal aid to railroads falls within the prohibitions contained in some constitutions,⁵⁴ but in the absence of constitutional prohibition it is generally,⁵⁵ although not always,⁵⁶ held that municipalities may be authorized by the legislature to grant such aid; and a statute authorizing cities to aid in the building or reconstruction of a street railway has been upheld as for the promotion of a public purpose.⁵⁷ It has been both affirmed⁵⁸ and denied⁵⁹ that the legislature may authorize a municipal corporation to lend its aid to a corporation engaged in navigation.

A constitutional provision prohibiting a municipality from appropriating money for, or granting aid or making gifts to, a corporation does not apply so as to prevent a municipality from appropriating or paying money for or to such a public corporation as a humane society⁶⁰ or a public library corporation;⁶¹ also, a state normal college,⁶² or the state itself,⁶³ or an agency thereof,⁶⁴ or the United States,⁶⁵ or an agency of the municipality⁶⁶ is not a corporation of the character and kind contemplated by constitutional provisions of the kind discussed in this section, and, even where constitutional prohibitions refer to public and private corporations, the United States has been held, in this connection, neither a public nor a private corporation.⁶⁷ A constitutional prohibition has been held to apply to a gift of money by a municipality to a county to be used for the repair of the county buildings,⁶⁸ but not to prevent an arrangement whereby a city and county unite in making a public improvement.⁶⁹

Where municipal corporations are given power to aid specified corporations or corporations answering a general description, the power cannot be extended by construction so as to embrace corporations not coming within such description.⁷⁰ A statute authorizing municipal aid to railway companies may be so worded and construed as to authorize aid to companies organized after the passage of the act as well as to those formed prior thereto.⁷¹

A constitutional prohibition against a municipal corporation subscribing for stock, or becoming a stockholder, in any corporation is not violated by aid to a public corporation which does not issue stock;⁷² but, by virtue of constitutional prohibition of this nature, municipalities may be barred from becoming members of a mutual insurance association whose subscribers are stockholders in such company,⁷³ although such provision does not prohibit a municipality from being brought under the provisions of a workmen's compensation act if insurance is carried in an old-line insurance company as distinguished from a mutual company.⁷⁴

(2) Another Municipality

A constitutional provision prohibiting aid by a municipal corporation to "any corporation" or a public corporation applies to aid to another municipal corporation, but a provision as to aid to a private corporation does not.

As used in a constitutional provision prohibiting the legislature from authorizing a municipal corporation to become a stockholder in, obtain or appropriate money for, or lend its credit to, any corporation except for certain stated purposes, the word "corporation" has been held to embrace a municipal corporation.⁷⁵ Such provision has been held to prohibit a municipality from making any donation, except for the stated purposes, to another municipal corporation,⁷⁶ such as an independent school district;⁷⁷ while this provision does not prevent a municipality from participating with another municipality in a function which it is permitted or required to perform by itself⁷⁸ and by which its inhabitants will reap a commensurate benefit,⁷⁹ it does prohibit a municipality from donating to a project from which no benefit may be received by it⁸⁰ or in which it may not independently engage.⁸¹

Within the meaning of a constitutional provision prohibiting a municipality from giving or lending its credit to, or in aid of, any public or private corporation, "public" corporations include municipal corporations,⁸² such as a school district.⁸³ On the other hand, a municipal corporation is not within a constitutional provision prohibiting a municipality from lending its credit in aid of any railroad or private corporation.⁸⁴

Municipality not holding funds in own right. A constitutional provision prohibiting a municipality from making a donation to, or lending it credit in aid of, any railroad or private corporation has been held to apply only to municipalities holding funds or properties in their own right;⁸⁵ thus, it does not apply to a housing authority which must hold in separate accounts funds granted by the state, and which may therefore be regarded as mere conduits between the state appropriation and the corporation developing the housing units.⁸⁶

d. Particular Aid or Transactions

Various particular transactions, or forms of aid, affecting public utilities, railroad companies, and other corporations have been held not to come within the operation of constitutional inhibitions on the giving of aid by municipalities to corporations or on subscription by municipalities to stock.

if authorized, is not invalid.⁸⁷ Where the municipality is to derive a benefit from a contract or transaction,⁸⁸ and there is a legal consideration therefor,⁸⁹ there is no violation of a constitutional prohibition of a donation or gift, or a loan of credit, by a municipality to a corporation.

Under general authority to give aid, a municipal corporation may in its discretion⁹⁰ subscribe for stock⁹¹ or make a donation.⁹² On the other hand, power to subscribe to the stock of a railway company does not authorize a donation in aid of the company⁹³ or a loan of the credit of the municipality.⁹⁴ A contract for the purchase of parking meters is not an illegal appropriation of public funds for the benefit of a private corporation, where the meters are to be paid for only from receipts.⁹⁵

ity from making donations or lending its credit to, or subscribing to the stock of, corporations do not operate to forbid a municipality to appropriate money to a public agency for a public purpose⁹⁶ or to a branch or agency of the municipality,⁹⁷ or for a public and municipal purpose expressly authorized by act of the legislature,⁹⁸ or to forbid a municipality to construct, own,⁹⁹ purchase,¹ sell, or lease² a public utility, or to forbid a municipality to supply water free of charge, from the municipal waterworks, to public, religious, educational, or charitable institutions.³ Likewise, such provisions do not disable a municipality to have any dealings⁴ or contractual relations⁵ with a railroad company or other private corporation, to purchase all the capital stock of a private corporation solely for the purpose of lawfully acquiring the physical property of such corporation⁶ for a public use constitutionally defined

Also, such constitutional provisions have been held not violated by the closing of a street, the fee of which is not owned by the city, for the benefit of a railroad company and without compensation to the city;¹⁶ by the refusal of the municipal council, in the exercise of discretion vested in it by statute, to assess against a street railway company the cost of paving between streetcar tracks;¹⁷ by the lease of municipally owned land to a hospital corporation in consideration of care of the poor of the municipality;¹⁸ by the issuance of bonds for the acquisition, improvement, and development of land for an airport;¹⁹ by expenditures in payment of dues and assessments of a municipality as a member of a municipal league,²⁰ or in payment of dues to a United States conference of mayors;²¹ by the payment by a municipality to a water company, to secure for its inhabitants a water supply and for itself a supply for fire purposes, of certain sums toward the construction of mains and pipe lines;²² by a loan of credit or the making of a donation to a housing authority to cover the administrative expenses and overhead of the authority the first year and from time to time making other donations;²³ or by other transactions.²⁴ Likewise such constitutional provisions have been held not to be violated by various statutes and ordinances authorizing particular municipal action.²⁵

On the other hand, in jurisdictions where constitutional prohibitions exist, it has been held that a municipality cannot enter into a partnership with a railroad company or other private corporation;²⁶ build a section of a railroad in its limits, intended ultimately to form part of a continuous line of road to be operated and equipped by private capital;²⁷ purchase property on credit and donate it to a private corporation;²⁸ donate money, obtained on the forfeiture of its franchise by a railway company, to its successor;²⁹ obtain for a railroad a right of way through municipal boundaries;³⁰ exchange railroad bonds for capital stock;³¹ acquire the controlling stock of an electric company;³² take over paving contracts of a private corporation, issue bonds therefor, and assess abutting property;³³ co-operate with a state centennial corporation and construct auditoriums to effectuate the objects of the corporation and exposition;³⁴ or, under the guise of paying a water company for the use of hydrants, pay a rate so unreasonably high as to amount to double the cost of extending mains which, on completion, will be the property of the company.³⁵

Elimination of grade crossings. Some,³⁶ but not other,³⁷ financial arrangements between a municipality and a railroad company relative to the elevation of tracks or the elimination of grade crossings have been held to come within the scope of constitutional prohibitions.

A guaranty by a municipal corporation of the bonds or other obligations of a private corporation is not within, and cannot be deduced from, the general powers usually and ordinarily conferred on it,³⁸ but requires special legislative grant which is found in the words "to obtain money on loan on the faith and credit of the city,"³⁹ although not in the words "to subscribe for stock and issue bonds to pay for the same."⁴⁰ A city has no power to execute a guaranty of a promissory note, as incidental to a power given by charter to sell negotiable paper.⁴¹

A release from a pecuniary burden cannot be distinguished in principle, in the application of the constitutional prohibitions, from direct pecuniary aid;⁴² but the cancellation by a municipality of a present debt for a future benefit is not a donation.⁴³

§ 1871. Exercise of Power in General

The power of a municipal corporation to grant aid to, or subscribe to the stock of, private corporations must be exercised in the mode prescribed in the grant of power.

The power conferred on a municipal corporation to grant aid to, or to subscribe to the stock of, private corporations must be exercised in the mode and manner prescribed in the grant of power.⁴⁴ A subsidy is valid when it has been granted in substantial compliance with the essential statutory or constitutional requisites,⁴⁵ but a subscription obtained by fraud and bribery cannot be validated.⁴⁶ A municipality cannot avoid a subscription to the stock of a railway company on the ground that the contract of subscription contains a stipulation in favor of the municipality which the company was unauthorized to make;⁴⁷ such a stipulation, if severable from the remaining portions of the contract, may be disregarded⁴⁸ and the agreement enforced as far as it is valid.⁴⁹ The mere fact that some of the officers who act for the municipality are also stockholders in the railway company aided has been held not per se to invalidate the contract;⁵⁰ but under other authority, when the question of voting aid depends on the discretion of the city officers, councilmen who are stockholders in the railroad company are not competent to act,⁵¹ and a grant of aid carried by their votes will not be valid.⁵² The fact that the municipality has exercised its power by a grant of aid to a particular railway company does not affect its power to grant aid again to the same company.⁵³

§ 1872. Petition of Taxpayers or Electors

It is necessary and, in the absence of fraud, sufficient to comply substantially with a statutory requirement of a petition signed by taxpayers or electors as a condition precedent to municipal aid to, or subscription to the stock of, a private corporation.

Where the statute requires a petition signed by a specified number or proportion of taxpayers or electors of a municipality as a condition precedent to a municipal grant of aid to, or subscription to the stock of, a private corporation or to the calling of an election on the question of making such subscription or grant of aid, substantial compliance with such a requirement is necessary,⁵⁴ and such compliance is sufficient⁵⁵ in the absence of fraud.⁵⁶ A subscription cannot be made to a railroad other than that designated by the petition;⁵⁷ but the corporation aided need not be designated by name if it is identified by description.⁵⁸ The board, council, or tribunal to which the petition is addressed is called on to determine whether it conforms to legal requirements,⁵⁹ and it has been both held⁶⁰ and denied⁶¹ that its determination is conclusive.

§ 1873. Submission to Popular Vote

- a. In general
- b. Sufficiency

a. In General

A vote by the citizens, taxpayers, or electors of the municipal corporation is essential to municipal aid to, or subscription to the stock of, private corporations if such vote is required by constitution or statute, but not otherwise. Such grant of aid or subscription must conform to the terms of the power granted by the election.

A municipal corporation may be empowered by statute to grant aid to, or subscribe to the stock of, private corporations without any vote by the citizens, taxpayers, or electors of the municipality⁶² unless there is a constitutional provision making an election a condition precedent to valid municipal action.⁶³ The common law gives no recognition to the practice of submitting the question of municipal aid to a railroad or other corporation to a popular vote,⁶⁴ and therefore elections held by municipal corporations without legislative direction or authority are unnecessary⁶⁵ and futile.⁶⁶ On the other hand, where an election is prescribed by constitution or statute as authority for giving municipal aid to corporations, it is indispensable to the validity of municipal action.⁶⁷ Constitutional provisions as to elections are prospective only and do not affect valid action previously taken by a municipality;⁶⁸ but, when inhibitory, they operate to repeal all authorizing statutes not expressly excepted.⁶⁹ Where the municipal authorities are simply empowered to grant aid on the consent of the taxpayers, such consent does not render a grant of aid obligatory;⁷⁰ but where the statute provides that the authorities shall, in case of the assent of the taxpayers or electors of the municipality, grant the aid, there is merely a ministerial duty on the part of the authorities.⁷¹

In making a grant of aid to, or a subscription to the stock of, a railway company in pursuance of an election, the municipal officers must conform to the terms of the power conferred by the election.⁷² In determining what was voted, consideration will be given to the will of the taxpayers as expressed by ballot,⁷³ but not to mere pre-election arguments or representations.⁷⁴

b. Sufficiency

- (1) In general
- (2) Call or order for, and notice of, election
- (3) Qualification and registration of voters
- (4) Determination and certification of result
- (5) Contest of election
- (6) Second election

(1) In General

Compliance with all legal requirements is essential to the validity of an election on the question of municipal aid to, or subscription to the stock of, a private corporation; but mere irregularities in conducting the election, not affecting the result, do not vitiate it.

In general, compliance with every requirement of the law is essential to the validity of an election on the question of a municipal grant of aid to, or subscription to the stock of, a private corporation.⁷⁵ The proposition submitted must comply with the terms of the statute authorizing the submission.⁷⁶ Where the statute under which the vote is taken does not require the vote to be with reference to a particular railway company, but authorizes the subscription in favor of any railway having a particular location, the proposition submitted need not designate any particular railway company,⁷⁷ but, when the statute so requires, this must be done.⁷⁸ Under at least one statute the question merely of aid or no aid is voted on,⁷⁹ the amount and terms of the grant of aid being left to the discretion of the municipal authorities.⁸⁰ The proposition should be submitted singly and disconnected from any other question;⁸¹ and hence it is improper to submit as one question grants of aid to two railway companies, so that the voters will have to vote either for or against both grants;⁸² but, where the only object of the electors of a town in granting aid to a railway company is to procure the construction of a railway from a certain point to such town, the question may be submitted to them in such a form as to provide that the aid shall be given to that one of two companies which shall first complete its road between such points.⁸³ A form of ballot which is so clear and explicit that no voter could be deceived or led into error as to the effect of his vote is amply sufficient.⁸⁴

The question can be submitted only at elections specified by the statutes.⁸⁵ Where there is no express provision as to the mode of conducting the election, it should be conducted in the usual manner of conducting elections in the municipality.⁸⁶ The proposition is carried when it receives the prescribed majority of the votes cast on the proposition⁸⁷ unless the assent of a majority of all the qualified voters is expressly required;⁸⁸ and the legislature is impotent to reduce the majority prescribed by the constitution as authority for municipal aid.⁸⁹

An election is vitiated by fraud, bribery, or corruption,⁹⁰ but not by mere irregularities, in conducting the election, which do not change the result.⁹¹

(2) Call or Order for, and Notice of, Election

The call, order, or notice of election must conform to statutory requirements.

An election called before the act authorizing it goes into effect is void.⁹² The question as to who is to call the election is a matter of statutory regulation,⁹³ and unless it is called by the officers designated by the statute it confers no authority.⁹⁴ A call or order for an election made before there has been a compliance with statutory conditions precedent is invalid;⁹⁵ but, where the board or officers by whom the election is called are given jurisdiction to determine whether the conditions precedent have been performed, their order calling the election is a finding that such conditions exist,⁹⁶ and their action is not subject to collateral attack.⁹⁷

The notice of election should comply with statutory requirements⁹⁸ and contain such statements as will fairly advise the voters of the object of the election.⁹⁹ When not required by statute, the notice need not state the conditions on which the subscription is to be made as specified in the petition for the election.¹

(3) Qualification and Registration of Voters

Statutory provisions are controlling in determining who is entitled to vote and whether registration is necessary.

Statutory provisions are controlling in determining who is entitled to vote² and whether registration is necessary.³ The election has been held not to be invalidated by reason of a failure to furnish to the election commissioners a certified list of voters⁴ or because the registration commissioners styled themselves "commissioners of election."⁵

(4) Determination and Certification of Result

The manner of determining the result of the election is generally regulated by statute.

The manner of determining the result of the election is generally expressly regulated by the statutes.⁶ If the managers of the election fail to certify the result, and their certificate is not made exclusive evidence thereof, the result may be determined by the officers of the municipality on whom the duty of granting the aid rests.⁷

(5) Contest of Election

A municipal corporation cannot impugn an election which it held and for which it is responsible.

The election may be contested by a taxpayer, as discussed infra § 2134; but the municipality cannot impugn an election which it held and for which it is responsible,⁸ especially after the completion of the railroad for the construction of which the aid was voted.⁹

(6) Second Election

In the absence of statutory restriction, a second election may be held where the first did not result in favor of the grant or was invalid, or may be held for the purpose of authorizing a second grant of aid.

Where there is nothing in the statute to indicate that the power to grant municipal aid is to be considered exhausted after an unsuccessful attempt to exercise it, the question of aid may, in case an election does not result in favor of the grant, be resubmitted to the voters,¹⁰ and this is also true where the first election is invalid.¹¹ Also, where the authority of the municipality is unlimited, it may, after one election has resulted in favor of a grant of aid to a railway company, hold a second election for the purpose of authorizing a second grant of aid.¹² However, where a municipal corporation has voted a conditional subscription to the stock of a railway company, it has no power, unless expressly authorized by statute, to call a second election for the purpose of changing the terms of the subscription.¹³

§ 1874. Conditional Grant or Subscription

Municipal aid to, or subscription to the stock of, a private corporation may be on condition, provided the condition is not inconsistent with statutes or public policy; and no municipal liability arises until performance of the conditions.

General authority of a municipality to grant aid to, or to subscribe to the stock of, a private corporation includes authority to make a conditional subscription or grant of aid,¹⁴ provided the condition is not one prohibited by public policy¹⁵ or inconsistent with the statutes.¹⁶ In particular cases, certain matters have been held not to be conditions precedent;¹⁷ but, where municipal subscriptions are on conditions precedent, no liability on the part of the municipality arises until performance of such conditions.¹⁸ Where the grant of aid is conditional, and the time for the performance of the conditions is specified, the conditions should be performed within such time;¹⁹ and, where no time is fixed within which the conditions are to be performed, performance must take place within a reasonable time.²⁰ Where there has been a breach of a condition, it has been held that the municipality may properly sue to recover damages therefor.²¹

A municipal subscription to stock of a railroad company may be rescinded with the latter's consent, or for its violation of the subscription contract, or when nothing has been done and no rights of third persons have intervened.

A subscription by a municipal corporation to the stock of a railroad company may be rescinded with consent of the beneficiary,²² or on the ground that the company has violated the contract of subscription,²³ or when nothing has been done and no rights of third persons have intervened.²⁴

§ 1876. Application of Proceeds

Where the section of railroad to aid the construction of which a municipal corporation subscribes for stock is paid for out of the company's own means, the municipal payment may, as against a contractor with the company, the municipality not complaining, be applied to a mortgage debt.

Where a municipal corporation subscribes for stock of a railroad company for the purpose of aiding the construction of a designated section of railroad, but such section is completed by the company and paid for out of its own means, the amount paid by the municipality may, as against a contractor with the company, the municipality not complaining, be applied to the discharge of a mortgage debt.²⁵

§ 1877. Rights and Liabilities of Municipality

A municipal corporation which subscribes to the stock of a private corporation generally has the same rights and is subject to the same liabilities as other subscribers or stockholders.

Generally speaking, a municipal corporation which has made a valid subscription to the stock of a railroad company or other private corporation has the same rights²⁶ and is subject to the same liabilities²⁷ as other subscribers or stockholders. A municipality which has in the exercise of statutory authority subscribed to railroad stock and appointed directors to represent such stock cannot without express authority appoint directors to represent an in-

B. ADMINISTRATION IN GENERAL, APPROPRIATIONS, WARRANTS, AND PAYMENT

1. IN GENERAL

Municipal corporations generally have the right to control and manage their finances.

Municipal corporations generally have the right to control and manage their finances,³⁰ and control of the finances of a city is usually vested by statute or charter in the city council,³¹ although the power given is merely authority to administer the finances of the city in accordance with law.³² The courts will not administer or supervise the financial affairs of a municipality,³³ nor will they interfere in the absence of fraud or abuse of power.³⁴ The courts will not hear any complaint from strangers of the mismanagement of municipal funds.³⁵

A statute intended to place all cities on a sound financial basis so far as it is possible to do so by legislation³⁶ should be interpreted so as to effectuate its purpose.³⁷ Also, a statute dealing with municipal finance carries with it an implication that all other provisions of law are to yield to its terms.³⁸

Fiscal year. Financial affairs are generally handled on a fiscal year basis.³⁹ Where a statute fixes the commencement of the fiscal year of a village,⁴⁰

but also confers power on the village board to change the date,⁴¹ the only way which the change may be effected by the board is by the passage of a valid ordinance for that purpose.⁴²

Investigation and audit. In some jurisdictions the statutes provide for the summary investigation of municipal expenditures by experts appointed by the courts.⁴³ A commission authorized to conduct an audit is not thereby empowered to survey or review accounting procedures.⁴⁴ A statute requiring an audit of the books of a municipality by state officials on the petition of a certain per cent of its voters has been held to require the proper city officers to request such action when a proper petition is presented, but not to authorize the state officials to act directly on the petition of the voters.⁴⁵

§ 1879. Adjustment of Accounts with Other Political Bodies

Where a municipal corporation collects state funds, it must apportion or pay them to the state or other governmental body in accordance with statute.

Mayor; supervision and control

Law giving mayor general supervision and control over expenditure of all money appropriated by city "in addition to other powers now conferred upon him" was not inclusive of authority given mayor in earlier section of same law to approve appropriated expenditures in excess of amount expended for same purpose in preceding year, but was a limitation to correct condition not within official discretion.—*Kearns v. funds, it must apportion or pay them to the state or other governmental body in accordance with statute.⁴⁶ Under a statute authorizing the county treasurer to collect special city assessments, the county is not liable to the city for a shortage in the money turned over where liability is not imposed on it by statute⁴⁷ and it has not received either the money diverted⁴⁸ or a resulting benefit therefrom.⁴⁹

Under a statute providing for an apportionment by commissioners among cities and towns constituting a metropolitan park district of the annual payments required to reimburse the state for the cost and maintenance of certain parks and improvements in the district, the commissioners have been held to be clothed with a wide discretion.⁵⁰

2. FUNDS

§ 1880. Collection and Custody

The treasurer or chief fiscal officer of a municipal corporation is charged with the duty of receiving and having the custody of its funds.

The treasurer or other chief fiscal officer of a municipal corporation is charged with the duty of receiving and having the custody of its funds.⁵¹ The word "custody," as used in a statute relating to the custody of money belonging to a municipal corporation, means immediate charge and control under the law,⁵² and not the final and absolute control incident to ownership.⁵³ An ordinance in conflict with a statute relating to the custody of municipal funds is void.⁵⁴ Public moneys in the treasury of a municipal corporation are held in trust for the benefit of the inhabitants.⁵⁵ A contract provision as to the time when a private corporation shall pay a specified sum into the city treasury will be given effect.⁵⁶

Deposit of funds. Municipal funds may⁵⁷ and, when so required by law, must⁵⁸ be deposited in a bank. The depository may be designated by the council⁵⁹ or the mayor and council,⁶⁰ unless a designation by the treasurer is expressly required by statute.⁶¹ It has been held that a foreign corporation may not legally act as a depository of funds under control of the city treasurer.⁶² An ordinance requiring the depository to give security will be given effect where it does not contravene any constitutional or statutory provision.⁶³ Under some Compromise and settlement of municipal claims. Municipal funds may not be legally disbursed unless and until the statutory prerequisites are observed.

Funds may not be legally disbursed unless and until the statutory prerequisites are observed and performed.⁸⁴ Municipal funds must be disbursed through public officers,⁸⁵ and not through private agencies.⁸⁶ A disbursing officer may pay out municipal funds only as authorized by law,⁸⁷ and a void ordinance affords him no legal protection;⁸⁸ moreover, it has been held that, where municipal funds are disbursed without authority of law, the recipient holds the money in an involuntary trust for the municipal corporation.⁸⁹ It has been held that a city may not refuse to disburse money in its treasury on the ground of doubt of its power to make the levy which brought it in.⁹⁰ An ordinance relating to the disbursement of municipal funds is valid where it falls within the scope of powers conferred or duties imposed by charter or statute⁹¹ and is not in conflict with any charter or statutory provision.⁹²

funds for administrative purposes is within the discretion of the municipal legislative body;⁹⁵ but a municipal corporation has no power to create a fund for a purpose prohibited by charter or statute.⁹⁶

A general fund of a municipal corporation may be composed of such revenues from enumerated sources as a valid charter or statutory provision requires to be credited to the fund⁹⁷ or of all money coming into the treasury which is not required by statute or otherwise to be kept in a special fund and applied to a particular purpose.⁹⁸ Whether a fund is a special fund, and, if so, the nature, purpose, and extent of its dedication, are to be determined by the statute or ordinance under which it is raised or held.⁹⁹ It has been held that funds whose use is limited to a particular purpose, such as trust funds, or the proceeds of a tax levied for a particular purpose, must be segregated in a special fund and should not be commingled with the general funds of the municipality.¹ Funds which have a source of income other than from taxes often have special burdens that may not be imposed on other funds.²

Working cash fund. It has been held that a working cash fund may be established;³ and such a fund is a revolving fund to meet the current cash needs of the municipality and the funds therein are not appropriable assets.⁴

Emergency fund. Under some statutes an emergency fund may be created for the purpose of meeting deficiencies in other funds.⁵ The establishment and use of an emergency fund are discretionary with the governing body of the municipality,⁶ but such discretion must be honest and not arbitrary,⁷ and may be subject to the approval of a state board.⁸

A state relief fund, allocated to municipalities according to need for local relief, is not an appropriable asset of a municipality.⁹

3. APPROPRIATIONS AND PAYMENTS

§ 1885. Appropriations

- a. In general
- b. Budgets

a. In General

As a general rule, an appropriation is necessary to support the disbursement of municipal funds.

As a general rule an appropriation is necessary to support the disbursement of municipal funds.¹⁰ However, where a utility is operated by a municipal corporation without the aid of taxation, operating expenses, replacements, and extensions may be paid from the income of the utility without an appropriation,¹¹ but even in such case it has been held that, whether or not an appropriation ordinance is necessary, it is proper.¹²

Financial statements and reports. Official statements and reports of fiscal conditions constitute the proper basis for administrative or legislative action, when made by officers thereunto duly authorized,¹³ and in the manner and form required by law.¹⁴ The municipal corporation may be required to make an annual report showing its true fiscal condition as of the close of the year,¹⁵ and it has been held that the statement should be made as of the close of the fiscal year and there should not be included either receipts or disbursements occurring after the close of the fiscal year.¹⁶ Under some statutes the municipal fiscal officers are required to make annual or semiannual reports as to their financial transactions for the period, and such report must be published in a newspaper in the municipality,¹⁷ and a municipal corporation may be required to publish annually a financial statement of a utility which it owns and operates.¹⁸ A statute requiring the comptroller to make an annual report to the city council does not require the council to accept the figures shown in the report in estimating the surplus available for appropriation.¹⁹ A certificate of the city comptroller that there is in the hands of the treasurer a sum sufficient to pay a particular ap-

Expenditure in anticipation of appropriation

Order directing committee on fire department to purchase pumping engine, cost to be charged to unexpended balances until further provision should be made did not fall within statute empowering city officers to make expenditures in anticipation of appropriations.—Burt v. Municipal Council of City of Taunton, 176 N.E. 511, 275 Mass. 535.

Absence of appropriation as not invalidating payment

Fact that there was no appropriation in village's annual appropriation ordinance to govern the fees for which vouchers were issued to village attorney and his two law partners for their services in connection with a village bond issue did not invalidate the payments.—Village of Forest Park v. Each municipality has full and untrammelled authority to adopt a separate budget for its own needs, and the practice of township to assess and collect taxes for town, and of township to adopt a budget which included the town which was adopted as a matter of expediency and without statutory authority, could not be sanctioned as a matter of law on ground that the practice was of long standing.—Bridgewater Tp. v. only where the aggregate of the estimate is in excess of statutory or constitutional limitations, where the item is in plain conflict with a statutory or constitutional provision, or where the item is for an unauthorized purpose.⁴⁶ As a result, where the item is a purely municipal matter, the board must usually approve the estimate and appropriate the requested sum,⁴⁷ and as a general rule the county board may not add or insert items of appropriation not requested by the municipality.⁴⁸ Under such an arrangement the municipality's estimate, within statutory limits, of the income to be derived from sources other than ad valorem taxation may not be disturbed by the county board.⁴⁹

Contents of budget. The statute or charter may provide for the items and amounts that may be included in the budget,⁵⁰ and may require that the budget make provision for certain expenditures, such as the salaries and wages of municipal officers and employees.⁵¹ Statutes and charters sometimes impose a limitation on the amount that may be budgeted,⁵² but such provision does not relieve the municipality of the duty of appropriating, and budgeting an expenditure which is made mandatory by statute.⁵³ The budget may include an appropriation for salaries for positions not yet created.⁵⁴ It is frequently provided that the budget set forth an itemized and detailed statement of the money required,⁵⁵ but the requirement of an itemized budget has been liberally construed⁵⁶ so as to permit the appropriation of small amounts for necessary expenditures in cases of emergency where particularization is not practical because the contingency may not be foretold.⁵⁷ It has been held that a budget consisting only of lump-sum estimates for each municipal department is insufficient,⁵⁸ but it has also been held that an appropriation in the budget to a department or subdepartment is sufficient.⁵⁹

It may be provided that an appropriation in the budget for equipment and materials should be to the department of purchase and should show the agency or institution for which the equipment or materials are intended.⁶⁰ The budget may make provision for contingent expenditures,⁶¹ but it is improper to provide for contemplated cost-of-living salary increases by a budget provision for "unforeseen expenditures,"⁶² and a provision for emergencies is limited to such as occur during the year for which the budget is adopted.⁶³

Emergency appropriation. Under a statute authorizing an emergency appropriation after the adoption of the municipal budget, the appropriation resolution must set out the nature of the emergency,⁶⁴ although it need not recite that an emergency exists requiring an emergency appropriation,⁶⁵ and it has been held that whether an emergency in fact exists is subject to judicial review and that the determination of the municipality is not conclusive.⁶⁶

Judicial review. The courts will not substitute their judgment for that of the officials to whom budget matters have been intrusted.⁶⁷ Where a statute provides for an administrative appeal to a state board, judicial review of the adoption of a budget is not available where that remedy has not been exhausted.⁶⁸ Unless the merits of the application are clear, the court will not exercise the prerogative writ of certiorari to review an item in the budget where to do so would work confusion in the financial affairs of the municipality.⁶⁹

§ 1886. — What Constitutes

An ordinance expressly setting apart and establishing out of the general resources of a municipal corporation a certain fund for a particular purpose is an appropriation ordinance.

Matters held not to constitute appropriations include the action of the council in ordering the payment out of the general fund of an indebtedness represented by a warrant;⁷³ an ordinance authorizing a purchase;⁷⁴ the legal transfer of money from one fund to another;⁷⁵ the awarding of damages to persons whose property is injured by the location or alteration of a street;⁷⁶ a pledge of the earnings of a power plant for payment of its cost;⁷⁷ an ordinance agreeing to refrain from taxing a slum clearance project;⁷⁸ an ordinance directing the improvement of a street at the expense of the property owners, the city not to be liable therefor;⁷⁹ and a release, for a consideration, of a claim for damages against a railroad company.⁸⁰

It has been held that an apportionment of revenues is not an appropriation thereof;⁸¹ but there is also authority to the contrary.⁸² An ordinance or resolution fixing the salary of a certain person or a certain number of persons may be considered as equivalent to an appropriation,⁸³ but the rule is otherwise as to an ordinance merely creating positions or fixing the salaries of a class of employees.⁸⁴ The consummation and ratification of a contract of purchase has been held to be a sufficient appropriation where the funds out of which the contract price may be made are then available.⁸⁵ An ordinance which is passed for the purpose of condemnation of land does not necessarily "involve the payment of money" within the meaning of a charter provision relating to ordinances involving the payment of money.⁸⁶

§ 1887. — Conditions Precedent, Requisites, and Validity

- a. In general
- b. Annual appropriation ordinance

a. In General

A municipal corporation has no power except that derived from charter or statute to appropriate money, and its funds may not be appropriated unless statutory or charter prerequisites are observed and performed.

A municipal corporation has no power except that derived from statute or charter to appropriate money,⁸⁷ and no funds may be appropriated unless statutory or charter prerequisites are observed and performed.⁸⁸ Statutes relating to appropriations are to be read and construed together.⁸⁹ Constitutional, statutory, and charter provisions govern as to the body or official authorized to make appropriations of municipal funds⁹⁰ and such power is generally intrusted to the council or other legislative body of the municipality.⁹¹

Form and procedure. When not otherwise provided by law, in making an appropriation the council of a municipal corporation may put its mandate in any form it chooses;⁹² all that is necessary is that the language shall clearly express its intent to make an appropriation.⁹³ However, there must be a compliance with statutory provisions,⁹⁴ such as provisions requiring a petition signed by a majority of the legal voters,⁹⁵ a popular vote,⁹⁶ publication of notice,⁹⁷ the vote of a certain majority of the municipal council,⁹⁸ a detailed and specific statement of the object of expenditure,⁹⁹ a statement of the amount appropriated for each object or purpose,¹ the lapse of a specified period between the introduction and enactment of the appropriation ordinance,² or the passage of the appropriation ordinance at or within a certain time;³ but there is a presumption that the body making the appropriation acted in accordance with law,⁴ and obviously a compliance with inapplicable provisions is unnecessary.⁵

Purpose for which appropriation may be made. Under some statutes an appropriation may not be made for any purpose not provided in the budget⁶ except in case of unforeseen emergencies and contingencies.⁷ An appropriation may not be made to cover a current expense incurred in a prior year,⁸ nor may an appropriation be made for an obligation maturing in a subsequent year;⁹ but this rule does not forbid an appropriation for capital expenditures or for the purchase of equipment which will remain in use after the fiscal year.¹⁰ A statute changing the fiscal year of a municipality so as to make it end on the last day of the calendar year has been construed to provide for the making of two appropriations, one for local purposes and the other for general purposes, for the period between the close of the present fiscal year and the close of the new fiscal year.¹¹ Authority to appropriate a fund to either of two purposes does not authorize a division of the fund between such purposes.¹²

Recommendation or estimate. Boards, commissions, officers, and heads of departments are sometimes required by charter, statute, or ordinance to submit estimates, requisitions, or recommendations of the amounts to be expended during the ensuing fiscal year.¹³ However, even though the recommendation of a particular officer or committee is provided for by ordinance, the council may waive or abrogate the requirement in a particular case,¹⁴ and is not deprived of the power to act by the mere inaction of the officer or committee.¹⁵ Also, some statutes authorize the council to make an appropriation without a recommendation on the failure of a designated officer to transmit such recommendation on request.¹⁶ A statute providing that an appropriation for a particular purpose shall be based on the estimate of a specified commission has been held to be directory only,¹⁷ and a provision as to the time of submitting an estimate has been held to be directory only.¹⁸ Some charters provide that no appropriation shall be made on an estimate for work done until a specified number of days after the filing and auditing of the estimate.¹⁹

Duty to make appropriation. The council or other body empowered to appropriate municipal funds is required to make appropriations directed by constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions²⁰ and to make appropriations for mandatory expenditures required by law,²¹ such as, in some cases, salaries,²² and it has been held that such duty is a continuing one.²³ Charter or statutory provisions sometimes make it the duty of the appropriating body of the city to appropriate the amount of the estimate or requisition submitted by the mayor, a head of department, a board or other official,²⁴ although the validity and legality of particular items included within the estimate may be questioned;²⁵ but in other cases the appropriating body may reduce,²⁶ but not increase,²⁷ the amount of an estimate or requisition.

Supplemental or amended appropriation. Under some statutes an appropriation ordinance may be amended or supplemented.²⁸ It has been held to be a condition precedent to a supplemental or additional appropriation that the income and revenue necessary therefor be accumulated or provided.²⁹

Conditional appropriation. Under the authority conferred by some charter provisions, an appropriation may contain reasonable terms and conditions, not inconsistent with law, as to the expenditure of the amount appropriated.³⁰ In the absence of express charter or statutory provision, it has been held that the council may attach conditions to the appropriation where the expenditure of the amount appropriated depends on some future action by the

Under some statutes and charters all appropriations must be made in an annual appropriation ordinance, and, with some exceptions, an appropriation otherwise made is invalid.

Under some statutes and charters all appropriations must be made in an annual appropriation ordinance,³⁴ and an appropriation otherwise made is invalid.³⁵ An exception is sometimes made where the appropriation is sanctioned by a majority of the legal voters of the municipality³⁶ or where the need for the appropriation arises after the adoption of the annual appropriation bill.³⁷ The appropriation ordinance must be in the form required by statute,³⁸ and, while it has been held that it is not necessary to enumerate countless items,³⁹ it is sometimes required by statute that the ordinance specify in detail the purposes of the appropriations and the amount for each purpose.⁴⁰ Such a statute is accorded a common-sense construction⁴¹ and an appropriation for a general purpose is sufficient to include every expenditure for that purpose, although there may be many items;⁴² but an appropriation for a number of purposes is insufficient where it does not specify the amount to be expended for each.⁴³ Under some statutes the annual appropriation ordinance is required to set forth estimates by classes of all current assets and liabilities of each fund.⁴⁴ It may also be required that the appro-

It has been held that an appropriation of municipal funds will be strictly construed, and will be construed, if possible, so as to uphold it.

It has been held that an appropriation of municipal funds will be strictly construed,⁵⁰ and will be construed, if possible, so as to uphold it.⁵¹ In the absence of evidence that the council intended something less, an appropriation for a particular purpose will be held to include matters necessary for that purpose;⁵² but a general term following an enumeration of specific matters will be limited to matters of the same class as those specifically mentioned.⁵³ After an appropriation has been made by the council for a department, the committee in charge thereof may lawfully incur debts and audit bills to be paid out of the appropriation therefor.⁵⁴ However, a voluntary appropriation of public property or the proceeds thereof by a municipality, when such appropriation is not associated with a contract as part of its obligation, does not remove such property or proceeds from the control of the municipality,⁵⁵ and it may alter⁵⁶ or repeal⁵⁷ the appropriation at pleasure; prior to actual payment of the sum appropriated, the person, association, or corporation for whose benefit it was made has no vested right in the fund⁵⁸ and may not sue at law on the appropriation as a contract.⁵⁹ A reappropriation for the same purpose of money previously appropriated and unexpended is unnecessary⁶⁰ and ineffective,⁶¹ even where part of the money appropriated is not disbursed during the year in which the appropriation was made;⁶² but an appropriation of a larger amount than is necessary for a particular purpose does not obligate the city to pay or expend the full amount.⁶³ The estimate of revenues for a current year by the mayor and council of a city, and the appropriation by them, of a large excess to a sinking fund, is prima facie proof of a surplus for the year⁶⁴ which is not overcome by the mayor's opinion that probably the revenues will not exceed the

Unless the case falls within a charter or statutory provision authorizing a transfer, a municipal appropriation for a particular object or purpose may not be transferred or diverted to another purpose.

Unless the case falls within a charter or statutory provision authorizing a transfer,⁶⁷ a municipal appropriation for a particular object or purpose may not be transferred or diverted to, or used for, another purpose⁶⁸ until the purpose for which the appropriation was made has been accomplished⁶⁹ or has ceased.⁷⁰ It has been held that surpluses from any particular budgeted fund of the city may not be used to pay liabilities which should be charged to another budgeted fund for the current year,⁷¹ but may be carried over and used in the succeeding year for any purpose authorized by law, whether or not budgeted.⁷² Where the amount of all the taxes collected by a city is sufficient to meet all the necessary expenses, the funds in the treasury may be applied to the full payment of the sum needed to exhaust one appropriation, even if that should not leave money enough to cover the full amount of another appropriation, if the exigencies of the city do not require that the whole of the latter appropriation be expended.⁷³

§ 1890. Payment of Indebtedness Generally

It is the duty of a municipal corporation to make provision for the payment of its valid debts and its usual and current expenses.

Moral and equitable obligations

(1) Municipalities may be compelled not only to recognize their legal obligations, but also to discharge those of an equitable and moral nature.—Sanger v. City of Bridgeport, 198 A. 746, 124 Conn. 183, 116 A.L.R. 1031.

(2) Municipal corporations are bound by the same principles of honesty and fair dealing as obtain in transactions between individuals, especially in view of statute authorizing a city to pay or compromise claims equitably payable, although not constituting obligations legally binding on city.—Boland v. City of Niagara Falls, 33 N.Y.S.2d 455, 178 Misc. 125.

Cash-basis law requiring municipal corporations to pay or refinance its outstanding obligations is mandatory and not discretionary.—Citizens' Bank of Weir v. Cherokee Tp., 25 P.2d 1019, 138 Kan. 282.

its usual and current expenses,⁷⁵ and actually to pay such debts where it has on hand funds which may be properly devoted thereto and are amply sufficient for the purpose.⁷⁶ Sometimes a statute relating to a particular financial obligation of a municipality does not provide any particular mode for its payment;⁷⁷ but, where a way in which a municipality shall pay its obligations is prescribed by charter or statute, such way must be strictly pursued,⁷⁸ and the same is true of a contract provision,⁷⁹ unless it is in conflict with a charter or statutory provision.⁸⁰

Statutes prescribing a certain vote, resolution, or order by the mayor and council to create municipal indebtedness do not apply to the payment of debts previously incurred,⁸¹ and, as far as the mayor and council are concerned, an obligation of the municipality to pay money is sufficient authority to pay without a new vote, resolution, or order.⁸² It has been held to be within the power of a town or city treasurer to indorse to the bank at which a note of the town or city is made payable a certified check made payable to the town or city, in order to provide the bank with the funds necessary to pay the note.⁸³

certificates of indebtedness,⁸⁸ in payment, he has no claim against the municipality for losses incurred by him in realizing on the same. A few statutes provide for the recovery of a penalty from a person who has received payment on a fraudulent contract with a municipality with notice that it was fraudulent.⁸⁹ Where the obligations are of equal degree, a municipality indebted to an individual may deduct from the amount owing him an amount which it is authorized by statute to collect from him.⁹⁰

Funds from which payable. All lawful obligations of a municipality are payable from its general fund in the absence of some special provision calling for payment from some other fund.⁹¹ On the other hand a claim, debt, or expense payable out of a special fund is payable only out of such fund,⁹² and not out of a general fund⁹³ or another special fund;⁹⁴ but a city may become liable for payment out of its general fund where it has failed to pursue its authority to raise money by the sale of bonds.⁹⁵ However, a city may not, by setting up a special fund to meet a general obligation of the city, thereby evade its general liability.⁹⁶ Where a municipal corporation contracts with respect to a particular fund, a debt arising on such contract is

Legislature cannot constitutionally release existing municipality from all liability for payment of validly incurred debts, although legislature imposes liability therefor on another public entity, unless creditor accepts new arrangement as novation extinguishing preexisting promise, but as long as there is no default, action of legislature cannot be complained of without showing of injury to creditor.—City of Fort Lauderdale v. payable only from that fund,⁹⁷ at least where the contract so provides.⁹⁸

Current income and expenses. Under some constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions, municipal debts incurred in a certain fiscal year are payable primarily out of the revenue for that year,⁹⁹ and the revenue of the current year may not be applied to the satisfaction of obligations incurred in a preceding year,¹ at least while there are legal outstanding obligations of the current year;² the general fund for a fiscal year may not be employed for any other purpose until all legal obligations of the general fund for that year are paid or provided for.³ It is likewise held that the moneys in a special fund for a particular fiscal year may be used for no other purpose than the payment of the legitimate claims chargeable against the fund and arising during that year⁴ until all such claims have been met and extinguished;⁵ but the charter provisions of some municipalities do not preclude the payment from the revenue of the year of debts and liabilities incurred in a preceding year.⁶ Where a city owning an electric light plant has a surplus of electricity remaining after discharging its public duty, it may expend current funds to put that power in use so as to supply electricity to its citizens for private use.⁷

Place of payment. A municipal corporation is not required to seek its creditors in order to discharge its debts.⁸ In the absence of special statutory authority, municipalities may not bind themselves to pay their indebtedness at any other place than at the municipal treasury;⁹ and a creditor must make demand there when payment is desired unless provision has been made for another place of payment.¹⁰

Interest. It has been held that a municipality is not liable to pay interest on its debts unless its consent to do so has been manifested by an act of the legislature or by a lawful contract of its executive officers.¹¹ In order to stop the running of interest a municipality is not bound to seek out its creditor and tender him the money due.¹²

Priorities. It has been held that a municipality should provide for and maintain its necessary governmental functions before making other expenditures and its duty of payment of other indebtedness is subordinate to its duty first to apply its income to the payment of governmental expense,¹³ so that, where the interest and principal of municipal bonds are specially charged on the general revenues of the city, only the surplus income, after legitimate expenses have been provided for, can be applied to such debt,¹⁴ but under some constitutional provisions, the payment of the municipality's debt, evidenced by bonds, and the payment of interest and the creation of a sinking fund must be first provided for, since the payment of current expenses is a secondary consideration.¹⁵ An obligation imposed by specific mandate of the legislature must be met out of the funds available for that purpose before those funds may be used for a mere permissive purpose.¹⁶ Priorities in the right to payment, sometimes fixed by statutes, especially in case of surplus revenues,¹⁷ are valid and enforceable.¹⁸ It has been held that, while each creditor is entitled to payment in full if the city is solvent,¹⁹ if the city is insolvent, equitable apportionment of available revenue which is common security for all is necessary.²⁰ It has also been held that general creditors of a municipality, whose claims are secured by the general power of taxation, are entitled to payment in the order in which they demand payment, where payment on presentation is authorized by law, and there is available a fund from which payment may be made;²¹ but this is true only where payment is made.²² Where payment is refused, the controlling factor in determining priority is not the time of the respective demands, but is rather the time of instituting legal proceedings.²³ It has been held that demands arising from the performance of statutory requirements take precedence over demands arising from contracts,²⁴ and that the latter are payable in the order of their maturity and demand for payment.²⁵

The fact that an insufficient sum was appropriated for certain claims or that the special fund out of which certain claims are payable is exhausted will not prevent the payment of such claims if there is money in the municipal treasury which may be applied thereto.

The fact that an insufficient sum was appropriated for certain claims,²⁶ or that a special fund out of which certain claims are payable is exhausted,²⁷ or has been appropriated for other purposes,²⁸ will not prevent the payment of such claims as long as there is money in the municipal treasury which may be applied thereto. Also, the failure or exhaustion of funds appropriated²⁹ or available³⁰ for the payment of a valid claim does not prevent the recovery of judgment on the claim; but, where a claim or debt is payable exclusively from a certain fund, the exhaustion of the fund prior to the filing of suit prevents recovery.³¹

4. WARRANTS AND CERTIFICATES OF INDEBTEDNESS

Distinguished from bond

(1) "Warrant," as distinguished from bond, is written declaration evidencing existing debt.—Pulte v. Keel, Tex.Civ.App., 297 S.W. 241, redrawn by an officer of a municipality on its treasurer, directing him to pay an amount of money specified to the person named, or his order, or bearer;³³ it is in the nature of an order given by the city on the city;³⁴ it is a general order, payable when funds are found,³⁵ and need not be payable on sight.³⁶ Neither the vote of a municipal corporation authorizing the payment of money to a person,³⁷ nor the minutes of a meeting of municipal officers showing an audit of a claim against the municipality,³⁸ constitute a warrant. While a warrant has been spoken of as being in the nature of, and to all intents and purposes, the promissory note of the municipal corporation,³⁹ strictly speaking, it is merely the means prescribed by law for drawing money from the treasury to pay the indebtedness of the corporation,⁴⁰ and is not a promissory note⁴¹ or bill of exchange.⁴² Municipal certificates of indebtedness are not "bills of credit" within the meaning of the federal constitution.⁴³

Warrants used to raise revenue such as tax anticipation warrants are discussed infra § 1905 in connection with bonds and other securities.

§ 1893. Power and Duty to Issue; Validity Generally.

Municipal corporations generally have power, either express or implied, to issue warrants or other ordinary evidences of indebtedness.

Municipal corporations generally have power,⁴⁴ either express⁴⁵ or implied,⁴⁶ to issue warrants or other ordinary evidence of indebtedness in certain cases.

Validity. In order to be valid, municipal warrants and certificates of indebtedness must be authorversed on other grounds Keel v. Pulte, Com.App., 10 S.W.2d 694.

(2) "Bond" and "warrant" distinguished generally see Bonds § 2.

Warrant as certificate of indebtedness

(1) Warrants are in a sense certificates of indebtedness, but a prohibition of the issuance of any form of certificate of indebtedness by a municipality may be coupled with a requirement that all claims shall be paid by warrant issued against some specified fund otherwise unappropriated—Glessman v. Garrett County Com'rs, 44 A.2d 862, 185 Md. 350.

(2) "'Time warrants' are not the ordinary warrants used in the payment of claims duly audited and allowed against municipalities;" they are sometimes regarded as certificates of indebtedness within the meaning of a statute.—Hubert v. Vero Beach, 112 So. 52, 93 Fla. 323.

The machinery provided for the payment of the debts of a municipality frequently requires that warrants be issued for the amount of the indebtedness and that they be paid out of the municipal treasury by the municipal treasurer.—Lillis v. City of Big Timber, 62 P.2d 219, 103 Mont. 206.

Refunding warrants

Where city proposes to issue new improvement warrants under provisions of statute, and special improvement warrants have been legally issued and are in default, city council may issue refunding special improvement warrants.—Schieber v. City of Mohall, 268 N.W. 445, 66 N. D. 593.

Time warrants

Statutes relating to the power of cities with respect to issuance of time warrants, and to referendum on bond issues, were not repealed by statute limiting the power of cities to encumber their various systems without a vote of the people—City of Del Rio v. Lowe, Civ.App., 111 S.W.2d 1208, reversed on other

County adjoining military post

The statute authorizing issuance of emergency warrants in any taxing district in any county adjoining federal military post or reservation permits any taxing district in county adjoining army post or military reservation to issue emergency warrants, even though such district does not itself adjoin post or reservation; a county within which federal military reservation is wholly situated "adjoins" reservation, within statute—Miller v. Hickory Grove School Board Dist. No. 4, 178 P.2d 214, 162 Kan. 528.

Limited to special fund

Under provisions of municipal home-rule charter providing for issuance of improvement warrants, authority to issue warrants was limited to special fund created by charter provision—Judd v. City of St. Cloud, 272 N.W. 577, 198 Minn. 590.

ized⁴⁷ and not prohibited⁴⁸ by law, and they must be legally issued⁴⁹ by the officer authorized and charged with the duty,⁵⁰ in compliance with,⁵¹ and not in violation of,⁵² the provisions of statutes and ordinances, but statutory and constitutional requisites as to bonds and other evidences of indebtedness have been held inapplicable to warrants.⁵³ Where the only basis of a warrant or certificate of indebtedness is a contract which is invalid, the warrant or certificate is likewise invalid.⁵⁴

not rendered invalid by the repeal of the ordinance under which it was issued.⁵⁶ Under some statutes, it is held that a warrant may not be issued or paid except by authority of an appropriation⁵⁷ and within the limits thereof.⁵⁸ While a warrant is void under some statutes where there are no funds in the treasury to pay it at the time when it is issued or when it is payable,⁵⁹ it has been held that a municipality may lawfully issue a warrant at a time when there are not sufficient funds in the treasury to pay it,⁶⁰ a warrant is not invalid because it is payable in future years.⁶¹

Amount. Warrants and certificates of indebtedness may be issued to the amount authorized by statute,⁶² but not in excess thereof,⁶³ and, where warrants are issued in numerical order, they are valid in such order until the legal maximum is reached, and those issued thereafter are invalid.⁶⁴ A provision prohibiting the issuance of warrants or certificates of indebtedness in excess of the revenue for the year does not affect the validity of warrants issued at a time when the year's revenues have not been exhausted.⁶⁵

Validating invalid warrants. Where warrants are issued by a municipal corporation in excess of its authority, and the legislature could have authorized their issuance in the first instance, it may render them valid by a curative act.⁶⁶ The court will not, however, construe a statute as validating outstanding invalid warrants unless such is clearly the intent of the legislature.⁶⁷ Warrants issued in violation of a constitutional provision may not be validated by the courts⁶⁸ or by a vote of the electors.⁶⁹ An ordinance merely referring to and recognizing as valid an aggregate amount of outstanding warrant indebtedness is insufficient to establish a ratification of a particular warrant issued with-

§ 1894. Form, Contents, Execution, and Delivery

Municipal orders or warrants should be dated, signed and countersigned as required, and contain whatever statements are required by charter or statute.

Municipal orders or warrants must be dated,⁷¹ signed and countersigned as required,⁷² and contain whatever statements are required by charter or statute.⁷³ The purpose for which they are drawn should be stated therein;⁷⁴ but it is not essential that they should specify from what particular fund they are payable,⁷⁵ unless a special fund for a special purpose has been created,⁷⁶ or they are expressly required by charter or statute to designate the fund against which they are drawn or from which they are payable.⁷⁷ If receivable for taxes they may so show on their face.⁷⁸ A warrant issued to an assignee of a contractor is not fatally defective because it omits the name of the contractor.⁷⁹ Some statutes require warrants to be sealed,⁸⁰ but, in the absence of such a requirement, the corporate seal is not essential to their validity.⁸¹ The delivery of a warrant⁸² to the person authorized to receive it⁸³ is essential to its complete issuance.

Purchase-money notes

(1) City's purchase-money notes were held enforceable, although issued when city commissioner was stockholder of payee club, and although charter provided that any contract should be declared void

where city officers were interested in profits therefrom, where city's governing body, after stockholder ceased to be member thereof, passed a resolution declaring obligations on notes to be valid and statute was enacted, validating city's debt on notes.—Green v. City of Stuart, C.C. A.Fla., 81 F.2d 968.

(2) However, defects in purchase-money notes for realty executed by city were held not cured by special act authorizing issuance of bonds to liquidate outstanding floating debts of city and validating such indebtedness, since there was not sufficient identification in the act of the debt so that the act might be held a ratification of the indebtedness.—City of Stuart v. Duty to sign or countersign. The municipal officers by whom warrants are to be signed⁸⁴ and countersigned⁸⁵ are designated by statute or charter. It is generally held that municipal officers should draw, sign, or countersign warrants when ordered to do so by the proper authority,⁸⁶ acting within the scope of its power,⁸⁷ their duties in this respect being merely ministerial.⁸⁸ However, under some charter or statutory provisions the comptroller or other designated officer invested with authority to draw, sign, or deliver warrants is invested with discretionary⁸⁹ or quasi-judicial⁹⁰ powers and is not a mere automaton⁹¹ or ministerial officer,⁹² and under such provisions it may be his duty under some circumstances to refuse to draw or sign a warrant,⁹³ even though authorized or ordered to do so by the council.⁹⁴

Municipal warrants properly signed are prima facie valid and establish prima facie the validity of the claims for which they were issued, but the issuance of a warrant is not a final and conclusive adjudication binding on the municipal corporation.

Municipal warrants signed by the proper officers are prima facie valid,⁹⁵ and establish prima facie the validity of the claims for which they are issued,⁹⁶ so as to cast on the municipal corporation the burden of proving a defense of invalidity;⁹⁷ but the allowance of claims by granting orders or warrants therefor establishes the claims only prima facie⁹⁸ and is not a final and conclusive adjudication so as to conclude the municipality.⁹⁹ The municipality is not precluded from setting up defenses of ultra vires,¹ illegality,² fraud,³ want or failure of consideration,⁴ or any other defense which might be made to the claim on which the warrant was founded.⁵ Where the municipality has received no benefit or the consideration has failed, it is not estopped to impeach the warrant,⁶ but, where the municipality has power to issue the warrant and it receives the consideration therefor, the general rules as to estoppel may apply⁷ and the municipality may be estopped to assert that the warrants were not issued at the time⁸ or in the manner⁹ prescribed by the statute.

assessments and judgments against itself as quasi owner of the streets and public squares, is estopped from denying the validity of those assessments and judgments.¹⁷ The form of a warrant attempting to carry on its face an agreement in accordance with an ordinance in effect prohibiting its acceptance as payment of debts due the city until previous warrants have been paid does not change its legal effect.¹⁸ In the absence of statute providing otherwise, the issuance of certificates of indebtedness does not impose a lien on any property or fund.¹⁹

Construction. General rules apply in the construction of municipal warrants and orders.²⁰ The owners and holders of warrants are chargeable with notice of the provisions of the statute under which the warrants were issued.²¹

There is conflict of authority as to whether or not a municipal corporation may issue its warrants at a discount.

According to some authorities, a city may not issue its warrants or certificates of indebtedness at a discount²² in payment of a debt,²³ or for the purpose of borrowing money,²⁴ but it has also been held that a municipal corporation may issue and sell warrants at a discount,²⁵ and a municipality has been held liable for the face value of warrants sold at a discount not so great as to be unconscionable.²⁶

§ 1897. Interest

Unless prohibited from doing so by constitution, statute, or charter, a municipal corporation may lawfully contract to pay interest on its warrants or certificates of indebtedness.

It is sometimes expressly provided by statute, or ordinance that municipal corporations shall be liable for interest on their warrants or certificates of indebtedness.²⁷ Also, unless prohibited from doing so by constitution, statute, or charter,²⁸ a municipality may lawfully contract to pay interest on its warrants or certificates of indebtedness,²⁹ and, where it has agreed to do so, it will be held liable according to the terms of its agreement.³⁰ Interest is not allowable on a warrant or certificate of indebtedness expressly stipulating that it shall not draw interest,³¹ and interest is not allowable where a person has accepted a warrant and payment thereof in the face of an express declaration on the part of city officials that it will not draw interest,³² and with an express acknowledgment on his part that the warrant and amount received thereon are in payment of his demands;³³ nor, it has been held, does a warrant bear interest where it makes no provision for interest.³⁴

In any event, a municipal warrant generally draws interest from presentment or demand³⁵ where there is an express statutory provision or

Municipal warrants are not negotiable instruments and are usually subject in the hands of a bona fide purchaser to all defenses and equities that could have been set up against the original payee.

Municipal warrants or certificates of indebtedness are assignable choses in action,⁴⁰ but are not negotiable instruments in the sense of the law merchant,⁴¹ especially where they are payable out of a particular designated fund,⁴² and even where they are payable from a general fund,⁴³ or are in the ordinary form of commercial paper,⁴⁴ as where they are payable to order⁴⁵ or bearer.⁴⁶ They are transferable by assignment, delivery, or indorsement and delivery,⁴⁷ and the transferee may maintain an action thereon in his own name,⁴⁸ and payment to him

Warrants are subject in the hands of a bona fide purchaser to all the defenses and equities that could have been set up against the original payee,⁵⁰ except in so far as the doctrine of estoppel is available.⁵¹ Some authorities assert broadly that a municipal warrant in the hands of a purchaser or assignee is subject to all defenses that may be urged against it,⁵² but other authorities hold that it is subject only to such defenses on the part of the city as existed at the time of the assignment⁵³ or before notice thereof.⁵⁴

General rules have been applied in the construction of a contract for the sale of warrants.⁵⁵ It is held that, in the absence of an express contract to the contrary, there is a warranty, implied by law, on the part of a seller of warrants that they are genuine and legal obligations⁵⁶ and are not, to his knowledge, subject to a set-off or counterclaim,⁵⁷ but the indorser of a warrant payable only from a particular fund is not liable under a statute imposing liability on the assignor of a nonnegotiable contract for the payment of money.⁵⁸ It has been held that one indorsing a warrant and receiving payment guarantees the genuineness of all prior indorsements and the validity of the warrant.⁵⁹ Where a person selling warrants reserves all interest collected thereon, if any shall be paid, he may not recover such interest of the buyer without showing that it has been collected.⁶⁰

Power to issue negotiable warrants or certificates.

A municipal corporation is without power, in the absence of legislative authority either express or clearly implied, to issue negotiable warrants or certificates of indebtedness.⁶¹ In some cases it has been held that a constitutional or statutory provision expressly conferring power to issue certificates of indebtedness and contemplating that they may be sold for the purpose of raising money includes authority to issue them in negotiable form,⁶² since this is almost a condition precedent to obtaining a purchaser;⁶³ but in other cases it has been held that, although the statutes authorize the city to sell its warrants for cash,⁶⁴ the warrants are not negotiable

Warrant to municipality. It has been held that the treasurer of a municipality has no authority to assign a warrant drawn in his favor by a county auditor on the county treasurer for funds due the municipality;⁶⁶ nor can payment be legally made by the county treasurer of the warrant to any person but the duly authorized officer of the municipality.⁶⁷

§ 1899. Calling in, Refunding, or Reissuance

A municipal corporation may be authorized to call in its warrants for cancellation, reissuance, classification, or any lawful purpose.

Under some statutes a municipality may call in its outstanding warrants for cancellation,⁶⁸ reissuance,⁶⁹ classification,⁷⁰ or any lawful purpose.⁷¹ Such a statute is not retroactive so as to apply to warrants issued before its passage.⁷² A call made by de facto municipal officers is sufficient;⁷³ but the act of a city official in canceling certificates of city stock and issuing others therefor at the request of the transferee, without requiring proof of the genuineness of the transfer, is negligence rendering the city liable to one who advanced money on such new certificates, the indorsement of the transferee proving to be a forgery.⁷⁴

Refunding warrants are prima facie valid⁷⁵ and the burden is on the municipality to establish their invalidity.⁷⁶ In general the validity of warrants issued for the purpose of refunding other warrants depends on the validity of the original warrants,⁷⁷ but recitals in the refunding ordinance of the validity of the refunded warrants is sufficient to make a prima facie case in this respect,⁷⁸ and it has been held that warrants issued in redemption of illegal scrip issued previously by the municipality in payment of bona fide debts are supported by a sufficient consideration⁷⁹ and are valid and binding.⁸⁰ A statute may require the reissuance of warrants which have been lost.⁸¹

General fund warrants issued as a substitute for warrants drawn on a special fund should be so drawn that when paid they will amount to no more than the amount for which the latter were drawn with simple interest thereon.⁸²

One accepting or purchasing a municipal warrant takes it subject to the mode of payment provided by the warrant or statute; a warrant payable from a special fund is payable only from that fund and does not impose a general or absolute liability on the municipal corporation.

A person accepting or purchasing a municipal warrant takes it subject to the mode of payment provided by the warrant or statute.⁸³ A warrant or certificate of indebtedness is a general obligation of the municipal corporation payable from its general funds where the warrant or certificate so provides⁸⁴ or where neither the warrant nor the statute contains provisions restricting to the contrary,⁸⁵ even though the warrant or certificate is issued to pay for improvements in connection with which the municipality levies a special assessment.⁸⁶ Both warrants and certificates of indebtedness may be made payable out of special funds,⁸⁷ and a warrant drawn on a particular fund is payable from that fund;⁸⁸ moreover the holder of the warrant is generally required to look solely to the special fund for payment,⁸⁹ and payment may not be made from another fund,⁹⁰ and the city is not liable generally or absolutely to him,⁹¹ even though the remedy to collect from the special fund has been lost.⁹²

Warrants payable only from a particular fund are not contracts or promises to pay and the municipality is not indebted as a result of their issuance.⁹³ It has been held that, if the claim is a general and unconditional claim against the municipality, the fact that the warrant is drawn in form payable from a particular fund will not deprive the creditor of the right to enforce his claim as a general liability;⁹⁴ but it has also been held that a creditor by accepting the warrant drawn on the particular fund impliedly agrees to rely solely on the warrant and on the fund provided for its payment.⁹⁵ In any event, the city is liable to the warrant holder where it has diverted or misappropriated the special fund.⁹⁶

(2) However, a city is not liable in trover to the holder of its warrants, issued without authority and to pay a debt which it could not legally contract, because its treasurer, having collected a tax pledged to the payment of such warrants, has diverted it to other purposes.—Schulenburg, etc., Lumber Co. v. East St. Louis, 63 Ill.App. 214.

Exhaustion of fund

Where a city treasurer has properly received money belonging to a certain fund and has improperly and wrongfully paid it out, he cannot refuse payment on the ground that

According to some,⁹⁷ but not other,⁹⁸ authorities, the municipality is liable generally to the warrant holder where it has failed to create, collect, and provide the special fund. It has been held that a municipality, by drawing a warrant against a particular fund, does not impliedly warrant the existence of such a fund,⁹⁹ so as to impose any additional obligation on it.¹ Sometimes, however, a statute requiring a city to create a fund for the purpose of guaranteeing the payment of special improvement warrants is mandatory,² and by its terms requires the creation of a guaranty fund for the payment of warrants issued and outstanding before,³ as well as those issued after,⁴ the passage of the act. Where void city warrants are ratified by vote of the people, the city council cannot provide for their payment out of a fund other than that on which they are drawn, without creating such a fund.⁵

Duty to pay. Unless ordered by the municipality to refuse payment,⁶ a municipal treasurer is bound to pay on presentation a municipal warrant where he has funds in his hands which may properly be used for that purpose⁷ and the warrant is lawful on its face,⁸ as where it is drawn in proper form⁹ and is issued¹⁰ and signed¹¹ by the proper officers, and presented by the proper person.¹²

them cannot defeat the city's right to treat them as paid.¹³ However, there is no payment or extinguishment of a municipal warrant where it is acquired by a bank, which is a depositary of the fund against which the warrant is drawn, by paying for it with its own funds, and the amount thereof is not withdrawn from, or charged to, the fund.¹⁴ Where it is not provided that interest-bearing warrants shall run any stated time, a payment prior to the expiration of the time it is assumed or estimated that they will run does not violate any contractual right.¹⁵

Amount. Where there are sufficient funds for payment, the holder of a municipal warrant is ordinarily entitled to receive, and the municipality or its treasurer is bound to pay, the principal of the warrant¹⁶ and interest thereon,¹⁷ but no more.¹⁸ In some jurisdictions it is held that a city treasurer, having in his hands money sufficient to pay part, although not all, of the amount of a warrant, may be compelled to pay part;¹⁹ but in other jurisdictions it is held that the treasurer may not be compelled to make a partial payment of a warrant,²⁰ although he is directed to do so by the city council.²¹

Medium of payment; receipt for taxes. Warrants are usually payable in lawful money of the United States, but, in the absence of prohibitory legislation, they may be made payable in gold coin.²² Except where it is expressly provided by statute that warrants shall be receivable in payment of all there is no money in his possession belonging to such fund.—Northampton First Nat. Bank v. Arthur, 54 P. 1107, 12 Colo.App. 90.

Loss of bank deposits

taxes²³ and debts²⁴ due the municipality, as well as in payment of fines and forfeitures imposed in criminal proceedings,²⁵ it would seem that a municipal corporation could not be required to receive its warrants in payment of taxes due to it.²⁶

Priorities and order of payment. In the absence of a statute or ordinance expressly providing in what order municipal warrants shall be paid, the officer whose duty it is to pay them does not possess absolute discretion with regard to the order of payment,²⁷ but they should be paid in the order either of their date or of the time of their presentation for payment.²⁸ It is within the power of the legislature to prescribe the order of payment of municipal warrants;²⁹ but the law in force when they are issued creates a contract for precedence with the warrant holders which may not be impaired³⁰ by subsequent legislation;³¹ and, of course, a municipality may not by ordinance change the provi-

Different statutes or ordinances variously provide, or at times have provided, for the payment of municipal warrants in the order of their issuance,³³ presentation,³⁴ or registration,³⁵ and it is sometimes held that each warrant holder is entitled to his pro rata share of the fund and that there are no priority rights.³⁶ The order of payment prescribed by law must be followed³⁷ regardless of whether or not the holders of particular warrants have been more diligent than others in pursuing their judicial remedies.³⁸ A municipality which fails to follow the regular order of payment is liable to a warrant holder damaged thereby,³⁹ and the same is true where the municipality pays other warrant holders more than their pro rata share of the fund.⁴⁰

In order to render the municipality liable on this ground, it is necessary and sufficient to show that the payments made exhausted the fund so as to leave other warrants unpaid,⁴¹ and that, if the regular order had been followed, the warrant in question would have been paid,⁴² or, in other words, that the fund in question was sufficient to pay the warrant in question and all warrants prior thereto.⁴³ It has been held that a city council may not divide the amount levied for general city purposes into separate funds and appropriate it to the payment of warrants issued in any particular year, so as to deprive the holder of warrants on the general fund, issued the year previous, of the right to apply the same to the payment of his city taxes as he has a right to do by statute.⁴⁴ Under some statutes, where warrants are issued in connection with an improvement, priority is given to those warrants issued for the costs and expenses of making and levying the assessment and letting the contract.⁴⁵

§ 1901. Actions

The holder of a dishonored warrant or certificate of indebtedness may maintain an action at law against the municipal corporation or enjoin or impose liability for a threatened or actual diversion of the fund provided for payment of the warrants or certificates.

The remedies open to the holder of a dishonored warrant or certificate of indebtedness are: (1) An action at law against the corporation.⁴⁶ (2) Mandamus against the fiscal officers to compel payment, or against the council to compel a levy to satisfy it, as discussed in Mandamus §§ 148, 182. (3) An action to enjoin the diversion to other purposes of moneys applicable to the payment of the warrant where such diversion is threatened or to impose liability on the municipal corporation for such diversion where it occurs.⁴⁷ It is sometimes held that a cause of action does not exist against a city on a warrant until a fund for its payment has been collected,⁴⁸ and a fund for payment of municipal warrants must be provided by the municipality before the statute begins to run in favor of the municipality against an action thereon,⁴⁹ although it has also been held that the fact that there are no funds in the treasury for the payment of the warrant will not prevent the holder from suing thereon.⁵⁰

Except in a few jurisdictions,⁵¹ the presentation of a municipal order or warrant for payment is a condition precedent to the institution of an action thereon,⁵² unless the circumstances are such that a presentation would be futile.⁵³ The holder of void certificates of indebtedness must exhaust his contractual remedies before he may sue for damages.⁵⁴ A municipal treasurer, lawfully investing municipal funds in municipal warrants, may maintain an

Pleading. In an action on a municipal warrant, the petition or complaint must allege facts sufficient to show that plaintiff is entitled to the judgment demanded.⁵⁶ It is necessary to allege presentation and demand⁵⁷ or facts excusing a lack thereof.⁵⁸ An allegation that there is money in the fund on which the warrant was drawn is necessary where the warrant was drawn on a special fund,⁵⁹ but not where it was drawn on the general fund.⁶⁰ In an action based on the diversion of a special fund by the payment out of their order of subsequent warrants, the diversion of sufficient money to have paid all warrants drawn on the special funds, which were prior to those held by plaintiff, must be alleged.⁶¹ It is not necessary to set forth the consideration of a warrant, where by statute it is a negotiable instrument.⁶²

It is necessary to allege the council proceedings by which the person signing warrants became acting mayor.⁶³ An allegation that warrants were registered according to law at the date of presentation is not a mere legal conclusion,⁶⁴ but an allegation that the warrants sued on were given in lieu and substitution of other valid warrants is a mere conclusion of the pleader⁶⁵ and is not sufficient to take the place of an allegation of facts showing that the warrants were valid and legal obligations of the city.⁶⁶ Where it is claimed that warrants are invalid because the city had exceeded its constitutional limit of indebtedness, the court may not consider, on demurrer to the petition, financial statements of city showing indebtedness not contained in the petition.⁶⁷ It is incumbent on the city to plead such defenses as it wishes to assert,⁶⁸ but a defense that the issuance of the warrants was unauthorized may be raised under a general denial.⁶⁹

Issues and evidence. The holder of the warrant must establish the validity of the warrant.⁷⁰ The holder of a municipal order or warrant payable from the proceeds of a special assessment has the burden of proving that the city has collected the fund⁷¹ and either has it in its possession⁷² or has wrongfully diverted or misapplied it;⁷³ but an indorsee may recover against the indorser of a municipal warrant payable "out of any funds belonging to the city, not before specially appropriated," without proving that funds were appropriated for its payment⁷⁴ and were in the treasury.⁷⁵ Consideration for a warrant need not be proved,⁷⁶ as one will be presumed;⁷⁷ and, where the city pleads failure of consideration, it has the burden of proving its plea.⁷⁸ Where the execution of the warrant or certificate is not denied under oath, it is not necessary to prove the authority of the officers issuing or signing it.⁷⁹

General rules have been applied as to the admissibility⁸⁰ and weight and sufficiency⁸¹ of the evidence. In order to establish the invalidity of a warrant as in excess of the municipality's revenue, it must appear that at the time of its issuance the municipality had already expended or contracted to expend its entire revenue,⁸² and evidence that warrants were issued in excess of revenue is insufficient to establish the invalidity of any particular warrant.⁸³

Trial and judgment. General rules as to trial, as that issues of fact are for the jury, have been applied in actions on warrants.⁸⁴ In an action by a purchaser of municipal warrants it is permissible for the court to inquire into the whole transaction between the original parties⁸⁵ and determine whether charter provisions were observed in issuing the warrant.⁸⁶ On the other hand, the validity of certificates of indebtedness may not be determined where they have been negotiated and the holders thereof are not before the court.⁸⁷ Where warrants issued in payment of indebtedness exceeding the constitutional limit are void, as discussed supra § 1834, a judgment entered against the city on the warrants where the parties know of the excessive issue and purposely acquiesce in the entry of the judgment in order to impose the illegal indebtedness on the municipality is also void;⁸⁸ but the fact that the warrants on which a judgment is entered against a city were issued in excess of the constitutional limit does not alone render the judgment invalid;⁸⁹ the judgment may be valid where it is entered in pursuance of a compromise stipulation made without fraud or collusion.⁹⁰

A finding that, when a certain warrant was issued, the city had exceeded the constitutional limit of indebtedness does not show that such limit was reached when the indebtedness was incurred for which the warrant was issued,⁹¹ and does not establish the invalidity of the warrant.⁹² An action based on municipal warrants is not an action based on contract within a statute relating to judgments against a municipality.⁹³ A warrant holder may not obtain a general or absolute judgment against the municipality on a warrant payable from a particular fund where the fund is insufficient.⁹⁴ The municipality may maintain an action to set aside a consent judgment based on warrants which did not authorize the entry of such judgment.⁹⁵

a. Definitions and Distinctions

A municipal bond is an agreement by a municipal corporation to pay to the holder of the bond a certain specified amount at a designated future time, and to pay interest thereon. A bond and a note or certificate of indebtedness may have in common the promise of the municipal corporation to pay the face thereof plus interest, but they usually differ in the term of the obligation and the source from which payment is to be made.

A municipal bond is an agreement by a municipal corporation to pay to the holder of the bond a certain specified amount⁹⁶ at a designated future time,⁹⁷ and to pay interest annually or semiannually.⁹⁸ In its ordinary commercial sense, it is a negotiable bond⁹⁹ issued by a municipal corporation to secure its indebtedness.¹ The term itself imports a municipal debt or obligation;² and, in legislative usage, it ordinarily connotes bonded indebtedness.³ Municipal bonds are evidences of indebtedness⁴ intended for sale in the market with the object of raising money for municipal improvements, the expense of which is beyond the immediate resources of reasonable taxation, and payment of which necessarily or logically should be distributed over a period of years.⁵

Negotiable coupon bonds, within the meaning of a statute authorizing the issuance thereof by cities, are bonds with coupons attached to the face thereof indicating interest due on the face of the bonds.⁶

A serial bond, within the contemplation of a statute providing for its issuance by a municipality, is a loan of money by the holder of the bond to the corporate body issuing it.⁷

Temporary evidences of debt distinguished. Municipal bonds are, in nature and purpose, distinguishable from temporary evidences of debt, such as vouchers, certificates of indebtedness, orders, or drafts drawn by one officer on another, and similar devices for liquidating current obligations in anticipation of the collection of taxes.⁸ As used in some statutes authorizing the issuance thereof by municipalities, bonds and certificates of indebtedness may have in common the promise of the municipal corporation to pay the face thereof plus interest at a specified rate,⁹ but differ in that usually bonds are long-term, and certificates are short-term, obligations¹⁰ and in that certificates are issued in anticipation of the revenues to be derived from taxes already levied, while bonds are evidences of debt usually paid by levies of future taxes.¹¹ However, there is nothing inherent in the words "bonds" and "certificates of indebtedness" which makes them in every case either synonymous or different in meaning;¹² and in order to determine their meaning it is necessary to look to the context and the circumstances in which the words are used.¹³

A note does not have the status and dignity of a bond,¹⁴ and is clearly distinguishable therefrom in that it is usually issued and made payable to a single lender or investor and matures at an earlier date.¹⁵ Instruments which are notes in form and which recite that they are notes will not be treated as bonds;¹⁶ but notes which are bonds in everything except name should be deemed to be bonds.¹⁷

The real distinguishing feature between a bond and a tax anticipation note is that the former represents a primary obligation of the municipality to the payment of which its general credit is pledged, while the latter is but an obligation payable out of a particular fund.¹⁸

b. General Considerations

In the absence of a constitutional provision granting the power, municipal corporations may not issue bonds unless the power to do so is conferred by legislative authority.

Except where, as discussed infra subdivision c of this section, power to issue bonds is granted directly to municipal corporations by a constitutional provision, municipalities cannot issue bonds or other like securities unless the power to do so is conferred by legislative authority, either express or clearly implied,¹⁹ and any doubt as to the existence of such power ought to be resolved against its existence.²⁰ The power may not be implied merely from the ordinary powers of a municipal corporation;²¹ and there is some authority for the view that the authority of a municipal corporation to issue bonds will not be implied, but must be expressly granted.²²

Bonds issued by a municipality having no power to issue them are not voidable,²³ but void.²⁴

Implication from power to contract. It has been held that power conferred on a municipality to make contracts necessarily includes authority to issue bonds,²⁵ and that power to issue bonds may be implied from power given to a municipality to contract debts.²⁶ On the other hand, where the corporation has no power to incur a particular indebtedness, it has no power to issue a bond therefor.²⁷

Implication from power to borrow money. It has been both affirmed²⁸ and denied²⁹ that authority to issue bonds may be implied from power to borrow money.

Nature of power. The right of a municipality to issue bonds is not a political³⁰ or governmental³¹ power, but is rather a private³² corporate³³ power conferred for local purposes.³⁴ The issuance of general bonds to be paid for by general taxation is, however, recognized as a governmental act.³⁵

c. Constitutional, Statutory, or Charter Provisions

A municipal corporation has such power to issue bonds as is conferred on it by constitutional provisions or valid statutory provisions. The enactment of a new statute on the subject, after all preliminary steps and proceedings for the issuance of bonds have been taken, does not prevent the execution, sale, and delivery of the bonds.

Some constitutional provisions empower municipal corporations, or certain classes thereof, to issue bonds³⁶ or empower the legislature to enact laws authorizing municipalities, or certain classes thereof, to do so.³⁷ Also, authority to issue bonds may be granted to municipalities by charter, or statute,³⁸ but such charter or statute must be passed in accordance with constitutional requirements³⁹ and must not violate constitutional provisions;⁴⁰ and, while a municipality possesses such power to issue bonds as is conferred on it by valid statutes⁴¹ or by the state constitution and statutes,⁴² such power is not unrestricted, but is subject to constitutional and statutory limitations.⁴³ Where a housing authority is considered not to be a municipal corporation, it is not subject to constitutional restrictions on the power of municipal corporations to issue bonds.⁴⁴

It has been held in some decisions that statutes relating to the issuance of municipal bonds should be construed strictly against the municipality,⁴⁵ while it has also been held that the statutes should receive a liberal construction⁴⁶ so as to promote their objects and purposes,⁴⁷ and according to still other authority pertinent constitutional and statutory provisions should be construed more strictly in considering the legality of a proposed bond issue than in determining the validity of bonds already issued and disposed of.⁴⁸ Different sections of the same statute are to be construed together.⁴⁹ Also, statutes dealing with the same subject matter and not in conflict with each other, but enacted for different objects, should be read together in order to arrive at the full legislative intention.⁵⁰ The legislative intent in enacting a statute dealing with interest on municipal bonds may be gathered from the statute as originally enacted and not from an amendment of the statute.⁵¹

Object of, and duty of court to enforce, restraints

Serial or other bonds

(1) Under some statutes a municipality may issue no bonds except serial bonds.—Bolton v. Wharton, 161 S.E. 454, 163 S.C. 242, 86 A.L.R. 1101.

Repeal or change. The general rules relating to the repeal of constitutional or statutory provisions by subsequent provisions are applicable in determining whether constitutional or statutory provisions authorizing the issuance of municipal bonds have been repealed by subsequent provisions.⁵² It is a general principle of law that municipal bonds must be issued in conformity with the statute in force at the time of issuance.⁵³ However, this doctrine cannot be effectively invoked to destroy vested rights⁵⁴ or to impair the obligation of contracts,⁵⁵

and an exception to the rule may arise by virtue of a saving clause in a charter or statute.⁵⁶ It has been held that the passage of a statute relating to the issuance of bonds nullifies all pending proceedings for a bond issue;⁵⁷ but a statute may expressly validate all proceedings previously taken under a prior statute⁵⁸ and require only subsequent proceedings to be taken in accordance with the new act.⁵⁹ The passage of a statute after all preliminary steps and proceedings for the issuance of bonds have been taken does not prevent the issuance,⁶⁰ execution,⁶¹ and sale⁶² of the bonds, or performance of a contract to sell.⁶³

- a. Bonds

- c. Tax anticipation warrants

a. Bonds

A municipal corporation may issue bonds for such purposes as are within the scope of charter or statutory authorization, provided the purposes are public or municipal.

Within constitutional limitations of amount, a municipal corporation may incur bonded indebtedness for corporate or public purposes⁷³ when authorized to do so by a valid charter or statutory provision.⁷⁴ Effect is accorded statutes empowering and authorizing municipalities in general terms to issue bonds for corporate⁷⁵ or municipal⁷⁶ purposes, any lawful⁷⁷ or necessary⁷⁸ purposes, or any purpose or purposes for which they may raise or appropriate money.⁷⁹ Also, effect is accorded a charter provision that the city shall have power to issue bonds to carry out any of the powers or purposes which the city possesses or may carry out.⁸⁰

However, the purposes for which a municipality may issue,⁸¹ and for which the legislature may authorize it to issue,⁸² bonds are not unlimited. Mu-

Connection with state fair

A state fair is a public undertaking and the issuance of municipal bonds, as authorized by statute, to assist in the establishment and maintenance of the fair in the vicinity of the city is for a public municipal purpose—Briggs v. City of Raleigh, supra.

Purposes other than state purposes

Payment of indebtedness

(1) City has power to issue bonds, proceeds of which will be used for corporate purposes for which taxes may be levied to pay warrants, as for payment of policemen's and firemen's back salaries, since power to issue bonds is the same whether for payment of indebtedness already incurred or to be incurred for corporate purposes.—Weisfield v. City of Seattle, 40 P.2d 149, 180 Wash. 288, 96 A.L.R. 1190.

obligations are warrants or other forms of indebtedness is immaterial on question of its power to issue bonds for payment thereof, if indebtedness relates to corporate purposes.—Weisfield v. City of Seattle, supra.

(1) Municipal bonds cannot be issued for purposes for which taxes cannot be levied.—City of Clearwater v. State, 147 So. 459, 108 Fla. 623.

(2) Some statutes are construed not to authorize the issuance of municipal bonds except for a purpose for which the ordinary revenues of the city might lawfully be expended.—Redondo Beach v. Cate, 68 P. 586, 136 Cal. 146—44 C.J. p 1180 note 8.

82. Purposes beyond legislative power

(1) General assembly cannot confer on municipality power to issue bonds for illegal purpose or for pur-

municipal bonds to be paid by taxation may be lawfully issued only for municipal⁸³ or public⁸⁴ purposes, and it is beyond the power of the legislature to authorize the issuance of such bonds for any purpose except a public one.⁸⁵ Whether the object for which bonds are to be issued is a municipal purpose may not be arbitrarily determined by legislation without regard to organic limitations;⁸⁶ the ultimate determination of the question of what are corporate purposes for which a municipality may issue bonds is for the judiciary;⁸⁷ but weight must be given to legislative definitions of what are corporate purposes;⁸⁸ and a statutory determination of what is an appropriate municipal purpose will not be disturbed by the courts, where the purpose designated by statute is in fact municipal in its nature⁸⁹ and no provision or principle of organic law is violated in such designation.⁹⁰ In determining the validity of municipal bonds, the purpose of their issuance as shown by a resolution of the municipal governing body is controlling over an alleged different real purpose.⁹¹

Enumeration of specific purposes. While it has been held that charter or statutory authority to issue bonds for enumerated purposes excludes the right to issue bonds for purposes not specified,⁹² a later grant of general power to issue bonds for municipal purposes is not restricted by a prior grant of power to issue them for specific purposes,⁹³ and where a statute, which originally authorized the issuance of bonds for any corporate purpose, subsequently contains a list of specific purposes for which bonds may be issued, the omission of a certain purpose from the list is not conclusive of the question of whether the omitted purpose is a corporate one for which bonds may be issued.⁹⁴

Expenses or expenditures generally. It seems that a municipality may issue bonds for the present or ultimate payment of a debt for a necessary expense which it has power to incur.⁹⁵ When authorized by statute, municipal bonds may be issued to raise money for expenses other than necessary expenses of the city.⁹⁶ Some charters or statutes expressly authorize the issuance of municipal bonds to raise money for extraordinary expenditures,⁹⁷ or are broad enough to authorize the issuance of bonds to meet so-called "capital expenditures,"⁹⁸ as distinguished from ordinary annual expenses of a department for a coming year.⁹⁹

Poor relief. The issuance of bonds to provide for relief of the poor is for a public purpose¹ and is permissible under authority granted by charter or statute² where there is no transgression of constitutional provisions or other lawful enactments.³

County purposes. The charter of a consolidated city and county has been construed not to prevent the creation of bonded indebtedness for county purposes.⁴

Two or more purposes or considerations. Where bonds are issued by a city for two considerations, as to one of which it has power to issue bonds, but as to the other of which it has none, such bonds are wholly void;⁵ and an entire issue of bonds for three purposes is unconstitutional where it is inseparable and is unconstitutional as to one purpose;⁶ but where a municipality issues bonds in separate amounts for several purposes and a severable amount of the bonds may not legally be issued by the city, the bonds that are legal may be sustained.⁷

b. Notes

Budget notes, tax anticipation notes, or bond anticipation notes may be issued by a municipal corporation under authority conferred by a valid statute.

When authorized to do so by a valid statute,⁸ and within the limitations imposed thereby,⁹ a municipal corporation may issue tax anticipation notes, that is, notes in anticipation of taxes to be collected in and for the fiscal year; but a statute authorizing the issuance of such notes can be no broader than a constitutional provision on the subject,¹⁰ and it should be construed in connection with such provision.¹¹ Under the constitution and laws of at least one state, it has been held that tax anticipation notes are the only type of evidence of indebtedness, other than bonds, which a municipal corporation is authorized to issue;¹² but, according to decisions in other states, a statute authorizing municipalities to issue notes in anticipation of the collection and distribution of a state appropriation for poor relief purposes is constitutional,¹³ a city may, under the terms and construction of a pertinent statute, issue budget notes for any one of certain specified purposes, if the amount included in the budget for the fiscal year is insufficient therefor;¹⁴ notes for money borrowed to carry on necessary and essential functions of government are valid,¹⁵ and, where proposed bonds are valid, bond anticipation notes are likewise valid under a statute authorizing municipalities to give notes in anticipation of the receipt of the proceeds of the sale of bonds to be issued.¹⁶

Under some statutes municipal corporations have authority to issue warrants to anticipate the collection of taxes already levied.

Municipal corporations have authority, under some statutes, to issue warrants to anticipate the collection of taxes levied for the payment of outstanding bonds and interest maturing during the tax year.¹⁷ Tax anticipation warrants may, however, be issued only against taxes already levied.¹⁸

Application of taxes to other purposes

Where the indebtedness evidenced by notes given by city for money borrowed in anticipation of revenue was legal when created, it was not rendered illegal because board improperly applied taxes to other purposes.—Pace v. City of Paducah, 44 S.W.2d 574, 241 Ky. 568.

A municipal corporation has no inherent power to issue bonds for the construction of a memorial to soldiers and sailors who served in the armed forces of the United States during a time of war,¹⁹ but a statute empowering a municipality to issue bonds for such a purpose is not invalid,²⁰ even though some of the soldiers and sailors to whose memory the memorial is to be erected were not residents of the municipality.²¹

Municipal notes and bonds executed and issued in aid of the Confederacy have been held void;²² but bonds issued by municipalities in the northern states to borrow money to be used in giving bounties to soldiers during the War between the States have been sustained as being for a public purpose.²³

§ 1907. Public Improvements, Utilities, and Property

Statutes authorizing the issuance of bonds for the acquisition, construction, or extension of a public utility by a municipal corporation and payable from the revenue derived from the operation of the utility are not unconstitutional; and a municipality has such power to issue bonds for public improvements or utilities, or for the purchase of property for public purposes, as is conferred on it by constitution, statute, or charter.

By virtue of express constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions, cities and other municipalities may have power and authority to issue bonds for public improvements,²⁴ works,²⁵ or utilities,²⁶ or for the purchase of property for public purposes;²⁷ or, by virtue of power conferred on them to make improvements or purchase property, they may have implied power to issue bonds for the purpose of making an improvement²⁸ or purchasing property;²⁹ but sometimes the conferring, by statute or charter, of limited power to issue bonds operates to negative or exclude power to issue bonds for particular improvements,³⁰ or for improvements where property owners have not executed waivers of objections to any illegality or irregularity in the assessments,³¹ or for the purchase of land for particular purposes.³² While a municipality may issue bonds to pay its part of the cost of specific im-

Municipalities may issue general obligation bonds for utility purposes, as long as such bonds are within the general limit of bonded indebtedness prescribed by law.—City of Middletown v. City Commission of Middletown, 37 N.E.2d 609, 138 Ohio St. 596.

Nature and fixed character of power

(1) Power, conferred by constitutional provisions, to issue bonds for public utilities is plenary, exclusive, and permissive; and, if there is any conflict between such constitutional provisions and provisions of statutes existing at time of or enacted since adoption of constitutional provisions, such statutes must fall.—Priest v. City of Wapakoneta, App., 32 N.E.2d 869, appeal dismissed, 9 N.E.2d 292, 132 Ohio St. 527.

(2) The power conferred by such provisions cannot be restricted or extended by the legislature.—State ex rel. R. J. Edwards, Inc., v. Keith, 66 P.2d 1059, 179 Okl. 563.

(3) Legislature cannot take away rights or relieve city of duties imposed by constitutional provisions permitting cities to issue bonds to buy utilities.—Perrine v. Bonaparte, 282 P. 332, 140 Okl. 165—St. Louis-

San Francisco Ry. Co. v. Andrews, 278 P. 617, 137 Okl. 222.

Judicial control

Action of city authorities under statute authorizing bond issue for public utility, and enacted in pursuance of a constitutional provision, is not subject to judicial control in the absence of fraud, invasion of private rights, manifest oppression, or gross abuse of power.—McCann v. Morgan City, 139 So. 481, 173 La. 1063.

provements,³³ it is not authorized to issue bonds to provide a fund from which to pay its part of the cost of improvements that may from time to time be made,³⁴ nor is it authorized to issue bonds to reimburse itself for payments already made for improvements³⁵ or to relieve a property owner from a valid assessment previously made.³⁶

General laws providing for the issuance of bonds for improvements are held not applicable to cities incorporated under special charters;³⁷ and, where a subsequently enacted special or local law is inconsistent with a previously enacted general law on the subject of issuing local improvement bonds, the special or local law is, under constitutional provisions, applicable to the exclusion of the general law.³⁸

Limited area. A statute is not unconstitutional on the ground that it authorizes the issuance of obligations to pay for municipal improvements which are less in area than the municipality.³⁹ A properly organized improvement district may, under authority conferred by statute, issue sufficient bonds to construct the improvement;⁴⁰ but, in so far as local improvement district funds are concerned, a local improvement district bond issued by a city and payable solely from the proceeds of special assessments levied against the property in the local improvement district is, to all intents and purposes, a warrant on the treasurer to make payment and is subject to the law applicable to warrants.⁴¹

Bonds of municipal agency or authority. In the absence of power expressly granted by statute, a permanent public improvement or the acquisition or construction of a public utility plant may not be financed, in whole or in part, by the issuance of bonds on the credit of an agency or authority.⁴²

Revenue or mortgage bonds or certificates. A revenue bond may be negotiable obligation payable entirely from the revenues of a public utility,⁴³ and it has been said that the evidence of such an obligation is generally referred to as a revenue bond to distinguish it from municipal obligations payable from the proceeds of taxation.⁴⁴ Statutes authorizing municipalities to issue revenue bonds⁴⁵ or certificates⁴⁶ for the acquisition, construction, or extension of public utilities, improvements, projects, or undertakings from the operation of which revenue is derived, and payable from such revenue, are not unconstitutional, and the power conferred thereby may be exercised while the statutes remain in effect;⁴⁷ but, where the legislature has repeatedly refused to grant express power for this purpose,

When a revenue certificate law and a new constitution were adopted, the provisions of each as to revenue certificates became a part of the charter of every municipality of the state.—Reed v. City of Smyrna, 39 S.E.2d 668, 201 Ga. 228.—Findley v. City of Vidalia, 51 S.E.2d 642, 78 Ga.App. 581.

municipalities are without implied power to issue revenue bonds to pay for the purchase of public utility plants;⁴⁸ and under some statutes a municipality may not finance the construction of a public utility plant by the issuance of securities based solely on the revenues obtained from the operation of the plant.⁴⁹ Bonds secured solely by, and payable solely from, income or revenue are distinguishable from mortgage bonds secured by the property and revenue of a public utility⁵⁰ which a municipality may issue under authority conferred by some constitutional or statutory provisions⁵¹ and which have been held not to be amenable to a uniform bond act.⁵²

A constitutional grant to municipalities of power to issue and sell revenue bonds carries with it by implication such other powers as are necessary to carry the granted authority into effect.⁵³

An ordinance providing for the issuance of revenue bonds to obtain funds for the extension of public utility systems beyond the corporate limits in order to furnish facilities to another community is invalid where the municipality is without authority to extend such systems beyond the corporate limits for this purpose;⁵⁴ but, in view of authority conferred by a statute, public utility revenue bonds to acquire a public utility system may not be invalid because parts of distribution lines to be acquired extend beyond the corporate limits.⁵⁵

Notes. Under some statutes municipalities have power to issue notes in anticipation of the levy of special assessments.⁵⁶ Also, power to execute a note in payment of an improvement has been held to be implied as a necessary incident to power conferred to provide for the construction of the improvement.⁵⁷ Where a city obtained and retained the land it intended to buy, notes issued by it for the purchase price are enforceable notwithstanding the deed to it described the land insufficiently;⁵⁸ but where the city was without power to contract for the purchase of land on long-term payments by the issuance of negotiable promissory notes, it is not liable on vendor's lien notes assumed by it as part of the same transaction.⁵⁹

a. Buildings, Sites, and Equipment

There is generally constitutional, statutory, or charter authority for the issuance of bonds by a municipal corporation to provide funds for the purchase of a site for, and the erection and equipment of, a municipal public building.

Municipal corporations are generally authorized by constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions to issue bonds to provide funds for the purchase of a site for,⁶⁰ and the erection of public buildings⁶¹ and,

A statute authorizing borrowing of money for construction of municipal utility secured by a pledge or mortgage evidenced by such instrument as may be agreed on would be sufficient to justify bond issue if that were the form of instrument agreed on.—Alabama Power Co. v. City of Scottsboro, 190 So. 412, 238 Ala. 230.

Subsequent change in judicial construction

Village's mortgage utility bonds issued pursuant to constitutional provision which supreme court had held self-executing were valid although village had no statutory or charter provision authorizing issuance, and even though supreme court subsequently overruled such decision.—Gentzler v. Municipality is bound by provisions of statute under which it has undertaken the issue of bonds for likewise, under the decisions, for the equipment⁶² of, public buildings, or for the purchase of an existing building to be used for municipal purposes.⁶³ This is true as to such buildings as a city hall,⁶⁴ buildings used by the fire department,⁶⁵ a public library building,⁶⁶ and school buildings;⁶⁷ but the authority of a city does not extend to the issuance of bonds for the erection of county buildings;⁶⁸ and the issuance of bonds for the real and primary purpose of constructing a building for a state agency is not for a municipal public purpose and has been held to be invalid, even though it is likely that a few city offices will be located in the building.⁶⁹

Auditorium. Under some constitutional, statutory or charter provisions, bonds may be issued for the building of a municipal auditorium;⁷⁰ but bonds may not be issued for this purpose where an auditorium is not mentioned in a statutory enumeration of the particular municipal structures for which bonds may be issued.⁷¹

Factory or plant. It has been affirmed in some jurisdictions,⁷² and denied in others,⁷³ that a municipality may lawfully issue bonds for the construction of a factory or plant for the manufacture of artificial ice. The issuance of bonds for a garbage reduction plant is not authorized by some municipal charters,⁷⁴ and some statutes authorizing the issuance of bonds for this purpose are applicable only where the municipality itself is engaged in the business of incinerating garbage⁷⁵ and not where it has entered into a contract for the removal and disposal of garbage.⁷⁶ The principle that garbage disposal is a governmental function and properly chargeable to the general revenue of a municipal corporation does not render unconstitutional a statute empowering a municipality to issue revenue bonds directly chargeable on the capital investment and earnings of an incinerator plant.⁷⁷

The issuance of bonds for the purpose of repairing and restoring factory property, obtained by the city under a tax deed, so that it can be sold or leased, is for a city purpose.⁷⁸

issue bonds for the construction of bridges or tunnels or for the construction or improvement of streets or sidewalks; but, where only limited authority is granted, bonds outside the scope of the authority conferred may not be issued.

Municipal corporations are frequently authorized, either expressly or impliedly, to issue bonds for the construction or improvement of streets,⁸² at least in certain cases;⁸³ but bonds cannot be legally issued for the purpose of improving streets which do not exist.⁸⁴ A few statutes authorizing the issuance of bonds for the construction of streets have been held invalid,⁸⁵ and other statutes authorizing the issuance of bonds do not confer authority to issue bonds for the purpose of cleaning streets,⁸⁶ constructing retaining walls along the side of a street,⁸⁷ improving two streets as though they were one,⁸⁸ or improving a street which does not connect with a hard-surface public highway extending beyond the corporate limits.⁸⁹ A municipal note for paving issued without reasonable expectation that it can and will be paid from the revenues of the current year is not enforceable where it does not comply with constitutional and statutory provisions authorizing municipal tax anticipation notes.⁹⁰

Sidewalks. Under some,⁹¹ but not other,⁹² statutes, bonds for the construction or improvement of sidewalks may be issued.

Bridges and tunnels. Under some constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions, municipal corporations have authority to issue bonds for the construction of bridges⁹³ or approaches thereto;⁹⁴ but under other constitutional provisions a bond issue for a bridge to be owned jointly by a city and township is not authorized.⁹⁵

c. Drainage and Sewage Disposal

A municipal corporation possesses such authority to issue bonds for sewers, drains, and sewage disposal plants as is conferred on it by constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions.

Whole or definite part of construction cost

A statutory provision, empowering municipalities to issue bonds to pay for construction of sewers, in whole or part, refers to whole or definite and fixed portion of construction cost, separate and apart from that assessed against benefited property, and is inapplicable to town sewer certificates provided for by statute authorizing issuance thereof to amount of such assessments.—Henning v. Town of Hot Springs, 102 P. 2d 25, 44 N.M. 321.

tem,⁹⁸ or a sewage disposal plant,⁹⁹ or for the reconstruction and repair of an existing sewerage system,¹ as is conferred on it by constitutional, charter, or statutory provisions; and a like rule obtains as to the authority of a sewer district² or sewer sub-district³ to issue bonds. Sewer certificates, although partly invalid, have been held valid as far as authorized under the constitution of the state.⁴

Drainage is a municipal or corporate purpose for which a municipality may issue bonds under charter or statutory authority;⁵ and, in the absence of a constitutional or statutory limitation of the term "sewer" to sanitary sewers, authority to issue bonds for the construction of sewers includes authority to issue bonds for the construction of storm sewers or permanent drainage improvements for the purpose of carrying off surface and flood waters.⁶ It has been held, however, that, in the absence of statutory authority, a municipality may not issue bonds

Toilets. When not authorized to do so by the terms, as properly construed, of statutes relating to the issuance of bonds, a municipality having no sewer system may not issue bonds for the purchase of toilets, not designed for use in connection with the city water system, to be rented to individual inhabitants of the city for installment and use in privies.⁸

d. Water Supply

A municipal corporation generally has power and authority, under pertinent constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions, to issue bonds for the purpose of supplying itself and its inhabitants with water.

is authorized.¹⁰ The charter or statutory provisions relied on, however, may not be broad enough to authorize the issuance of the bonds in question;¹¹ and some statutes, and bonds conforming thereto, are so worded and construed as to prohibit and preclude a municipality, after issuing bonds on the security of its waterworks system, from subsequently issuing waterworks revenue bonds while any bonds of the prior issue are outstanding and unpaid.¹²

e. Lighting and Power

In the exercise of power and authority conferred

by constitutional, charter, or statutory provisions, a municipal corporation may issue bonds for the purpose of supplying itself and its inhabitants with electricity or gas; but a provision granting authority to issue bonds for this purpose does not extend to the issuance of bonds to enable the municipality to engage in the power business generally.

A municipal corporation has power and authority, under some constitutional or charter provisions, to issue bonds for the purpose of supplying itself and its inhabitants with electricity¹³ or gas.¹⁴ On the other hand, the authority, if any, of a municipality to issue bonds in connection with the en-

Body issuing bonds

Municipal waterworks bonds secured by waterworks property or income are issued by city and not by waterworks system which has no corporate existence apart from city.—Roberts v. City of Madison, 27 N.W.2d 233, 250 Wis. 317.

Asserted fact of existing emergency is not material to the municipality's right to issue water revenue certificates for the improvement of, and additions to, its water supply system, and it is not necessary to pass the ordinance authorizing the certificates as an emergency measure, since emergency per se cannot create municipal power or remove statutory or constitutional restrictions thereon.—State v. largement, extension, or improvement of a municipal gas or electric plant must be found in the constitution¹⁵ or statutes¹⁶ of the state; and it has been held that, under statutory authority to issue bonds for the purchase, construction,¹⁷ or establishment¹⁸ of a light or light and power plant, bonds cannot be lawfully issued for other purposes connected with the plant; but it has also been held that the constitutional power of a municipality to issue bonds for the purpose of purchasing or constructing an electric or other light plant includes power to issue bonds to purchase or construct extensions or improvements to an existing plant.¹⁹ Bonds for the improvement, repair, and extension of a light plant are properly issued under a statute authorizing the issuance of bonds for these purposes, notwithstanding the existence of another statute authorizing the issuance of bonds for the purpose of purchasing, constructing, or extending a light plant and the overlapping of the statutes in respect of extensions.²⁰ The constitutional or statutory power of a municipality to issue bonds for the purpose of purchasing or constructing light, power, or gas plants does not include power to go into the general public utility gas business;²¹ and a revenue bond issue to enable a city to engage in the power business generally goes far beyond its statutory power to issue bonds for the acquisition or construction of undertakings for its own use and the use of its inhabitants.²² A local law which calls for the financing of an electric light plant by the issuance of bonds to which the municipal credit is not pledged has been held to be null and void where it violates the prohibitive provisions of a general city law.²³

f. Transportation System

When authorized by constitutional, charter, or statutory provisions to do so, a municipal corporation may issue bonds for the purchase or construction and the maintenance and operation of a system for supplying its inhabitants with transportation.

Under constitutional, charter, or statutory provisions conferring authority to do so, a municipal corporation may issue bonds for the purchase or construction and maintenance and operation of a system for supplying its inhabitants with transportation,²⁴ such as a subway,²⁵ street railway,²⁶ or bus line,²⁷ even though, under some constitutional provisions, the transportation system extends beyond

Notes or certificates. Under a statute authorizing the issuance of budget notes, a city may issue budget notes for the purpose of meeting a deficiency arising from increases in wages granted by the city transportation board to its employees.³⁰ Some statutes have made mandatory the issuance of temporary certificates of indebtedness or corporate stock notes, during a prescribed initial period of public operation of a subway, for the purpose of providing for the payment of the excess of expenses and charges over revenue.³¹

g. Harbor, Levee, and Water-Front Improvements

In the exercise of authority conferred by charter or statute, a municipal corporation may issue bonds for harbor or water-front improvements.

Under some charters or statutes, a municipal corporation may issue bonds for public harbor³² or water-front³³ improvements generally, the purchase,³⁴ construction,³⁵ or improvement³⁶ of wharves, docks, and piers, the construction, maintenance, and operation of a yacht basin,³⁷ the dredging of a ship canal,³⁸ the acquisition of rights of way for a flood wall³⁹ or levee⁴⁰ to be constructed with federal aid, the establishment of barge terminals,⁴¹ or the construction of a wholesale terminal fruit and vegetable market on a public levee.⁴²

Some municipalities, however, have been held not to be authorized by charter or statute to issue bonds for the construction⁴³ or repair⁴⁴ of a pier or wharf.

h. Recreational Areas or Facilities

A municipal corporation has such, but only such, authority to issue bonds for parks, stadiums, or other recreational areas or facilities as is conferred on it by constitutional, charter, or statutory provisions.

Streets and sidewalks adjacent to park

(1) It has been held that statutory authority to issue bonds for park and boulevard purposes does not extend to the issuance of bonds for the construction of a sidewalk and retaining wall in a street adjacent to a park.—Morgan v. Akron, 19 Ohio Cir.Ct., N.S., 109, affirmed 95 N.E. 1145, 84 Ohio St. 499.

(2) In other decisions, however, it has been held or conceded that, under the view that a park is a public utility, a city may issue bonds for though not always,⁴⁷ granted authority by constitutional, charter, or charter provisions to issue bonds to obtain funds to acquire and improve land for park purposes. Under some charter and statutory provisions a city is authorized to pledge its receipts from gas and electric franchises, which become part of the general revenues of the city, for payment of recreational facilities bonds which are general obligations of the city;⁴⁸ but a revenue bond act under which civic recreational bonds are issued may require the municipal authorities to prescribe such charges in connection with the activities established on the recreational area that it will be self-supporting and have sufficient revenue to pay the principal of, and interest on, the bonds, as well as the entire expense of its operation and maintenance.⁴⁹

Golf course. A legislative determination that the issuance of municipal bonds for a golf course is for a municipal purpose has been upheld by the courts,⁵⁰ but, in the absence of a specific grant of power to issue bonds for a golf course, authority to issue bonds for this purpose will not be deduced or implied from general powers.⁵¹

1. Other Matters

When authorized to do so by constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions, a municipal corporation may issue bonds for hospital purposes, the purchase of fire-fighting apparatus and equipment, the acquisition of land for use as a cemetery or a landing field for aircraft, the acquisition and operation of a municipal parking system on streets and property owned by the municipality, or the construction, operation and maintenance of a public market.

The purchase by a municipal corporation of a fire truck and necessary equipment therefor is a valid purpose for which the city may, under statutory authority, issue bonds;⁵² but a mere debt for fire hose and other accessories, not evidenced by any contract in writing, is not a bonded debt, nor is the creation of the debt equivalent to the issuance of a bond, so as to relieve the municipality from liability by reason of failure to comply with constitutional and statutory requirements applicable to the issuance of bonds.⁵³

Airport. The issuance of municipal bonds to pay for the acquisition and improvement of lands outside the city limits for a landing field for aircraft is authorized by some constitutional and statutory provisions.⁵⁴

Cemetery. Under some constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions municipal bonds may be issued for the purchase of land to be used as a cemetery⁵⁵ and to be owned, controlled, and managed exclusively by the municipality.⁵⁶ by charter or statute, a municipality may issue bonds for the construction,⁵⁹ enlargement, improvement,⁶⁰ operation,⁶¹ and maintenance⁶² of municipal public markets.

Parking system. In the exercise of power conferred by a revenue bond act, and without violating constitutional provisions, a municipality may issue revenue bonds for the acquisition and operation of a municipal parking system combining parking facilities on public streets and on off-street property of the municipality, the bonds being payable solely out of the net revenues derived from the operation of the system and such net revenues being pledged for the payment of the bonds.⁶³

j. Combined Undertakings

Under some constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions, the issuance of bonds or revenue certificates by a municipal corporation for a combination of two or more public utility undertakings is authorized.

Under some constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions, a municipal corporation may issue bonds or revenue certificates for a combined or unified waterworks and sewer,⁶⁴ or waterworks and electric light,⁶⁵ plant or system, or for the construction of one plant for the furnishing of water, light, and sewerage,⁶⁶ or for the extension and improvement of water, gas, and sewerage plants or systems,⁶⁷ or for a public project consisting of a municipal auditorium, field house, and swimming pool.⁶⁸ It has been held, however, that a statute authorizing a combination of any two or more specified revenue-producing undertakings for the purpose of issuing bonds in anticipation of revenue should not be so interpreted as to authorize a combination of undertakings which do not serve a common purpose and are not very closely related in location and in kind;⁶⁹ and it has also been held that an ordinance authorizing the issuance of bonds to extend two utility systems is invalid on the ground that revenues derived from one system cannot be appropriated to pay the cost of construction or operation of another;⁷⁰ but some statutes or charters contemplate and authorize the issuance of bonds or certificates mortgaging or pledging the revenue or income of one utility system to secure funds to build, extend, or improve another system.⁷¹

§ 1909. Aid of Individuals, Corporations, or Private or Quasi-Public Enterprises

Railroads. Except in some states,⁸⁵ the legislature of a state has power to authorize municipalities to issue bonds in aid of railroads designed to benefit the public interests of the community,⁸⁶ but municipalities are without authority to issue bonds for this purpose unless the power to do so is conferred expressly or by reasonable implication,⁸⁷ and the particular municipality issuing the bonds,⁸⁸ and the particular railroad receiving them,⁸⁹ are within the terms of the authority granted. The power to become a stockholder in a railroad company or to appropriate money thereto, expressly conferred on a municipality by the legislature, does not carry with it the power to issue negotiable bonds in payment of such subscription or appropriation,⁹⁰ unless the latter power is also expressly,⁹¹ or by reasonable implication,⁹² conferred by the statute. It has been held that municipal bonds may be issued to enable a railroad to purchase land for,⁹³ and erect,⁹⁴ a depot, to erect machine shops,⁹⁵ and to provide terminal facilities.⁹⁶

- a. By bonds generally
- b. By notes or certificates generally
- c. Application of provisions

a. By Bonds Generally

- (1) General considerations
- (2) Powers involved in, or incidental to, funding or refunding

(1) General Considerations

Provided it does not violate constitutional provisions in doing so, the legislature may grant to a municipal corporation authority to fund or refund its indebtedness by the issuance of bonds.

Bonds issued by a municipal corporation to fund or refund an indebtedness do not create a new⁹⁷ or additional⁹⁸ indebtedness, but merely evidence,⁹⁹ change the form of,¹ and extend and renew² an ex-

Mandatory statute requiring towns to issue railroad-aid bonds for the benefit of a railroad whose line of construction was to intersect the towns affected was held to be unconstitutional.—People v. Batchellor, 53 N.Y. 128, 13 Am.R. 480.

Stock

Where a city pledged its stock in a railroad company as security for its bonds issued in aid of the road, and the bonds provided that the holders might exchange them for a like amount of the stock, and be substituted as stockholders in the place of the city, it was held that the bondholders had a lien on the whole of the stock, but that one bond could not bind more than one share of stock.—Aurora v. Companies afterward incorporated
An act of a state legislature authorizing a city to issue its bonds in aid of railroads incorporated and organized does not extend to companies afterward incorporated; and, where a city issues its bonds in aid of such a company without authority of law and receives therefor the bonds of the company, secured with other bonds by a mortgage on its road, the city is not such a lien creditor for a valuable consideration as to entitle it to claim a share of the proceeds of the sale of the mortgaged premises made in satisfaction of the mortgage.—Smith v. isting indebtedness. While a refunding operation involves the fixing of a new date for payment of the indebtedness³ and the fixing of the interest rate for the extended time,⁴ funding or refunding bonds merely take the place of, and are substitutes for, other bonds or evidences of indebtedness⁵ which are surrendered and canceled.⁶ Bonds are not refunding bonds because part of the proceeds thereof is to be used to pay a preliminary indebtedness in inaugurating a municipal project, but are original bonds for the purpose, in part, of funding or paying off an expressly authorized floating debt incurred in furtherance of a permissible and expressly authorized municipal project.⁷

Power to issue renewal or refunding bonds does not result merely because of the existence of municipal indebtedness;⁸ but a municipality may, when duly authorized by the legislature, issue its bonds to fund or refund its indebtedness,⁹ since it is unques-

Meaning of terms

(1) To "fund" an outstanding debt of a municipal corporation which is payable presently or at short periods is to convert such indebtedness into a more permanent form with an extended time of payment and with interest which is regular and which also may be reduced.—Long Beach v. Lisenby, 179 P. 198, 180 Cal. 52.

(2) As used in constitutional or statutory provisions relating to municipal debts, the term "funded debt" includes all municipal indebtedness embraced within, or evidenced by, a bond, the principal of which is payable at a time beyond the current fiscal year of its issue, with periodical terms for the payment of interest.—Corpus Juris quoted in Corporation for Relief of Widows and Children of Clergymen in Communion of Protestant Episcopal Church in Commonwealth of Pennsylvania v. City of Philadelphia, 176 A. 727, 730, 317 Pa. 76—27 C.J. p. 929 note 9 [a].

(3) As used in a constitution providing that no funded debt should be contracted for a municipal corporation, unless for a specific object, the term should be construed in its proper etymological sense, and means a debt requiring a variety of things to create it, and certain provisions to be made before it can be contracted, which insure the payment of the interest thereon and provide a sinking fund for the redemption of the principal of the debt, if it is protected by a law of the legislature binding on the corporation, or which in effect pledges all the taxable property for the payment of interest and principal.—Ketchum v. Buffalo, 21 Barb., N.Y., 294.

(4) "The expression, funding a debt has been sometimes incorrectly used to signify the aggregating of numerous floating debts of a municipal corporation, created at different times and upon different considerations, and borrowing money upon bond to pay off the whole."—Ketchum v. Buffalo, 14 N.Y. 356, 379.

Identity and continuance of obligation

(1) Where refunding bonds are issued and exchanged for outstanding bonds merely to extend the time of payment of the outstanding bonds, the obligation of the refunding bonds may lawfully be made a continuation of the legal obligation of the outstanding bonds refunded, since the refunding bonds in such case will be construed as mere renewals of the existing bonds on the same terms as to security, thereby carrying forward the identical obligation of the originals, unless it is provided otherwise by the refunding bond provisions or by the statutes under which the refunding bonds are authorized.—State v. City of Pensacola, 166 So. 851, 123 Fla. 331.

(2) Refunding bonds carry no greater obligation of the taxing units than did the refunded bonds.—State ex rel. Georgia Bond & Mortgage Co. v. Cone, 189 So. 47, 137 Fla. 412.

(3) The fact that amount of village's funding bonds authorized to be issued exceeded the principal amount of notes funded does not render the bond obligation new and independent, where the amount of the bonds actually issued did not exceed the amount of the debt funded.—State ex rel. Ohio Nat. Bank of Columbus v. Village of Hudson, 16 N.E.2d 266, 134 Ohio St. 150.

(4) Bonds issued in compromise of, or in exchange for, a judgment partake of the nature of the judgment and are the same sort of obligation as the judgment itself.—G. W. Jones Lumber Co. v. City of Martmarth, 272 N.W. 190, 67 N.D. 309—Schleiber v. City of Mohall, 268 N.W. 445, 66 N.D. 593.

tionably within the power of the legislature to grant such authority,¹⁰ provided, in so doing, it does not violate constitutional provisions.¹¹ The power conferred on a municipality to borrow money, as discussed supra § 1869, and issue bonds, supra § 1905, for all municipal purposes necessarily includes the power to do so for the purpose of paying or funding the floating indebtedness of the municipality.¹² Also, refunding bonds may properly be said to be within a statute granting power to make contracts of every kind and nature and to execute all instruments necessary or convenient for carrying out the purposes of the statute;¹³ and power to refund outstanding revenue bonds may be implied from powers expressly conferred in respect of the operation, maintenance, and financing of the project or utility,¹⁴ or from express power to issue¹⁵ or redeem¹⁶ the original bonds. There is some authority, however, for the view that the power of a municipal corporation to issue refunding bonds cannot arise by implication,¹⁷ as from express authority to issue original bonds.¹⁸

Consistent statutes

The statute providing for refunding of municipal indebtedness, and statute providing for maintenance and integrity of sinking fund, are not inconsistent, but they established two different methods of liquidating the maturing bonds of municipalities.—Schuchman v. City of Pittsburgh, 41 A.2d 642, 351 Pa. 527, 157 A.L.R. 785.

Conflict between statutes

(1) Where a general refunding statute is inconsistent with a special act, the special act prevails to the extent of the inconsistency.—State v. City of Miami, 134 So. 608, 101 Fla. 292.

(2) A general statute authorizing the issuance of refunding bonds and applying alike to all incorporated cities and towns in the state has, however, been held effective to supersede or amend every charter or municipal ordinance with which it is in conflict.—Burton v. Gibbons, 36 P. 2d 786, 148 Or. 370.

18. Tex.—San Antonio Union Junior College Dist. v. Daniel, supra.

The availability of other means of paying or liquidating indebtedness does not preclude the issuance of funding or refunding bonds to meet it,¹⁹ unless such other means are made exclusive by charter or statute.²⁰ So, also, unless the statutes make the issuance of funding or refunding bonds mandatory,²¹ or grant to holders of indebtedness the right to demand the issuance to them of funding or refunding bonds,²² or confer on a designated court the power to determine the propriety of refunding securities,²³ or the issuance of funding or refunding bonds involves a violation of law,²⁴ the question whether municipal indebtedness shall be funded or refunded by the issuance of bonds or be paid in a manner otherwise provided by law is a matter within the discretion of the municipal officers having control of municipal fiscal affairs;²⁵ a creditor is without right to compel the issuance of the bonds,²⁶ and a court has no concern with the wisdom of the financial policy in issuing refunding bonds²⁷ and has no right to interfere with the judgment of the council to issue refunding bonds instead of levying taxes.²⁸ It has been held, without reference to any statute, that, where the cost of building a municipal power transmission line was met by a bond issue, and the line was removed in pursuance of an order of the board of county commissioners engaged in making a highway improvement, the expense of removing and rebuilding the line should be regarded as construction cost and funded in the same way as the original construction cost.²⁹

Power granted by constitution. The legislature cannot withdraw the general power of a municipal corporation, as granted by the constitution of the state, to issue refunding bonds.³⁰ The purpose of a constitutional amendment authorizing the issuance of refunding bonds has been held to be to eliminate the necessity for an election and to simplify the procedure for issuance of such bonds.³¹

Agreement. An agreement cannot operate to prevent a city from exercising its statutory authority to issue refunding bonds when it is to the interest of the city and its taxpayers to do so and no controlling law is violated.³² Effect, however, is accorded statutes making an agreement with bondholders and an exchange of refunding bonds for refunded bonds a permissible method of refunding³³ or requiring an agreement between the municipality and holders of judgment indebtedness

Validity of agreement

(1) Under such a statute, either a valid agreement of exchange or a bona fide cash bid is essential.—State ex rel. Town of El Dorado v. Williamson, 60 P.2d 1032, 177 Okl. 526—State ex rel. Town of Nichols Hills v. Williamson, 60 P.2d 1036, 177 Okl. 529.

(2) Where a county treasurer's agreement with the municipality to accept refunding bonds in place of bonds held as county sinking fund investments is invalid as beyond his

of the municipality before such indebtedness can be funded and bonds issued in payment thereof.³⁴

(2) Powers Involved in, or Incidental to, Funding or Refunding

A municipal corporation possessing power to fund or refund an indebtedness by the issuance of bonds has such incidental powers as are expressly conferred and, subject to constitutional or statutory prohibitions or limitations, such other powers as are necessary to make the power to fund or refund effective.

The power to refund clearly includes such other powers as may be essential to make it effective.³⁵ A pledge of such property or revenues for payment of refunding bonds as is authorized by statute, and not prohibited by constitution or statute, may be made.³⁶

Principal and price. Some constitutional provisions authorizing the issuance of refunding bonds indicate that the principal outstanding is to remain the same as under the original bond issue,³⁷ and others contemplate that refunding bonds may be exchanged for equal amounts of the principal of the bonds refunded or that refunding bonds may be sold and the proceeds invested in the purchase of outstanding bonds, provided the price at which the refunding bonds are sold and the price at which the refunded bonds are purchased do not result in an increase in the outstanding bond indebtedness to be paid by taxation.³⁸ In the absence of a provision calling for a different conclusion, refunding bonds may be issued in an amount less than that of the bonds or indebtedness refunded,³⁹ but they cannot be issued for a larger amount⁴⁰ unless they are sold at less than par under statutory authority.⁴¹

Rate of interest. The right of a municipality to fund or refund an existing obligation includes the right to fix such rate of interest, within the limits prescribed by law, as will make the funding or refunding possible;⁴² and, unless a constitutional or statutory provision contemplates that the rate of interest on refunding bonds shall be the same as on the original bonds,⁴³ refunding bonds are not invalid because they fix a different rate of interest.⁴⁴

In the exercise of authority expressly or impliedly conferred on it, a municipal corporation may issue notes authority to enter into, approval of a refunding bond issue predicated on such agreement is properly withheld.—State ex rel. Town of El Dorado v. Williamson, 60 P.2d 1032, 177 Okl. 526.—State ex rel. Town of Nichols Hills v. Williamson, 60 P.2d 1036, 177 Okl. 529.

Covenant for continuance of rights and remedies

A city could issue refunding bonds and covenant that contractual rights and remedies for the enforcement of the indebtedness refunded by the refunding bonds and the taxes securing them should apply and appertain to the refunding bonds independently of any restrictions or limitations enacted by the legislature of the state, taking effect on or after a certain date, where all original bonds sought to be refunded were issued prior to that date.—City of Fort Myers, 198 So. 814, 145 Fla. 135.

Creation of reserves

Provisions for creation of reserves to pay proposed refunding bonds did not increase burden of taxation or pledge any new or additional revenues for payment of refunding bonds or interest thereon, since purpose thereof was to make refunding bonds more attractive to investors and to decrease burden of taxpayers.—*State v. or certificates to refund or renew outstanding indebtedness.

In pursuance of authority conferred by charter or statute, a municipal corporation may issue tax participation certificates in exchange for old evidences of indebtedness⁴⁵ or water revenue certificates to refund outstanding indebtedness.⁴⁶ Notwithstanding the absence of express constitutional or statutory authority for the issuance of new refunding certificates, the specific authority of a city to call and redeem refunding paving certificates necessarily includes authority to issue and sell new refunding obligations to raise money to call and redeem.⁴⁷ The power of the city to issue refunding paving certificates to redeem existing certificates implies power to date the refunding certificates in the year in which they are issued according to the usual practice;⁴⁸ and it is not improper for the city issuing the new refunding certificates to name a sinking fund depository⁴⁹ and paying agents⁵⁰ different from those designated for the certificates being redeemed and refunded.

A note given for money borrowed to pay and retire a matured bond serves the same purpose as the issuance and sale of a refunding bond;⁵¹ a renewal note is as good as the note which it renews;⁵² and a note, regarded as within the power of the municipality to give a transferable written evidence of a valid debt, is enforceable by a transferee, even though the instrument is negotiable in form and, by reason of failure to comply with constitutional provisions as to issuing bonds, the city was without power to issue negotiable paper which would be good in the hands of a bona fide holder for value regardless of the merits of the debt.⁵³ Where no new source of revenue is involved, the pledge made for the payment of delinquent tax notes does not prevent the notes from being properly regarded as refunding obligations.⁵⁴

Such bonds, judgments, floating indebtedness or other indebtedness may be funded or refunded by the issuance of bonds as are valid and existing debts and obligations of the municipal corporation and are within the terms of the constitutional, charter, or statutory provision authorizing the funding or refunding.

The character of the indebtedness which may be funded or refunded by the issuance of bonds under constitutional, charter, or statutory authority depends on the terms of the constitutional, charter, or statutory provision and the construction placed thereon;⁵⁵ and under particular provisions bonds may be issued for the purpose of funding floating indebtedness,⁵⁶ paying, funding, or refunding judg-

Floating indebtedness

(1) The floating indebtedness of a municipal corporation is that mass of lawful and valid claims against the corporation, for the payment of which there is no money in the corporate treasury specifically designed, or any taxation or other means of providing money to pay, particularly provided.—Corpus Juris quoted in Elliott v. Fiscal Court of Pike Coun-

ments,⁵⁷ refunding or renewing bonds or bonded indebtedness,⁵⁸ refunding notes⁵⁹ or certificates of indebtedness,⁶⁰ or refunding securities issued in anticipation of the collection of an assessment or any installment thereof.⁶¹ Constitutional, charter, or statutory authority to issue funding or refunding ty, 36 S.W.2d 619, 621, 237 Ky. 797—26 C.J. p 742 note 76.

(2) Indebtedness incurred in litigation concerning proposed bond issue did not constitute a floating indebtedness that might be funded by proposed bonds.—First Nat. Bank v. City of Princeton, 117 S.W.2d 210, 273 Ky. 601.

Judgments constitute funded debts for which refunding bonds may be issued under a general refunding statute.—State v. City of Sanford, 174 So. 339, 128 Fla. 171.

Power of municipal body

Where city concedes liability for damages, or when judgment liability is imposed by law, only municipal authority with power to provide means of payment by general bond issue duly authorized is city's legislative body.—Douglass v. City of Los Angeles, 53 P.2d 353, 5 Cal.2d 123.

Objections considered

A municipal refunding plan was applied to a judgment, and a perpetual stay against enforcement of the judgment and a mandamus order directing the levy of a tax for its payment was granted, notwithstanding the judgment creditor was a non-resident of the state and an interest in judgment, based on bonds of municipality, had been sold, and, after approval of municipal refunding plan providing for four per cent interest, city continued to make payments of annual installments on judgment in accordance with mandamus order providing for six per cent interest; and it was held that judgment and writ of mandamus were rendered impotent to avail creditors any greater recovery on the municipality's obligations than holders of such obligations who had not reduced them to judgment in face of order of court approving and placing in operation a refunding plan.—Christmas v. City of Asbury Park, D.C.N.J., 53 F.Supp. 64.

Class of judgments not included

A statute has been construed not to empower corporate authorities to issue bonds for the satisfaction of judgments which have been incurred for other than corporate purposes.—Indiana Harbor Belt R. Co. v. Calumet City, 63 N.E.2d 369, 391 Ill. 280.

Valid refunding bonds may be refunded.—State v. Haines City, 188 So. 831, 137 Fla. 616.

Part of bond issue

(1) Part of a bond issue may be refunded under a statute authorizing a municipality to issue bonds for the purpose of refunding any of its bonded indebtedness and not limiting the power to refund to an entire issue; and the determination of which bonds shall be called for refunding rests in the discretion of the municipality.—Town of Alamogordo v. Beall, 64 P.2d 384, 41 N.M. 93.

(2) Even though the governing statute contemplates that all bonds outstanding and unpaid shall be refunded, and the court does not in general approve the refunding of part only of outstanding unpaid bonds, it will not hold a refunding proceeding void or invalid for omission of one bond, where, at time of refunding, owner of that bond was unknown and could not be found, and there was sufficient money on hand in fund to pay that bond and such bond was set aside as paid or payable from available funds and in that manner was omitted and not refunded with other outstanding bonds.—Mefford v. Oklahoma City ex rel Simpson, 155 P.2d 523, 195 Okl. 45.

(3) It has been held that, where there has been collected, and is in the sinking fund, a sum sufficient to retire some of the outstanding bonds of an issue, it should be used for that purpose and new bonds be issued only to refund the remaining outstanding bonds.—City of Waco v. Mann, 127 S.W.2d 879, 133 Tex. 163.

Fla.—Sullivan v. City of Tampa, 134 So. 211, 101 Fla. 298

Certificates of indebtedness as bonds

(1) The meaning of the terms "bonds" and "certificates" of indebtedness, found in act relating to funding and refunding of existing indebtedness of municipalities, must be determined from the context and circumstances under which the terms were used; and a particular refunding statute was held not to indicate a synonymous use of the terms and not to include certificates within the term "bonds" in a provision authorizing the issuance of bonds to refund indebtedness represented by bonds.—Tracy v. Barnes County, 289 N.W. 377, 69 N.D. 602.

(2) On the other hand, guaranty certificates of indebtedness which are long-term interest-bearing certificates under seal importing a general liability of the city thereon were held to be "bonds" within the meaning and intent of that word, as used in a constitutional provision relating to the issuance of bonds to refund the principal and interest of outstanding bonds.—State v. City of St. Petersburg, 157 So. 641, 117 Fla. 300.

However, refunding bonds authorized, issued, and accepted in composition or settlement of an existing and outstanding indebtedness are valid obligations, although the original evidences of debt may not have been enforceable,⁷⁴ where there is a bona fide dispute, not based on total lack of authority to incur the debt, as to the liability of the municipality.⁷⁵

Refunding matured or unmatured obligations. A municipality may refund or renew bonds at the maturity thereof;⁷⁶ and, under some statutes, it may issue bonds to retire outstanding bonds or other obligations prior to maturity thereof,⁷⁷ at least where they are about to mature.⁷⁸ So, too, under some statutes, outstanding bonds may be refunded, although they are not in default,⁷⁹ and, under other statutes, bonds may be refunded where they are about to mature and, in the opinion of the municipal council, there will be a default in payment of principal within one year.⁸⁰ In determining how far in advance of the maturity date of outstanding bonds a municipal corporation may issue refunding bonds, where a specific period is not fixed by statute, the rule of reason must be applied,⁸¹

In at least one jurisdiction, renewal bonds may not be issued and begin to bear interest before the bonds to be renewed are payable, or can be called and paid, where this course necessarily and inevitably results in a duplication of interest;⁸³ but there is no duplication of interest, and, hence, refinancing bonds are not invalid under this rule, where they are not issued and do not begin bearing interest until the maturity date of the bonds they replace;⁸⁴ a city may arrange in advance for funds to retire existing bonds;⁸⁵ and a sale of bonds to refund another issue may be held a reasonable time in advance of the maturity of the issue to be refunded, provided the new issue bears interest from a date not earlier than the maturity of the issue to be refunded and the purchase price is payable on such maturity,⁸⁶ or, if the purchase price is paid in advance of the maturity of the old issue, provided the depository of funds realized from the sale contracts to pay interest on the deposit equal to the interest accruing on the bonds prior to the date of retirement of the old issue.⁸⁷

In Louisiana

(1) Where there was a provision for redemption before maturity, the fact that city's refunding paving certificates were issued as of July 1 and the certificates being redeemed were being called for the following January 1, did not make the refunding certificates illegal because of the double interest charges incurred during the overlapping period, since such double interest was merely a normal incidental cost of the refunding operation.—State ex rel. Maestri v. Cave, 190 So. 631, 193 La. 419.

(2) However, a constitutional amendment authorizing political subdivision to refund bonds permitted issuance of refunding bond only where bonds to be refunded were available for cancellation either because of their voluntary surrender or by reason of their having become due, and did not permit the refunding before maturity, at a lower interest rate, of bonds bearing fixed-rate of interest for definite term and containing no provision for redemption before maturity.—Martin v. Mayor & Bd. of Aldermen of Town of Westwego, 32 So.2d 711, 212 La. 439.

c. Limitation of Amount

Effect is accorded a constitutional or statutory provision limiting the amount of bonds a municipal corporation may issue; but such a limitation is not applicable unless the bond or other obligation in question is a debt of the municipality; and, where the limitation is imposed only by statute, and not by the constitution of the state, it may be changed or removed entirely by the legislature.

Constitutional⁸⁸ or valid statutory⁸⁹ provisions limiting the amount of bonds which a municipal corporation may issue are accorded effect, as are also statutory limitations of the amount of stock a municipality may issue;⁹⁰ and this is true whether the limit prescribed is a specified amount⁹¹ or, as is more common, is a certain percentage of the assessed value of the taxable property within the municipality.⁹² Under the latter limitation the basis of computation is not the actual value of property within the municipality,⁹³ but the value thereof as shown by the last regular tax assessment made by the proper authorities,⁹⁴ and completed at the time the debt is created.⁹⁵

tional, one, it may be changed⁹⁶ or dispensed with entirely⁹⁷ at the will of the legislature.

Under some constitutional and legislative provisions, cities have the right to determine what the bonding limit shall be up to eight per cent of the valuation of their real and personal property, but they have no right to prescribe the mode or manner of raising or lowering the bonding limit.⁹⁸ A statutory limitation has been held not applicable to a city operating under a special charter.⁹⁹

Limitation of, or to, taxes. Unless made applicable by reference and adoption,¹ a charter or statutory limitation of the amount or rate of taxes which may be levied does not apply to an issuance of bonds so as to restrict the amount thereof.² Under a statute authorizing municipalities to issue tax warrants in anticipation of taxes levied to the extent of a specified percentage thereof, the amount of the taxes lawfully levied, and not the amount actually extended, determines the amount of anticipation warrants which may be lawfully issued.³ Public benefit vouchers evidencing a general obligation of the city fixed by a confirmation judgment are not a species of tax anticipation warrants so as to be

What constitutes bonded indebtedness generally. The important elements of a "bonded debt" or "bonded indebtedness" of a municipality, within the meaning of a constitutional or statutory limitation of the amount thereof, are that the bond or other obligation is a primary obligation of the municipality⁵ and is to be paid out of taxes to be levied on all the property within the corporate boundaries.⁶ Hence, such a limitation is not applicable to, and is not violated by, bonds or other obligations which are not bonds or debts of the city,⁷ or are payable solely from the revenues of a municipal project,⁸ or are secured by the pledge of a fund which may be reasonably expected to be sufficient to meet them without resorting to the levy of a property tax.⁹ Particular notes may partake so fully of the distinctive characteristics of bonded indebtedness as to be subject to the limitation.¹⁰

Interest to accrue is not included in computing the amount of bonds which may be issued.¹¹

Time for application of limitation; aggregate indebtedness. Some statutory limitations refer only to the amount of bonds or stock which are issued at any one time¹² or within any one fiscal year,¹³ but other charter or statutory limitations, by their express terms, or the construction placed thereon, are applicable to the aggregate bonded indebtedness of the municipality,¹⁴ or the aggregate amount of its outstanding stock.¹⁵ Whether a limitation of bonded indebtedness is exceeded by a particular issue of bonds must be determined as of the time of the actual issuance of the bonds,¹⁶ and not as of a prior date when the bonds are authorized by popular vote,¹⁷ or a subsequent date,¹⁸ such as the date when the bonds are payable,¹⁹ or a date when the tax valuations are lower.²⁰

§ 1912. Bonds for Particular Purposes

Subject to such special limitation, if any, as is provided, bonds in excess of a general limitation of bonded indebtedness may be issued for a special purpose where it is so provided by a constitutional or valid statutory provision.

Municipal corporations are sometimes empowered to issue bonds in excess of a general limitation for such special purposes as municipal improvements generally,²¹ street improvements,²² bridges,²³ schoolhouses,²⁴ drains, canals, or artificial water-

Constitutionality of authorizing statute

Statute authorizing municipalities to make public improvements and pay therefor by bonds payable from income to be derived from their operation is not unconstitutional because it authorizes the issuance of bonds in excess of the limit of bonded indebtedness fixed by a statute enacted in pursuance of a constitutional provision, since the bonds are not payable by the city and do not increase the bonded indebtedness of the city.—Young v. City of Ann Arbor, 255 N.W. 579, 267 Mich. 241.

Lack of evidence of less bonding power

Municipal bonds for permanent improvements would not be held invalid as exceeding amount of bonding power available, in absence of evidence from which court could find that bonding power was less than the amount of bonds authorized.—City of Youngstown v. Mitchell, 14 Ohio Supp. 83.

courses,²⁵ waterworks,²⁶ water²⁷ or sewerage²⁸ systems, light plants,²⁹ light and power systems,³⁰ municipally owned public utilities generally,³¹ any public utility which a municipality is authorized to acquire or operate, where the bonds are secured only by the property and revenues of the utility and do not impose any liability on the municipality,³² or any specific undertakings from which the city or town may derive revenue.³³

A statute authorizing a municipality to issue bonds for particular purposes need not designate the precise amount of bonds to be issued,³⁴ but may properly limit the amount³⁵ and authorize the municipality, within the limit prescribed, to issue bonds for such amount as is necessary for the purposes specified.³⁶ Also, a legislative limitation of the amount of bonds which may be issued for particular purposes may be subsequently raised or lowered by the legislature.³⁷

One or more purposes. A charter or statutory limitation of the amount of bonds which may be issued for two or more specified purposes operates on the aggregate amount of bonds issued for such purposes;³⁸ but some limitations, by their express terms, apply only to issues for any one purpose.³⁹

Bonds issued for park purposes only are subject to general limitations of the amount of bonded indebtedness.⁴⁰

sion authorizing a municipality to issue bonds "in any amount" in aid of a railroad will be construed to mean any amount within the constitutional limit,⁴¹ and, therefore, not in conflict with it.⁴² The limitations imposed by a statute have been held not to control bonds issued under a later statute prescribing limitations of the amount of bonds issuable in aid of a railroad.⁴³

Calamity relief. Under some charter or statutory provisions, a city may issue bonds, within the special limitation imposed by such provisions, for the relief of its inhabitants in case of fire, flood, or other calamity, even though such bonds cause the bonded indebtedness of the city to exceed a general limitation thereof;⁴⁴ but the special limitation may not be exceeded for calamity relief whether there is one or several calamities,⁴⁵ and even though calamity bonds previously issued have been refunded.⁴⁶

Acquisition of lands for airport. A charter provision authorizing the city, within a limitation of amount, to issue bonds for the acquisition and improvement of lands for use as an aviation field has been construed to grant an additional power and not to limit the power granted by another provision authorizing the issuance of bonds in a larger amount to pay for lands acquired for an airport.⁴⁷

ing bonds have been held not to violate constitutional provisions limiting the amount of municipal bonded indebtedness;⁴⁸ and some provisions limiting the amount of bonded indebtedness expressly except bonds issued for the purpose of paying, funding, or liquidating indebtedness existing at a particular time.⁴⁹ On the other hand, bonds to fund, refund, or liquidate indebtedness cannot be issued lawfully where they would increase the amount of the bonded indebtedness of the municipality beyond the amount prescribed by an applicable limitation.⁵⁰

Cost of property or improvement. Some statutes authorizing the issuing of bonds for the purchase of property or the making of an improvement limit the amount of the bonds to the cost of the property or improvement.⁵¹ A statutory limitation on the amount of bonds which may be issued for an improvement has been held not to be operative on the cost of the improvement⁵² or the contract price of its construction,⁵³ and a present bond issue within the amount limited by statute is not invalid because it is insufficient for the completion of the project or improvement;⁵⁴ but it has also been held that a bond issue is invalid by reason of its connection with a contract creating an indebtedness in excess of the limitation,⁵⁵ or it has been held valid where the only objection to its validity is predicated on the alleged invalidity of a contract as creating an excessive indebtedness and the contract is held valid.⁵⁶

improvement are not limited to the amount of assessments which the property owner has elected to pay in installments.⁵⁷

§ 1913. Computation of Existing Bonded Indebtedness

In computing the existing bonded indebtedness of a municipal corporation, in order to determine whether it equals or exceeds a prescribed limitation so as to preclude another issuance of bonds, it is proper to exclude void bonds, bonds issued by another political subdivision whose territory is coextensive in whole or in part with that of the municipality, and obligations or liabilities of the municipality which are not bonded indebtedness, as well as bonds which are expressly required by law to be excluded. The sinking fund on hand is to be deducted from the amount of outstanding bonds.

bonds such as auditorium bonds,⁶⁴ sewerage bonds,⁶⁵ bonds which are to be paid for by assessments specially levied on abutting property,⁶⁶ and bonds issued prior to a specified date.⁶⁷

Under some constitutional or statutory provisions, bonds issued for municipal utilities are not to be considered in ascertaining the amount of bonds which may be issued for general purposes⁶⁸ or in aid of a railroad,⁶⁹ but railroad aid bonds are to be included in computing the total amount of bonds which may be issued.⁷⁰ Also, under some statutes and the construction placed thereon waterworks bonds may be issued without regard to the general limitation of bonded indebtedness, as discussed supra § 1912, but after they have been issued they are to be included in the computation of the existing bonded indebtedness of the municipality,⁷¹ at least with respect to a subsequent issue of bonds other than for general purposes.⁷² Under other constitutional or statutory provisions, however, waterworks bonds are to be excluded from the computation either generally⁷³ or where the income from the waterworks is sufficient for operating expenses, interest charges, and sinking fund purposes.⁷⁴

Bonds issued for the share of the municipality of the cost of permanent street improvements are to be included where they are not exempted by constitutional provision from a constitutional limitation of bonded indebtedness;⁷⁵ but street improvement bonds are to be excluded where the constitution or a statute so provides.⁷⁶ Bonds for storm sewers are within a provision for exclusion of bonds for erecting, repairing, and maintaining streets and sidewalks,⁷⁷ but are not within a provision for exclusion of sewerage system bonds.⁷⁸

The sinking fund on hand is to be deducted from the amount of outstanding bonds in determining the bonded indebtedness of a municipality;⁷⁹ and, where it more than equals the principal of the outstanding bonds of a particular issue, such issue need not be considered in making the computation.⁸⁰

§ 1914. Validity of Excessive Issues

An excessive bond issue is invalid to, but only to, the extent of the excess.

Where municipal bonds have been already issued to the amount authorized by law, all bonds issued thereafter are void,⁸¹ but, where the limit has not been previously reached, bonds which in the aggregate exceed the limit are void only to the extent of the excessive issue.⁸² Where an issue of bonds is only partially excessive and the bonds are delivered at different dates, those first delivered up to the amount of the debt the municipality can lawfully create should be paid and the others should be treated as nullities;⁸³ but, where the bonds are delivered at the same time so that none has priority over the others, each bond is valid to the extent of its proportionate share of the debt lawfully contracted.⁸⁴ Any tax anticipation warrants issued in excess of the amount limited by statute are invalid.⁸⁵

2. PRELIMINARY STEPS OR PROCEEDINGS AND CONDITIONS PRECEDENT

§ 1915. In General

Constitutional and statutory prerequisites must be complied with before a municipal corporation is authorized to issue its bonds or obligations, although slight irregularities in the preliminary proceedings are not necessarily fatal.

Before a municipal corporation is authorized to issue its bonds or obligations, all acts which constitutional or statutory provisions require to be done as a prerequisite to such authority must be done,⁸⁶ and, where the legislature has prescribed a particular manner of doing an act, it must be done in the manner prescribed.⁸⁷ While municipal bonds may be valid notwithstanding slight irregularities in the preliminary proceedings,⁸⁸ in general there must be performance or fulfillment of all conditions precedent⁸⁹ and conformity with legal requirements as to preliminary proceedings;⁹⁰ and, where municipal bonds carry upon their face unmistakable evidence that the forms of law under which they purport to have been issued have not been complied with, they are void.⁹¹ The proceedings leading up to the issuance of municipal bonds may create a relation between the city and its taxpayers which is in the nature of a contractual relation.⁹²

In some states the statutes do not require the particular municipal purpose for which the proceeds of the bonds are intended to be used to be designated in the proceedings preliminary to the issuance of the bonds.⁹³ The amounts to be issued may be determined prior to the drawing of plans or the making of contracts for public works;⁹⁴ and proceedings leading up to a bond issue have been held neither irregular nor invalid because preliminary procedural steps contemplated a possible issue of bonds for a larger amount than was ultimately proposed.⁹⁵ The procedure prescribed by some statutes need not be followed in issuing bonds payable solely out of the revenues to be derived from a utility to be acquired with the proceeds.⁹⁶ It has been held not necessary to submit a proposed bond issue to a board of budget review.⁹⁷ Under some circumstances bonds may be issued for the construction of a bridge before the city has acquired the land upon which the bridge is to be constructed,⁹⁸ or bonds may be issued for the purpose of obtaining a water supply before provision for a distribution system is made.⁹⁹

Assessment proceedings. It has been held that proceedings for the assessment of benefits should be taken before bonds for a public improvement are issued¹ unless the city is primarily liable on the bonds with a right to reimburse itself by a special assessment,² but it has also been held that the bonds, when issued, are not void because the formalities required in making the assessment have not been complied with.³ Bonds issued by a city to obtain money for public improvements are not void merely because the statutory provision for levying the assessment to pay such bonds is illegal.⁴ Some statutory provisions have been held to authorize the city council, before issuing bonds, to sit as a board of equalization and ascertain and levy the amount of special benefits which may accrue from the public improvement contemplated.⁵

Time to attack bonds or ordinance. An action questioning the validity of municipal bonds or the ordinance providing therefor must be brought within the time fixed by statute,⁶ such as within a specified number of days after the publication of the ordinance or resolution authorizing or providing for the issuance of the bonds.⁷

§ 1916. Ordinance, Resolution, or By-Law

- a. In general
- b. Contents

a. In General

Passage of an ordinance, resolution, or by-law by the governing body of a municipal corporation is sometimes a prerequisite to the issuance of bonds or securities by a municipality; and notice, publication, or recording of such enactment may be required.

Where the passage of an ordinance, resolution, or by-law by the city council or governing body of the municipality authorizing the issuance of bonds, stock, or notes, is required by statute, such securities are void if issued without any ordinance, resolution, or by-law,⁸ although issued under the corporate seal.⁹ Authorization by the council of the issuance of bonds, notes, or debentures may be evidenced by a resolution¹⁰ unless an ordinance or other form of enactment is required by statute.¹¹ The measure adopted by the council may be a resolution where it was introduced as such¹² and on its face purports to be such,¹³ even though it does not contain the words "be it resolved"¹⁴ or the word "resolution."¹⁵ It has been held that a resolution adopted by a city council by the same vote which is necessary for the adoption of an ordinance has the same force and effect as though it were in the form of an ordinance.¹⁶

The passage of an ordinance providing for the issuance of bonds to pay for a public improvement is sufficient to show that the governing body of the municipality deemed such action expedient.¹⁷ It has been held that the action of a city council in enacting an ordinance providing for the issuance of bonds is legislative in nature, and not the exercise of a mere ministerial or administrative function;¹⁸ but it has also been held that an ordinance authorizing the issuance of bonds for the acquisition of a utility plant is an administrative ordinance.¹⁹ Where an election on the question of issuing bonds is not necessary, all the municipal legislation necessary to authorize the issuance of bonds may be contained in one ordinance.²⁰ The preliminary ordinance provided for by some statutes may be passed on the same day it is introduced.²¹

Prerequisites to adoption of ordinance or resolution. It is necessary to comply with statutory prerequisites to the adoption of an ordinance or resolution authorizing the issuance of the bonds or securities,²² such as the making and filing of a supplemental debt statement,²³ a determination of the benefits that will accrue to property involved,²⁴ the amount of such benefits,²⁵ and how they will be prorated.²⁶ Under some statutes it is mandatory that the total estimated cost of the improvements be on file with the city clerk at the time the resolution is adopted.²⁷ A resolution to issue bonds for municipal improvements predicated on a void resolution determining to make the improvements, and an unauthorized estimated cost thereof, has been held illegal and void.²⁸ An ordinance or resolution authorizing the issuance of bonds to pay for improvements, or the city's share of the cost thereof, may be passed before the final order for the improvement is approved by the mayor²⁹ and published,³⁰ or, under some statutes, even before the passage of a resolution declaring the necessity for the improvement.³¹ There is no requirement for public hearings under some statutes.³²

Notice, publication, and recording. Some charters or statutes require the giving of notice prior to the enactment of an ordinance providing for the issuance of bonds;³³ but the legislature has power to authorize the city to issue bonds without giving such a notice.³⁴ Also, some,³⁵ but not other,³⁶ statutes or charters require the publication of an ordinance providing for the issuance of bonds or require publication or posting of notice of the adoption of such ordinance.³⁷ Under some statutory provisions posting copies of the ordinance in public places in the municipality is sufficient if there is no newspaper published in the municipality.³⁸ Some charter provisions relating to the recording of the ordinance have been regarded as simply directory.³⁹

Vote required. Where the unanimous consent of the appropriate body is not required by either charter or statute, bonds may be issued on approval by a majority of a quorum.⁴⁰

Signature of clerk. A statutory requirement that an ordinance for a bond issue be signed by a clerk may sometimes be fulfilled by the signature of a duly appointed deputy or assistant clerk.⁴¹

b. Contents

It is necessary and sufficient that the contents of an ordinance, resolution, or by-law providing for the issuance of bonds comply, at least substantially, with charter or statutory requirements.

The contents of an ordinance, resolution, or by-law providing for the issuance of bonds should conform to, and comply with, charter or statutory provisions or requirements,⁴² such as provisions requiring a declaration of the maximum amount of money to be raised for the purpose;⁴³ and it has been held that resolutions providing for the issuance of bonds should appropriately contain the essential administrative requirements to be performed in connection with such issuance.⁴⁴

On the other hand, a substantial conformity or compliance is sufficient⁴⁵ and the city council is not required⁴⁶ or permitted⁴⁷ to anticipate changes in the constitutional or statutory law of the state. The ordinance need not show on its face that the issue will not exceed the constitutional limit of indebtedness,⁴⁸ nor need it refer specifically to the statute under which the proceedings are taken and the bonds are issued;⁴⁹ and where it does purport to make such a reference an immaterial error or discrepancy is not fatal.⁵⁰ Bonds or securities are not necessarily invalid merely because of a failure to specify the denominations in which they are to be issued,⁵¹ the date of sale,⁵² or the names of the payees.⁵³ Under some statutes the city council need not always fix the approximate maturities of proposed deficiency bonds.⁵⁴

Statement of purpose. The ordinance may state the purpose of the bond issue,⁵⁵ in which event any doubt which arises out of the use of the words employed is to be resolved in favor of the public by limiting expenditures to the express terms set forth.⁵⁶ However, when not required by statute, the particular or specific municipal purpose to which the proceeds of the bonds are to be devoted need not be mentioned in the ordinance or resolution providing for their issuance.⁵⁷ An ordinance which limits the use of the funds to such extent as may be agreed on with the federal government has been held not objectionable where the federal government is expected to purchase the bonds and in addition to contribute to the cost of the project.⁵⁸ An ordinance authorizing the issuance of bonds to defray the cost of constructing waterworks and connecting sewers is not void as the adoption of a double proposition by a single vote of the council, where it may fairly be assumed that there is only a single scheme including connecting sewers as a part of it.⁵⁹

Rate of interest. It may be proper, depending on the statutes, for the ordinance or resolution to give appropriate officials some latitude in the matter of interest rates on the bonds⁶⁰ or to fix a definite rate of interest within the limits specified by statute.⁶¹ In the absence of a constitutional requirement, a bond issue is not illegal because neither the statute authorizing it nor an ordinance passed pursuant thereto specifies the rate of interest to be charged.⁶²

Amendment of ordinance. An ordinance providing for the issuance of bonds may be amended in a proper case,⁶³ and an amendment which reduces the amount of bonds to be sold does not necessarily vitiate the form of the proceeding so as to require a new advertisement and the retaking of bids.⁶⁴

§ 1917. Petition or Consent of Taxpayers or Property Owners

A petition or consent in writing of taxpayers or property owners is sometimes required as a prerequisite to the issuance of municipal bonds, in which case the signing must be by a sufficient number of qualified persons. A petition opposing the issue may be filed under some statutes.

In the absence of constitutional restrictions, municipal corporations may be,⁶⁵ and sometimes are,⁶⁶ empowered to issue bonds without any petition from, or consent or approval by, taxpayers or property owners. On the other hand, the legislature may determine what measure of consent of taxpayers shall be required,⁶⁷ and in what form it shall be expressed;⁶⁸ and sometimes a petition or consent in writing is, or at times has been, required by law as a prerequisite to the issuance of municipal bonds,⁶⁹ or at least particular types of bonds.⁷⁰

In cases coming within a statute imposing such a condition precedent, a petition or written consent,⁷¹ containing the requisite statements, recitals, or averments,⁷² and signed⁷³ by the number of persons required,⁷⁴ who possess the prescribed qualifications,⁷⁵ must be presented,⁷⁶ or, if so required, must be filed and recorded,⁷⁷ and unless the statutory requirements are complied with the bonds issued will be void,⁷⁸ at least in the hands of those to whom they are issued,⁷⁹ and even in the hands of bona fide holders.⁸⁰ Attaching conditions to the signatures to a petition for the issue of bonds does not necessarily vitiate it.⁸¹

Withdrawal of assent. Under some,⁸² but not other,⁸³ provisions, persons who have signed a petition for, or consent to, the issuance of municipal bonds may withdraw their names therefrom at any time before a determination has been reached by the officer or board having the duty of passing on such petition or consent.

Remonstrance or petition in opposition. Some statutes provide for the filing, within a specified number of days after an order for a bond issue,⁸⁴ of a petition by taxpayers opposing the issue;⁸⁵ and under some statutory provisions no bonds may be issued if, within a specified number of days after publication of notice of the issuance of bonds, a remonstrance is filed by a greater number of owners of taxable realty than the number of petitioners seeking issuance of the bonds.⁸⁶

Compliance with petition. Under some statutes relating to the issuance of certain bonds, it is the absolute duty of the council, on the presentation of a proper petition of a majority of freeholders, to comply with the petition by issuing the bonds requested.⁸⁷

§ 1918. Provision for Payment

A municipal corporation may, and sometimes must, prior to the issuance of bonds, make provision for the payment of such bonds and interest thereon; but in the absence of such a requirement the failure to provide for the payment of interest and to create a sinking fund does not affect the legality of the bonds.

A municipal corporation may,⁸⁸ and, when so re-

Of indebtedness generally see supra § 1866.

In bonds see infra § 1941.

Payment in money only

Municipality has authority to declare that it will accept only lawful money of United States in payment of taxes or assessments levied to pay principal and interest on city refunding bonds—State v. City of Delray Beach, 191 So. 188, 140 Fla. 132, followed in 3 So.2d 510, 147 Fla. 741—State v. City of Sanford, 174 So. 339, 128 Fla. 171.

Agreement with federal government that city would pass ordinance appropriating surplus net revenues derived from operation of sanitary sewer and water extensions for repayment of bonds purchased by federal government does not invalidate proposed bond issue for construction of such extensions.—Allison v. City of Phoenix, 33 P.2d 927, 44 Ariz. 66, 98 A.L.R. 354, followed in 33 P.2d 932, 44 Ariz. 81, and 33 P.2d 933, first case, 44 Ariz. 82, 33 P.2d 933, second case, 44 Ariz. 83.

Lien; pledge of net profit

Provision in ordinance authorizing issuance of revenue bonds for completion of building owned by city, which provides that bonds are to be a statutory mortgage lien on building when completed and on equipment and future additions thereto, and which pledges all of net profit therefrom for payment of the revenue bonds and interest thereon, is valid.—Warden v. City of Grafton, 26 S.E.2d 1, 125 W.Va. 658.

Possibility of repeal of statutory authority

Municipality was not precluded from servicing bonds by pledge of revenue of municipal facilities and the proceeds of a utilities service tax because of possibility that leg-

quired by constitution, statute, or charter, must,⁸⁹ prior to the issuance of bonds, make provision for the payment of such bonds and interest thereon, a common requirement being that the municipality shall, at or before the issuance of the bonds, make provision for the collection of an annual tax sufficient to pay the interest on the bonds, and to create a sinking fund for the payment of the principal.⁹⁰ However, in the absence of such a requirement the legality of the bonds is not affected by the absence of a provision for the payment of interest and the creation of a sinking fund⁹¹ or by the making of inadequate provision therefor.⁹² Further, some requirements of this nature are not applicable in all cases.⁹³ Thus bonds payable only from the revenues of a proposed municipal utility, and not out of funds raised by taxation, have been held not to constitute debts within the meaning of provisions requiring a tax levy on the creation of a debt against the municipality.⁹⁴ Also, the issuance of bonds to refund valid outstanding bonds has been held not to create a new indebtedness, so as to require a provision for collection of a tax to pay interest and provide for a sinking fund.⁹⁵

The requirement of a provision for payment, when applicable, is mandatory,⁹⁶ and no other provision can lawfully be substituted for the provision required by constitution or statute.⁹⁷ However, where the provision required by law is made, the fact that additional provision is also made is not fatal to the validity of the bonds.⁹⁸ Moreover, the right to change the means of payment and provide a different mode is within the legislative power at all times, subject only to constitutional inhibition against impairment of the obligation of contracts.⁹⁹ islature might subsequently repeal statutory authority for servicing bonds in that manner.—Schmeller v. City of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., 38 So. 2d 36.

"May" as meaning "must" or "shall"

(1) Word "may," as used in statute providing that city may convey by way of mortgage to secure public utility certificates, means "must" or "shall," since act nowhere specifies or authorizes issuance of certificate without mortgage.—Hairgrove v. City of Jacksonville, 8 N.E. 2d 187, 366 Ill. 163.

(2) However, the word "may," as used in provision that mortgage securing municipal utility certificates may carry privilege to operate public utility and may fix rates or charges, does not mean "must," and it is not essential to existence of valid utility certificates that franchise securing certificates that franchise be granted or rate fixed.—Hairgrove v. City of Jacksonville, supra.

Certainty of source of revenue

Profits from future operation of municipal light and water plant were held not source of revenue reasonably certain of collection legally as to justify issuance of sewerage extension bonds secured by avails and residue of alimony tax.—*Miller v. (2) An ordinance prescribing the amount to be raised annually by taxes for interest and a sinking fund which erroneously calculated interest at five per cent instead of six per cent was held in substantial compliance with the statute, where a premium was to be paid for the bonds, thus making the deficit very small, and where, in addition, the deficit could be cured by placing an annual payment in an account.—*Kern v. It has been held that the validity of bonds issued under a statute cannot be affected by the fact that, in providing for their payment, the council may have imposed an illegal tax.¹

Equal installments. Under some statutes provision must be made for the redemption of the bonds in equal annual installments;² but a general statute of this nature does not invalidate a provision for the payment of bonds in unequal installments where the particular municipality has been authorized by special statutes or charter provisions to issue bonds on such conditions as the appropriate officials shall determine.³ Even under statutes requiring payment of the principal of the bonds in equal installments, strict mathematical nicety is not necessary,⁴ a substantial compliance with the statute in this respect being sufficient.⁵

Fiscal year. It has been held not improper for an ordinance authorizing the issuance of bonds to provide that for the purpose of servicing the bonds the fiscal year shall be the same as the calendar year⁶ or some annual period other than a calendar year.⁷

Pledge of entire utility. A municipal corporation operating two plants or properties as a single system ordinarily may pledge both plants and the revenues therefrom in connection with the issuance of securities the proceeds of which are to be used to make bona fide and essential additions to, or extensions of, one of them.⁸ So, under a constitutional provision permitting a municipality which desires to raise money to acquire, construct, or extend a public utility to issue mortgage bonds secured by the property and revenues of such utility, the mortgage securing the bonds may include the entire utility,⁹ including not only the property acquired or constructed with the proceeds of the sale of the bonds but also such other municipally owned property as is a necessary part of such utility and directly connected with its operation.¹⁰

A proposed issue of municipal bonds is sometimes required to be examined and passed on by public officers, either state or municipal, in which case the duties of such officers are supervisory rather than ministerial or perfunctory.

Statutes may impose the duty of examining and passing on a proposed issue of municipal bonds or securities on public officers,¹¹ such as municipal officers,¹² or the attorney general,¹³ or a state board, department, or commission;¹⁴ and some statutory provisions of this nature are mandatory.¹⁵ The purpose of such statutes is not only to protect the particular locality and its inhabitants against the imposition of unauthorized or illegal obligations,¹⁶ but also to give assurance to intending purchasers of the bonds that, if and when such bonds are purchased, the purchaser will acquire an indefeasible title thereto.¹⁷ The powers and duties of the officials to whom the matter of the issuance of the bonds is submitted are supervisory,¹⁸ and not ministerial¹⁹ or perfunctory.²⁰

Securities affected. Some statutes providing for the examination or approval of municipal bonds,²¹ such as statutes limited to public bonds or securities,²² do not apply to improvement bonds payable solely by special assessments on property benefited by the improvement. In some jurisdictions the certificate of an officer is not required, either by the constitution or by statute, for refunding bonds.²³ A sewer district has been held not to be a political subdivision of the state within the meaning of a constitutional provision requiring proposed bonds of political subdivisions to be presented to a public officer for approval.²⁴

(2) Hearing and Determination

The public officers charged with the duty of examining a proposed issue of municipal securities may be required to hold a hearing and act only on the evidence received; and their determination is sometimes considered to be in the nature of a judgment.

Under statutes in effect so providing, the consent of a board to the issuance and sale of the bonds may not be given unless there has been a public hear-

ing²⁵ and a finding that the issuance or sale of the bonds will serve some public need and be in the public interest.²⁶ Under some provisions the attorney general may inquire into the facts relative to a proposed bond issue to ascertain whether a sufficient ad valorem taxing margin is in existence, and may reasonably be expected to remain in existence, to pay the bonds;²⁷ but where a municipality has sources of revenue which are reasonably stable and sure, other than ad valorem taxes, the attorney general should consider such other sources in passing on the question as to whether or not there is and will be a sufficient margin of ad valorem taxing power to pay the bonds.²⁸ In general, the securities should be approved in the absence of defects or irregularities,²⁹ but not otherwise.³⁰

Intervention. A public utility owning property in the municipality and operating a distribution system therein has been held entitled to intervene and contest the application of the municipality to a board for authority to issue bonds for the purpose of acquiring a similar distribution system.³¹

Evidence. The board must receive and weigh evidence,³² and its order and finding of fact must be based on, and supported by, sufficient competent evidence.³³ It can make no finding of fact in the absence of evidence,³⁴ or supply a lack of evidence by an unaided opinion that issuance of the bonds will serve a public need and is in the public interest,³⁵ or make a finding directly opposed to the undisputed evidence.³⁶

that the determination of the officers charged with the duty of deciding questions preliminary to the issuance of bonds is in the nature of a judgment³⁷ which is conclusive until reversed in a direct proceeding by a court.³⁸ Under some provisions, if the bond or evidence of debt has indorsed thereon a certificate signed by an authorized officer stating that the bond or evidence of debt is issued pursuant to law and that the issue is within the debt limit, and is delivered for a present consideration, no question may thereafter be raised as to the indebtedness being within the debt limit or being contracted pursuant to law;³⁹ likewise, under some provisions, after the lapse of a prescribed period from the recording of a certificate of validity, the municipality cannot avoid liability on the bonds because of irregularities in the proceedings for their issuance.⁴⁰ Under other provisions the approval of the bonds by the public officer merely renders the bonds prima facie valid,⁴¹ and such prima facie validity may be destroyed by proof of the nullity and illegality of the bonds;⁴² moreover, it has been held that the municipality cannot bring itself within the protection of a statute providing for the prima facie validity of approved bonds by obtaining such approval during the pendency of a suit to destroy the validity of the bonds.⁴³

Review. The findings and order of a board in a proceeding to obtain its consent to the issuance of municipal bonds have been held subject to judicial review to determine whether, in making its determination, it acted on the basis of substantial evidence or whether it departed from rules of law and was arbitrary and capricious;⁴⁴ and the determination of public officers in a matter of this nature is sometimes reviewable by certiorari.⁴⁵

- (4) Conclusiveness and effect

(1) In General

Under some statutes special judicial proceedings may be instituted for the validation of a proposed issue of municipal securities, the purpose thereof being to facilitate an adjudication as to the validity of the securities and the regularity of the preliminary steps.

Under the statutes in some jurisdictions special judicial proceedings may or should be had for the validation of municipal bonds before their issuance, or for the validation of the proceedings preliminary to their issuance;⁴⁶ and the validity of such statutes has been upheld.⁴⁷ Judicial proceedings for validating municipal bonds are statutory⁴⁸ and remedial in their nature,⁴⁹ their purpose being to facilitate an adjudication as to the validity of the bonds and the regularity of the steps taken to issue them,⁵⁰ with a view to aiding in the sale of the securities by creating a sense of security in the mind of the prospective purchasers.⁵¹

Character of bond or security. Under some statutes validation proceedings are appropriate for every form of proposed bonded debt or certificate of indebtedness, negotiable or nonnegotiable, limited or general, which a municipal corporation may undertake to issue under purported authority of law,⁵²

or for every form of written obligation which might be issued by a municipal corporation;⁵³ and the fact that the evidences of indebtedness are referred to as notes, instead of bonds, does not prevent their validation.⁵⁴ Bonds payable solely out of the revenues of a proposed municipal enterprise are a proper subject of validation proceedings under some statutes;⁵⁵ but other provisions, in effect excluding bonds which are not payable out of the public treasury from taxes collected from the citizens, have been held inapplicable to bonds issued to acquire a municipal facility and payable solely from the income of such facility.⁵⁶

Prospective operation of statute. A statute providing for judicial approval of the issuance of bonds ordinarily applies to all bonds issued or sold after it becomes effective,⁵⁷ and may apply to bonds which have not yet been issued and offered for sale even though the ordinance providing for them was adopted before the statute;⁵⁸ but, in the absence of a provision making such a statute retroactive, it will not affect bonds issued and sold before the effective date of the statute.⁵⁹

Effect of failure to validate. A purchaser of municipal bonds which have not been duly adjudged to be in accord with the controlling law takes them subject to a future adjudication as to the validity of the statute authorizing the issue,⁶⁰ and as to the legal sufficiency of the record of the proceedings in issuing the bonds⁶¹ as well as to the legal effect of the terms of the bonds.⁶² Where the bonds have not been adjudged valid, all parties are conclusively presumed to know of fundamental or constitutional infirmities in them.⁶³

(2) Proceedings in General

The proceedings prescribed for the validation of municipal securities must be followed at least substantially, although mere irregularities therein are not necessarily fatal. Proper notice must be given; and the usual rules applicable in civil actions with respect to pleadings and evidence ordinarily govern.

The procedure prescribed for validation or approval of municipal securities is usually mandatory⁶⁴ and must be followed⁶⁵ strictly,⁶⁶ or at least substantially in all material respects;⁶⁷ but some provisions have been held to be directory⁶⁸ and certain irregularities have been held not to be fatal.⁶⁹ Under some statutes the validation proceedings are properly instituted after an election on the proposed bond issue.⁷⁰

Jurisdiction and venue. In the absence of authority conferred by statute, a court of equity is without jurisdiction to entertain a bill or information filed for the purpose of obtaining an adjudication that a proposed issue of municipal bonds is valid.⁷¹ However, where authority to issue municipal bonds on the performance of certain conditions is conferred by statute on a particular court or tribunal, such court or tribunal has power to determine whether the conditions have or have not been performed.⁷² The jurisdiction of the court depends on the jurisdictional facts pleaded in good faith,⁷³ regardless of whether or not the proposal itself be ultimately adjudicated to be within the powers of the municipal corporation.⁷⁴ Such jurisdiction attaches on the filing of a petition in the proper court,⁷⁵ and is not lost by the vacation of an order to show cause why the petition should not be granted, where a subsequent order is entered which complies with the statutory provisions.⁷⁶ The venue of a statutory validation proceeding is in the county in which the municipality is situated.⁷⁷

Parties, process, and notice. Under some statutes an action to validate securities to be issued by a municipality must be brought in the name of the state,⁷⁸ whereas under other statutes proceedings for the purpose of legalizing and confirming proceedings taken prior to the issuance and sale of bonds may be instituted by a municipal corporation.⁷⁹ There must be compliance with statutes providing for the publication of a general notice to the public stating the time and place of hearing,⁸⁰ since taxpayers are entitled to notice of the validation proceedings, under some provisions, in order that they may have an opportunity to determine the extent to which their financial interest may be affected and to present their objections.⁸¹ Proper persons may intervene in the validation proceedings and have determined all questions touching the legality and right of the municipality to create the proposed debt;⁸² but the holders of outstanding bonds which are to be refunded or renewed are not necessary parties in an action by a municipality for judicial approval of a proposed bond issue which is to be used to retire the outstanding bonds.⁸³ The failure of all the members of the municipal council to join in an answer to a petition for validation does not necessarily prevent a judgment of validation.⁸⁴

After the court has acquired jurisdiction of the proceedings by the filing of a petition, jurisdiction of the parties may subsequently be obtained by compliance with provisions pertaining to constructive service.⁸⁵ A statute providing that "upon" the filing of the petition for validation the judge should enter an order to show cause why the petition should not be granted must be given a reasonable interpretation.⁸⁶

Pleadings. The petition⁸⁷ and answer⁸⁸ in validation proceedings are governed by the statutes and the general rules of pleading. Under some statutes the allegations of the petition must show that the proposed debt is within constitutional limitations⁸⁹ and that the indebtedness for which the bonds are to be issued is within the constitutional limitations;⁹⁰ and all items of outstanding indebtedness which were created or which existed during the period in which the debt to be bonded was incurred, and which the proposed bond issue is intended to cover, should be specifically set forth.⁹¹ Under other provisions, however, the petition need not allege that the amount of the bonds is within the constitutional limitation of municipal indebtedness.⁹² A petition for validation may be amended in a proper case,⁹³ in which event an adverse party should be allowed an opportunity to take issue on the allegations as amended.⁹⁴ It has been held not improper for the court to vacate an order to show cause why the petition for validation should not be granted, and enter a second order, without requiring the petitioner to file a new petition.⁹⁵ When the facts are presented and undisputed, it is not material which party may have pleaded them.⁹⁶

Evidence. In determining the validity of municipal bonds, proper presumptions may be indulged.⁹⁷ While it has been held that the burden of showing the issuance of bonds without authority is on the party so asserting,⁹⁸ it is generally held that the burden of proving the facts essential to the validation is on the party seeking validation.⁹⁹ Thus, in proceedings to validate bonds to fund a floating indebtedness, the burden is on the party seeking validation to establish the validity of the indebtedness proposed to be funded¹ and that it was not incurred in violation of constitutional limitations on municipal indebtedness.² An intervener has the burden of sustaining objections based on facts which do not appear in the pleadings of plaintiff and the municipality but which depend for proof of their existence on aliunde evidence.³

General rules prevail as to the admissibility of evidence,⁴ and the weight and sufficiency thereof.⁵ The legality of an indebtedness proposed to be funded must be established by facts and figures, and not by mere conclusions or opinions of witnesses.⁶

Order, judgment, or findings; review. It is necessary and sufficient to comply with statutes providing for the making or rendition of an order, judgment, or decree,⁷ and the taking of the case to a higher court by appeal⁸ or a bill of exceptions.⁹ Under some statutory provisions the court is required to make a statement and finding as to the existence, character, and amount of the outstanding legal indebtedness of the municipality.¹⁰ In general, bonds will be validated or approved where they are properly authorized and all matters, proceedings, and conditions necessary to be performed in connection with their issuance have been performed in due time, form, and manner according to law.¹¹ On appeal from a decree validating the securities involved, where it appears that the members of the appellate court are evenly divided and there is no prospect of an immediate change in the personnel of the court, the decree of validation should be affirmed.¹²

Costs. Under some statutes the costs in a proceeding to test the validity of the bonds are taxable against the municipality even in cases in which the municipality wins the litigation.¹³

(3) Matters to Be Considered or Determined

The court or judge in validation proceedings should consider matters properly before it, such as whether issuance of the proposed securities would be in accordance with statutory and constitutional provisions; but matters which are collateral or otherwise not presented for determination should not be adjudicated.

There must be a consideration and determination by the court or judge of all matters properly involved in the proceeding,¹⁴ including such matters as whether the proposed bonds or securities are valid and authorized by law,¹⁵ and, in the case of a bond issue to fund a floating debt, whether the debts proposed to be funded are valid¹⁶ and were incurred with due regard for the finances of the municipality.¹⁷ In order to justify approval it must appear that the proposed issue does not contravene constitutional limitations,¹⁸ such as constitutional limitations as to the amount of the indebtedness of the municipality.¹⁹ The sufficiency of the resolution determining to make an improvement and to issue bonds therefor may be tested in a validation proceeding.²⁰

On the other hand, the court should consider only such matters as are properly to be determined in judicial validation proceedings,²¹ and should not adjudge collateral matters.²² Under some provisions the court should consider only the proceedings which the municipality is required to pursue in the exercise of its power to incur indebtedness or to issue bonds,²³ such as the preliminary resolution giving notice of the issue of the bonds and declaring the purpose for which they are to be issued, the calling of an election, the regulating of the election, and the result thereof;²⁴ and it may not review, or refuse validation because of, matters that are discretionary with the municipal officials²⁵ where there is no showing that such discretion has been abused.²⁶ Validation may not be refused because of a claim of the poverty of, and hardships on, the taxpayers which will result from the issuance of the bonds,²⁷ or because of an objection to the propriety and regularity of a proposed disbursement of the proceeds.²⁸

It is no part of the duty of the court in validation proceedings to determine the boundaries of the political subdivision²⁹ or to determine whether any territory is illegally embraced within the municipal limits.³⁰ A validating decree will not be denied on the ground that the question of issuing the bonds was not properly submitted to the electors for approval where the bonds were of a type not required to be approved by them.³¹ Special assessments, imposed for the purpose of paying the interest and principal on municipal bonds which are by law a direct obligation of the municipality, cannot generally be attacked in a proceeding to validate³² unless the validity or status of the bonds is made to depend on the validity of the assessments rather than the power of the municipality to issue them.³³

(4) Conclusiveness and Effect

A judgment of validation which is not attacked within the time prescribed by law usually is conclusive as to the validity of the securities as against the municipal corporation and all taxpayers or citizens thereof; but it does not cure a patent violation of the constitution, although it may put in repose constitutional privileges which an individual may waive or which may lawfully be circumscribed by the legislature.

A judgment or decree validating and confirming the bonds or securities, which is either not appealed from, or excepted to, within the time prescribed or is affirmed by the reviewing court, ordinarily is conclusive as to the validity of the bonds or securities³⁴ against the municipality³⁵ and all taxpayers and citizens thereof.³⁶ The decree may put in repose any matter or thing affecting the right of the municipality to issue the bonds,³⁷ or the regularity or legality of their issue,³⁸ including questions of both law and fact,³⁹ in so far as those matters or things could be lawfully prescribed, regulated, limited, or dispensed with by the legislature in the first instance or subsequently cured by a validating act. A decree of validation forecloses all objections that could have been urged before the court at the hearing of the validation proceedings, where the court had jurisdiction of the subject matter and the parties,⁴⁰ including an objection that no notice was given to the taxpayers with respect to the intention to issue the bonds.⁴¹

A validation decree does not cure a patent violation of a command or prohibition of the constitution⁴² or supply authority, which would otherwise be entirely absent, to issue municipal bonds.⁴³ However, the decree may put in repose constitutional rights or privileges which are designed solely for the protection of property rights of the individual concerned, and which he may waive, or with reference to which he may estop himself,⁴⁴ or as to which the legislature may lawfully limit the period of time within which such right or privilege may

Nonexistence of taxing district

Statute providing that the decree shall be conclusive as to the validity of the bonds against the taxing district presupposes that there is a taxing district, and, where it appears that a district has never existed, there is no entity in existence against which the bonds could be conclusively validated.—Municipal Bond & Mortgage Corporation v. Bishop's Harbor Drainage Dist., 182 So. 794, 133 Fla. 430.

Incorporation or territorial limits of municipality

Validation decrees may not be binding as to validity of statutory provisions incorporating a municipality or defining its territorial limits and its jurisdiction, unless, perhaps, such enactments have been adjudicated in validating proceedings.—State ex rel. Harrington v. City of Pompano, 188 So. 610, 136 Fla. 730.

be exercised.⁴⁵ The effect of a validating decree is to put in repose only questions put in issue by the petition or necessarily involved in the proceeding,⁴⁶ and questions of constitutional validity which were not raised and settled in the validation proceeding may be availed of at a later time.⁴⁷

Under a statute providing that a judgment of a county judge authorizing a town to create a bonded debt "shall have the same force and effect as other judgments," the judgment of the county judge may be questioned for want of jurisdiction;⁴⁸ but the burden of proving that such judgment is void for want of jurisdiction is on those who assert it,⁴⁹ and the decree cannot be collaterally attacked where it is not void on its face, but rather adjudicates all the facts necessary to show its validity and was rendered by a court of competent jurisdiction.⁵⁰ A judgment validating bonds in a statutory proceeding is void and nugatory where the petition was not filed within the time prescribed by statute,⁵¹ the notice prescribed by statute was not given,⁵² or the hearing was held and judgment rendered in a county other than the one in which the municipality is situated;⁵³ but the bonds themselves may be valid and binding notwithstanding the refusal of the court to validate and confirm them⁵⁴ or the invalidity of a judgment of validation.⁵⁵ The fact that the municipality alone answered does not render a judgment of validation subject to attack as being collusive on its face where there is nothing to indicate actual fraud or wrongdoing, and citizens, after having been given due notice, failed to avail themselves of the opportunity afforded by statute of becoming parties and contesting the proceeding,⁵⁶ and the fact that a decree of validation bears an erroneous date, due to a typographical error, is not necessarily fatal.⁵⁷

Effect of validation of refunding bonds. A decree validating and confirming the issuance of refunding bonds puts in perpetual repose the validity of the debt refunded by means of such bonds;⁵⁸ and it also operates to preserve in force, for the benefit of holders of the refunding bonds, such sources of revenue as were pledged by the original bonds and repledged and reaffirmed in the refunding bonds,⁵⁹ even though the validated refunding bonds may contain other and additional attempted pledges of revenue resources that are invalid or unenforceable.⁶⁰

Taxpayers' consent to issuance of railroad bonds. The judgment of a county court that a majority of the taxpayers of a municipality consented to the issuance of railroad bonds creates no absolute right in the railroad company thereto.⁶¹

b. Submission to Popular Vote

§ 1920. Necessity or Propriety

- a. In general
- b. Legislative power
- c. Form or name of security
- d. Funding or refunding bonds or securities

a. In General

The question of the issuance of bonds may, and sometimes must, be submitted to the voters for their approval, the purpose of such requirement being to prevent unnecessary borrowing by the municipality; provisions requiring a vote may be inapplicable to particular securities, such as those payable solely from the revenue of a proposed municipal utility.

It is proper for the municipal authorities, where duly empowered, to submit the question of a bond issue to the voters of the municipal corporation,⁶² such a submission being proper to obtain an indication of the voters' opinion even when the submission is not indispensable to the issuance of the bonds.⁶³ Where the issuance of municipal bonds or securities is authorized only when the proposition has been submitted to, and approved by, the voters of the municipal corporation, the holding of an election is necessary to the validity of the securities.⁶⁴ The purpose of the prohibitions against the issuance of municipal bonds without a vote is to prevent unnecessary and extravagant borrowing of funds by municipalities,⁶⁵ and some provisions are intended not merely to provide for the determination of whether the electors desire a system of municipal ownership of a utility, but also to enable them to determine the manner in which the municipality should acquire a municipal system.⁶⁶

Provisions requiring a vote should not be given such a narrow and technical construction as will defeat their evident intent and purpose,⁶⁷ and, if there is any reasonable doubt as to the necessity that proposed evidences of indebtedness be approved at an election, the doubt should be resolved against the issuance of the instruments without a vote.⁶⁸ The assent or approval of the electorate is not considered to have been obtained unless there has been a substantial compliance with the requirement of law.⁶⁹ Conversely, a substantial compliance with certain provisions is sufficient,⁷⁰ even though the

In determining whether a vote is required on a proposed municipal bond issue the result attempted to be brought about by what is proposed is the prime consideration,⁷² and the controlling test is to be found by regarding substance rather than form and by looking at the practical operation and effect of the proposed plan.⁷³ The issuance of bonds without compliance with requirements as to an election cannot be justified on the ground of emergency where the condition complained of did not suddenly appear;⁷⁴ and it has been held that the necessity of a vote is not obviated by the fact alone that the proposed financing is to result in no general obligation of the municipality,⁷⁵ the lender being compelled to look solely to pledged property.⁷⁶ Under constitutional or statutory provisions prohibiting the creation of an encumbrance or lien on municipal property without a vote of the electors, the issuance of instruments secured by a lien on the income, rents, or profits of municipal property or a municipal plant or system, instead of by a direct lien or encumbrance on the property itself, requires a vote.⁷⁷

Particular municipal bonds or securities may be issued without submission of the question of their issuance to the voters where constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions dispense with, or do not require, such submission.⁷⁸ Thus provisions for the submission to the voters of the question of issuing bonds have been held inapplicable to bonds for street or other improvements the cost of which is to be assessed against abutting property,⁷⁹ or to an assumption by a municipality of the bonds of a water company,⁸⁰ or to bonds authorized or issued but not sold at the time of its adoption,⁸¹ or to bonds which do not create in some form a debt of the municipality;⁸² also, to the issuance of bonds for a necessary expense,⁸³ or to raise money to meet out-

Conflict between charter provision and general law

standing, completed obligations,⁸⁴ or to that form of municipal financing required to be done in order to keep municipal utilities in operation.⁸⁵

Provisions requiring a vote are not intended to hamper the ordinary powers of public authorities to contract for current governmental needs against contemplated currently budgeted revenues available to be expended.⁸⁶ The fact that a municipal charter provides for a vote on a bond issue does not necessitate such vote where the charter conflicts with statutes dispensing with a vote in the case of the particular bonds involved.⁸⁷ Under constitutional provisions requiring an election only on the bond issues of the state, or a city or town, it has been held that a vote on the bond issues of a specially created district is unnecessary.⁸⁸

Legislative character of act. An ordinance which orders a special election to vote on a charter amendment empowering the city to issue bonds for a public building has been held not to be of a legislative character so as to be subject to initiative and referendum.⁸⁹ On the other hand, it has been held that a resolution of a municipal board of commissioners directing the mayor to accept an offer to purchase revenue bonds for the acquisition or construction of a utility constitutes a legislative act and is a proper subject matter for a referendum,⁹⁰ although the right to require a referendum in such case ceases on repeal of the resolution.⁹¹

Exemption of securities payable from revenue of municipal facility. Under the constitutional or statutory provisions in some jurisdictions a vote may not be required for the issuance of bonds or securities payable solely from the revenues of a utility or facility which is to be extended, improved, acquired, or constructed by the municipality, without any pledge of the credit or taxing power of the municipality,⁹² particularly if the bonds or securities are not secured either directly or indirectly by mortgage or lien of any kind on the utility or facility.⁹³ Following this rule a vote has been held unnecessary for the issuance of electric or power revenue certificates,⁹⁴ gas plant revenue certifi-

A vote has been held not required for such bonds or securities even where the municipality is under some obligation to pay for services furnished to it by the utility or system.⁴ The issuance of bonds of a housing authority, payable from the proceeds of a housing project and contributions by the federal government, has been held not to require a vote of the freeholders.⁵ On the other hand, the fact that the securities are to be repaid primarily from the revenues of the utility or supply system does not of itself avoid the necessity of a vote if the plan involves a direct, indirect, or contingent pledge or obligation of other municipal property or the tax-

Under some provisions, the determination of whether bonds secured by a utility and the income therefrom must be submitted to a vote depends on whether the utility system involved is new to the city ownership;⁷ if the system is new, and nothing is pledged for the security of the bonds other than the system, and the income therefrom, and the proceeds of the bonds, then a vote is not necessary,⁸ whereas if an existing system or the income from such system, or any other property then owned, or any other existing income, is burdened or further burdened by a pledge to pay for the betterments, then a vote is necessary.⁹

Protest against bond issue. Under some statutes, a vote is required if, within a specified time after the publication of an ordinance authorizing the issuance of bonds, a protest against such issuance is filed by a sufficient number of taxpayers.¹⁰ Under such provisions the legislative requirements are satisfied when the necessary number of signatures is attached to the protest and filed with the clerk, and thereafter it is not within the power of any of the protesters or of the clerk to withdraw from the protest any name attached thereto so as to render the statutory requirements nugatory;¹¹ nor, after a sufficient protest has been filed, can it be rendered ineffective by the failure of the clerk properly to perform a mere ministerial duty.¹²

Conditions precedent. Under some statutes, the question of issuing bonds for the purpose of furnishing a water supply to the municipality and its inhabitants should not be submitted to the electors until the approval of the plans by a state board or commission is obtained,¹³ and, where the proposition is to acquire a particular water supply, until it is ascertained that such supply is available¹⁴ and can be acquired for the amount of indebtedness to be incurred.¹⁵ However, in the absence of constitutional or statutory provision so prescribing, plans or specifications for the proposed improvement are not required as a prerequisite to, or concomitant part of, an election on a bond issue;¹⁶ and, under some charter provisions it is held that an election on the question of constructing a waterworks plant is not rendered nugatory by the failure of a commission to ascertain the probable cost of the plant,¹⁷ and determine the date, form, and maturity of the bonds,¹⁸ prior to the election. Although, under some statutes, the question of the issuance of bonds can be submitted to the voters only if the cost will be too great to be paid out of the ordinary annual income and revenue,¹⁹ the fact of such excessive cost need not be stated in the preliminary resolution.²⁰

b. Legislative Power

The legislature has power to require a popular vote on the issuance of municipal securities notwithstanding the absence of any constitutional provision requiring such submission; and it also has power, unless prohibited by the constitution, to permit the issuance of such securities without approval of the voters.

The legislature has power to require an election on the question of issuing municipal bonds,²¹ even in cases where such election is not required by constitutional provision;²² and, in the absence of any intervening rights of third parties, the legislature can prohibit the sale of bonds by a municipality unless their sale is first ratified by a majority of the votes of the city electors, although at the time of such prohibition the bonds may have been physically issued under valid legislative authority formerly granted authorizing their issuance and sale without such ratification.²³ Where the statute authorizing the issuance of bonds on a favorable vote of the electors does not in terms or meaning conflict with the constitution, it is not invalid because it does not embody the constitutional provision or words of similar import.²⁴

Power to dispense with election. In the absence of a constitutional provision requiring an election, the legislature has power to authorize a municipality to issue bonds without submission of the question to the electorate.²⁵ However, where a constitutional provision requires the submission of the question of issuing municipal bonds to the voters of the municipality, a statute authorizing the issue of bonds without such submission is invalid.²⁶ A provision of a municipal charter that no election should be necessary to authorize the issuance of particular improvement bonds becomes inoperative on the adoption of a constitutional amendment providing otherwise.²⁷

c. Form or Name of Security

The name given to the instruments to be issued is not determinative of the necessity of a popular vote, and certificates, warrants, or notes, as well as bonds, may require approval of the voters when they fall within the intent of the provisions prescribing the necessity of a vote.

Some provisions requiring the submission of a bond issue to a vote have been construed to restrict only the issuance of a certain form of security for a debt, and not to restrict the creation of the debt.²⁸ However, in determining whether a vote is necessary, the criterion is not the name given the instrument issued by the municipal corporation as evidence of the loan,²⁹ but whether the instrument, by whatever name called, falls within the intentment of the provisions requiring a vote;³⁰ and provisions requiring a vote on a proposed bond issue may apply, for example, to the issuance of certificates³¹ or time warrants³² which are in contemplation of law nothing more than a form of bond. In general, any instrument evidencing a municipal indebtedness for a new project, or to be paid by a tax levy or by assessment or charges or the pledge of property or a tax resource of the municipality, may in effect be a bond and require approval of the electors.³³ On the other hand, provisions requiring the submission of a bond issue to the voters are inapplicable to instruments of an entirely different nature,³⁴ such as a lease³⁵ or a construction contract,³⁶ or to instruments amounting to no more than a mere promise to pay money.³⁷

Notes. A note given in payment of municipal improvements or equipment may be merely evidence of the debt, not occupying the status and dignity of a bond so as to fall within the class of obligations requiring approval of the voters;³⁸ and delinquent tax anticipation notes have been held not to constitute bonds within the contemplation of provisions requiring a vote on the issuance of bonds.³⁹ A provision for the submission of a bond issue to the voters has been held not applicable to a note payable within a year⁴⁰ to a designated payee or his order.⁴¹ On the other hand, a note under seal in the form of a bond, pledging current taxes and the full faith and credit of the municipality, has been held in the nature of a bonded debt requiring a vote of the qualified electors of the municipality.⁴²

Negotiability. The necessity of a vote, under some provisions, depends on whether the written evidences of the indebtedness are negotiable or non-negotiable instruments, a vote being required if the instruments are negotiable,⁴³ but otherwise not;⁴⁴ and the term by which the instruments are to be denominated on their face may have some significance in determining their character as negotiable or nonnegotiable.⁴⁵

d. Funding or Refunding Bonds or Securities

Constitutional or statutory provisions requiring the issuance of municipal bonds to be submitted to a popular vote are frequently held inapplicable to funding or refunding bonds which merely continue an existing indebtedness without any pledge of additional taxes or resources.

Although under some charter provisions refunding bonds or obligations must be authorized by a vote of the electors,⁴⁶ frequently, by virtue of their express terms or the construction placed thereon, constitutional or statutory provisions requiring the question of issuing municipal bonds to be submitted to the voters for approval are held inapplicable to the issuance of funding or refunding bonds,⁴⁷ at least where the refunding bonds continue only the existing indebtedness as it was originally incurred, without pledges of any additional tax, property, or mortgage resources.⁴⁸ In order to dispense with the necessity of a vote, however, the refunding bonds should not directly or indirectly, contingently or otherwise, increase the amount of the indebtedness as limited and represented by the original bonds,⁴⁹ or, in general, should not increase the obligation of the contract in a way not embraced in the original bond.⁵⁰ In other words, refunding bonds proposed to be issued without an approving vote of the electors should contain only the substantial provisions relating to the obligation of the taxpayers that are contained in the bonds to be refunded.⁵¹

Character of obligations being refunded. Some provisions dispensing with the necessity of a vote on the issuance of refunding bonds do not apply to the refunding of anything but bonds or the interest thereon,⁵² and have been held not to dispense with the necessity of a vote on the issuance of bonds to refund warrants issued by the municipality⁵³ or certificates of indebtedness.⁵⁴ Under some provisions, general obligation bonds may not be issued without an election if their issuance is to refund revenue bonds which were issued without an election,⁵⁵ whereas an election is not required for the issuance of general obligation bonds to refund other outstanding general obligation bonds.⁵⁶

Simultaneous issuance of new bonds and cancellation of old. It is not necessary, to dispense with a vote in the case of refunding bonds, that the old bonds be simultaneously canceled as the refunding bonds are issued;⁵⁷ and the fact that there is a reasonable lapse between the maturity of the outstanding bonds and the issue of the refunding bonds does not increase the indebtedness or make both sets of bonds outstanding at the same time.⁵⁸

§ 1921. Application or Petition

An election on the question of issuing municipal bonds may be required where an application or petition therefor is made by a sufficient number of taxpayers or freeholders. Such a petition should state the matters required by constitutional or statutory provisions, although a failure to follow the exact language of such provisions is not necessarily fatal.

Under some statutes an application or petition by a certain number or proportion of electors, taxpayers, or freeholders necessitates, or is a condition precedent to, the calling of an election on the question of issuing municipal bonds.⁵⁹ However, the fact that a referendum petition was filed to a prior ordinance proposing a bond issue does not require a vote on a subsequent ordinance providing an entirely new plan of reconstruction and rehabilitation at a greatly increased cost.⁶⁰ A petition to the mayor or of a city need not be submitted by him to the city council.⁶¹ A provision which requires that the petition be filed with the executive authority of the municipal corporation may be satisfied by filing such petition with the clerk of the municipality.⁶² Where the governing body of the municipality has power to call an election on a proposed issue of bonds without the filing of a petition by taxpayers, and does call such an election, it is immaterial whether a petition signed by taxpayers was presented and considered by such governing body, or whether the petition was legal.⁶³

The application or petition must be made by the persons authorized by law to make it,⁶⁴ and they must not have been induced to sign by false and fraudulent representations;⁶⁵ but an objection that the petition does not bear the requisite number of signatures is waived when not asserted prior to the holding of the election.⁶⁶ Where a petition for a referendum on a proposition to incur a bonded debt has been filed, and the time for filing the names of additional petitioners has passed, the original signers of such a petition may not withdraw their signatures for the purpose of defeating the referendum.⁶⁷

Contents. The contents of the petition depend on the terms of the constitutional and statutory provisions.⁶⁸ The failure to follow the language of the constitution or statutes exactly is not fatal, however, where the words used in the petition are the legal equivalent of those set forth in the constitutional or statutory provisions.⁶⁹ The petition need

"Order" or "demand"

Although the constitution provides for a referendum petition demanding a referendum, a petition employing the word "order" rather than the word "demand" in seeking referendum on ordinance providing for issuance of bonds was not invalid.—State ex rel. Tietje v. Collett, supra.

"Established"

Under a statute requiring the petition to state that the plant or utility for which the bonds are to be issued cannot be "purchased, erected, built or furnished" within a limited per cent of valuation, a petition stating that the desired plant could not be "established" within such limit has been held sufficient.—

not recite that the subscribers are a majority of the freeholders,⁷⁰ and it need not be formally addressed to the officer who is to call the election,⁷¹ since it is sufficient that he receives and acts on it.⁷² Where the governing statute is silent on the subject, the petition need not fix the time when the bonds will mature.⁷³ A petition for a referendum is not invalidated because it incorrectly describes the election procedure for the submission of the question to the electors, where the provisions of law do not require such description in the referendum petition itself.⁷⁴

§ 1922. Order or Call for Election Generally

It is necessary and sufficient that the order, call, or proclamation for a municipal bond election be issued by the proper officers and otherwise comply with statutory requirements.

It is necessary⁷⁵ and sufficient⁷⁶ that the order, call, or proclamation for an election on the question of issuing municipal bonds comply with statutory requirements. It is essential to the validity of the election that it be called by the proper officer or

body⁷⁷ in the mode prescribed by law.⁷⁸ A resolution declaring it to be necessary to issue and sell the bonds of the corporation for a specified purpose authorized by statute, and providing therein for the submission of the question of their issue to the electors at an election to be held for that purpose, has been held to be of a general and permanent nature within the meaning of statutes requiring such resolutions to be read on separate days before enactment.⁷⁹

Some statutes require the election to be called by ordinance;⁸⁰ and, in the absence of such a requirement, a call of the election or submission of the question by ordinance is proper,⁸¹ but not necessary,⁸² it being sufficient to call the election or submit the question by resolution,⁸³ order,⁸⁴ or motion,⁸⁵ without compliance with statutes prescribing the procedure for the enactment of an ordinance.⁸⁶ When so required by statute, the ordinance, resolution, or order for the election should fix the date of the election⁸⁷ and the manner of voting for and against the proposition submitted;⁸⁸ but, in the absence of charter or statutory requirement, it need not appropriate money for the expense of the election⁸⁹ or designate the newspaper in which the notice of the election is to be published;⁹⁰ and, where it provides for submission at a general election, it need not rename and redesignate the judges, clerks, and voting places already designated for the general election.⁹¹

Judicial order or call. Unconstitutional statute

A bond issue is valid notwithstanding a failure to comply with statutory provisions prescribing the manner and form of submission where the statutory requirements are unconstitutional.—Booth v. City of Owensboro, 122 S.W.2d 118, 275 Ky. 491.

substantial accuracy of what they are called on to approve,⁹ and must not be misleading, obscure, or equivocal.¹⁰ It is sufficient, however, if the question submitted to the electors is the question required by law to be submitted,¹¹ or if there is a substantial compliance with statutory formalities;¹² and slight misstatements contained in the proposition submitted to the voters do not necessarily invalidate the election where the voters have not been deceived or misinformed in any material respect by the manner in which the proposition was presented.¹³

Within the limitations imposed by the foregoing requirements, the duty of determining the particular phraseology in which the question shall be submitted is cast on the municipal authorities.¹⁴ The proposition may be submitted in broad and general terms,¹⁵ or in terms as narrow and specific as the governing officials are willing to be bound by.¹⁶ The bonds cannot be held void because of a failure to submit some detail not required by law to be submitted;¹⁷ nor does invalidity necessarily result from the fact that the ordinance submitting the proposition contains a provision conflicting with a statute but dealing with a matter not required by law to be included in the proposition submitted.¹⁸ However, the submission of improper matters may be fatal where it tends to influence the voter in determining his choice on the matter properly submitted.¹⁹ Some statutes contemplate the submission to the voters of the entire ordinance,²⁰ including matters lawfully, although unnecessarily, stated therein.²¹

Variance between petition and submission. A variance between the submission and the petition for the election affects only the application of the proceeds of a sale of the bonds²² and not the validity of the bonds.²³ A slight difference in language between the petition and the submission does not necessarily invalidate the bonds where there is no real difference in meaning and the electors could not have been misled.²⁴

The ballot should set forth the matters required by statutory or constitutional provisions; a substantial compliance is generally sufficient.

The ballot should set forth the matters required by statute;²⁵ and some constitutional provisions prescribing the form of ballot to be used at municipal elections have been considered to be mandatory,²⁶ at least in the sense that they place a duty on the officer charged with the preparation thereof which he will not be permitted to evade.²⁷ However, while some elections have been held invalid by reason of nonconformity of the ballot to constitutional²⁸ or statutory²⁹ provisions, more frequently an election is upheld notwithstanding an objection to, or irregularity in, the form of the ballot,³⁰ as where there has been a substantial compliance with the constitutional or statutory provisions prescribing the form of the ballot,³¹ the statute prescribing the form is directory only,³² no voter has been deceived or misled³³ or deprived of his right to vote,³⁴ by reason of the form used, or the voters were afforded³⁵ and exercised³⁶ an opportunity fully and fairly to express their opinion. In determining whether the ballots substantially comply with constitutional provisions respecting their form, the purpose of such provisions should be kept in mind.³⁷ In the absence of a prescribed form of ballot, any ballot which, when voted, clearly shows the intention of the voter is sufficient in form.³⁸

Inclusion of terms or title of ordinance. It is not necessary for the whole of the bond ordinance to be printed on the ballot;³⁹ nor is a ballot which conforms to statutory provisions made invalid by failure to include therein some informative statement contained in the ordinance calling the election,⁴⁰ provided such omission does not mislead or tend to mislead the voters as to the proposition on which they are to vote.⁴¹ Under some charter provisions the title for the ordinance being submitted must be placed on the official ballot⁴² and the title should be a clear concise statement, without argument or prejudice, descriptive of the substance of the ordinance.⁴³

Separate ballots. Under some statutory provisions, the question of a bond issue need not be placed on a separate ballot but may be placed on the regular ballot used at a general election.⁴⁴ The use of separate ballots, one in favor of, and the other against, the proposition, instead of a blanket ballot, is not prohibited by the statutes of some jurisdictions.⁴⁵

"Australian ballot system." The fact that the election was ordered to be held,⁴⁶ or was held,⁴⁷ under some system indefinitely described as the

§ 1924. — Statement of Particular Matters

a. In general

b. Sale of bonds and disposition of proceeds

a. In General

In general, the statutory provisions governing municipal bond elections determine the particular matters required to be stated in the submission, such as the purpose of the bond issue, its amount, the denominations and maturity of the bonds, the interest rate, and the means of payment.

The necessity and sufficiency of the statement of particular matters in connection with the submission of a bond issue to a vote depend, in general, on the statutes of the jurisdiction and the proposal involved.⁴⁸ An ordinance submitting to the voters the question of issuing bonds need not recite the reasons for the submission⁴⁹ or refer to the statute authorizing the submission.⁵⁰ Also, the ordinance need not state the assessed value of the property in the city and the present indebtedness so as to show that the proposed indebtedness will not extend beyond a constitution limitation of amount.⁵¹

Under some statutes when the bonds are for an improvement, the estimated cost of the improvement should be stated in the ordinance calling the election,⁵² but it is not necessary to submit the contract for the improvement;⁵³ nor is it necessary for a proposition to issue bonds to establish municipal electric works to state a precise location of the works.⁵⁴ Under some statutes the time when stock of a municipal corporation is to be issued may,⁵⁵ but need not,⁵⁶ be included in the ordinance providing for the issuance of stock and submitted to the electors for approval or rejection. An offer in a proposition to employ bona fide residents on the work for which it is proposed to issue bonds is not an offer of an unlawful inducement so as to invalidate the bonds.⁵⁷

Purpose. While not required under all charter provisions,⁵⁸ it is generally essential that a proposition to issue municipal bonds shall state the purpose for which the bonds are to be issued.⁵⁹ Although the statement of the purpose need not go into minute detail,⁶⁰ it must be sufficiently definite reasonably to apprise the voters of the general nature, purpose, and scope of the improvement contemplated,⁶¹ and should not be so general as to allow un-

(2) An election to vote bonds for the construction and equipment of "a public building" for the use of city was not vitiated by use of the quoted phrase in the ballot, instead of the specific term "a municipal auditorium," in view of the fact that the phrase "a public building" was used in the statute under which the city proceeded.—Drenning v. Board of Com'rs of City of Topeka, 81 P.2d 720, 148 Kan. 366, 117 A.L.R. 884.

(3) Term "city hall or municipal building," used in ordinance authorizing bond election, was sufficiently definite as to nature of public utility desired.—Reid v. City of Muskogee, 278 P. 339, 137 Okl. 44.

limited expenditures not properly connected with, and necessary for, the complete accomplishment of the main purpose.⁶² The joining of two purposes in the proposition, one of which is illegal, is improper.⁶³ A failure to specify in the caption of the ordinance all the purposes for which the proceeds of the bonds are to be used, is not fatal where there is no such statutory requirement.⁶⁴ A slight difference in language between the purpose of the bond issue as stated in a petition of freeholders asking for the election and the resolution ordering the election does not necessarily invalidate the bonds where there is no real difference in meaning and the electors could not have been misled.⁶⁵

Amount and denomination. Ordinarily the proposition must state the amount of the bonds to be issued,⁶⁶ although under some statutes this is not required.⁶⁷ Some courts hold that it is sufficient to state that bonds are to be issued in an amount not to exceed a specified sum,⁶⁸ but other courts take the contrary view.⁶⁹ The fact that there was some discrepancy between the amount specified in the ordinance calling the election and the proposition submitted to the voters was held not to invalidate the bonds where it did not appear that any prejudice arose because of the discrepancy.⁷⁰

fied either in the ordinance calling the election or in the ballot; and even where the resolution ordering the election is required by charter to state the denomination of the bonds,⁷³ its failure to do so is immaterial where the people are duly informed of the denomination of the bonds by a proclamation issued by the mayor in pursuance of the resolution.⁷⁴

Maturity. Under the provisions passed and enacted in some,⁷⁵ but not other,⁷⁶ jurisdictions the proposition submitted must state the maturity of the bonds; and an illegal provision in the proposition as to the maturity dates of the bonds may invalidate the election notwithstanding the absence of bad faith or any intentional effort to mislead the voters.⁷⁷ A provision for calling the proposed bonds before maturity is not improper where the statutes leave such matters to the issuing authority.⁷⁸ A provision reserving the privilege of refunding the bonds after the expiration of a specified period of time may,⁷⁹ but need not,⁸⁰ be included in the ordinance submitting the proposition.

Interest. Under some,⁸¹ but not other,⁸² provisions the rate of interest to be paid on the bonds must be stated in the proposition submitted. It is not necessary to submit to the voters the question or alternative of making the interest on the proposed bonds payable annually or semiannually.⁸³ A proposition stating that the interest is to be at a rate not to exceed a specified per cent has been held sufficient to comply with provisions requiring the rate of interest to be set forth.⁸⁴

Means of payment. Where statutes require an ordinance or resolution submitting a municipal bond issue to the voters to provide for raising annually, by tax, a sum sufficient to pay the interest and principal as they become due,⁸⁵ or to specify the amount of money necessary to be raised annually by taxation for the purpose of paying interest and creating a sinking fund,⁸⁶ compliance with the provision is necessary; and other statutes are construed to require the ordinance to state the manner of payment of the bonds;⁸⁷ but, in the absence of statutory requirement, it is not necessary for either the ballot or the resolution or ordinance submitting the question to include the manner or method of paying the bonds,⁸⁸ a provision for a sinking fund,⁸⁹ the tax rate,⁹⁰ or formal authorization of a tax.⁹¹ Where the question of the manner of payment of the bonds cannot be legally submitted to the voters, because such matter is expressly set forth by statute, a call submitting the manner of payment is to that extent illegal;⁹² but such provision in the call does not necessarily invalidate the bonds where the voters were not misled thereby.⁹³

b. Sale of Bonds and Disposition of Proceeds

Statements in the submission as to the sale of the bonds and the disposition of the proceeds thereof should be in accordance with statutory provisions relating thereto.

When not expressly made so by statute, it is not essential that a statutory provision that the bonds shall not be sold below par shall be set forth in the ordinance calling the election.⁹⁴ The inclusion of an illegal provision that the bonds may be disposed of otherwise than by a sale for cash has been held not to affect the validity of the bond issue.⁹⁵ Matters relating to the deposit of the proceeds of a sale of the bonds need not be provided for in the ordinance calling the election where they are specifically provided for by statute.⁹⁶ An election is not rendered illegal by a failure to advise the voters that the proceeds of the proposed bond issue are to be used with, or in addition to, a sum of money which is already on hand and available for the proposed improvement.⁹⁷ Particular ordinances submitting a proposition to issue bonds have been held not to authorize a disposition of the proceeds at variance with statutory provisions.⁹⁸

Apportionment of proceeds. Under some statutes, in the case of a municipal bond issue for different projects, the ordinance and ballot submitting the proposed issue to a vote should clearly specify the amounts to be used for the several projects.⁹⁹ It is sometimes necessary that the call for an election on the question of issuing bonds for the erection of a building and the purchase of a site therefor should state the proportion of the total proceeds of the bond issue which is to be expended in the purchase of a site;¹ and a failure to comply with such provisions prevents the expenditure of any part of the proceeds of the bond issue for the purchase of a site,² although it may not wholly invalidate the bond issue.³ However, the question submitted to the voters should not include an apportionment or subdivision of the total amount of the proceeds of the bond issue into smaller amounts for specific improvements where the power and duty of appropriating and applying the proceeds are conferred by statute on the council rather than the voters;⁴ and, where all the work is incident to one general purpose, rather than separate and independent purposes, it is not necessary to specify the amount of the bonds to be used on each kind of work in making the improvement.⁵

§ 1925. — One or More Propositions

Two or more propositions for the issuance of bonds may be submitted at the same election provided they are so stated as to permit the voters to vote on each proposition separately. Several matters constituting incidents of a single scheme or project may be submitted as one proposition.

Two or more propositions for issuing bonds,⁶ or one proposition for issuing bonds and another proposition for a different object,⁷ may be submitted at the same election, by the same⁸ or different⁹ ordinances, and on a single ballot¹⁰ or separate ballots,¹¹ subject to the limitation that, where the propositions are distinct and unrelated, they shall be so stated and submitted as to afford the voters an opportunity to vote on each proposition separately from the others,¹² or, in other words, subject to the limitation obtaining in most,¹³ although not all,¹⁴ jurisdictions that two or more separate and distinct propositions shall not be combined into one so as to have one expression of the voter answer both or all questions.

Two or more matters may be joined and submitted as one proposition where they are so related and connected with each other as to constitute parts or incidents of one scheme or project.¹⁵ However, the courts are not entirely in accord as to what particular matters may be joined together and submitted as one proposition, and, while it is generally held that the issuance of bonds to purchase or construct a plant may be properly submitted as a single proposition,¹⁶ some courts hold that it is a dual proposition.¹⁷ Also it is held by some courts that the issuance of bonds for a single plant, structure, or facility to serve two or more needs,¹⁸ such as water and light,¹⁹ or water and sewerage,²⁰ may be properly submitted and voted on as a single proposition; but other courts hold it improper to submit as one proposition the issuance of bonds for water and light,²¹ or for water and sewerage,²² unless the particular municipality is taken out of the operation of the general rule by a special enactment relating to it.²³ A proposition as to the issuance of bonds to refund other bonds does not become a double proposition merely because it provides for the payment of both principal and interest on the bonds to be refunded.²⁴ It has been held not improper to submit the matter of a general bond issue and a mortgage bond issue at separate elections although both bond issues are for the financing of the same project.²⁵

Failure to submit alternative proposition. Where the authorities have complied with a mandatory provision requiring a submission to the voters of a proposition to issue bonds for the construction of a plant or system, their failure to submit an alternative proposition to acquire an existing plant, as authorized by another provision, does not invalidate the election.²⁶

§ 1926 Notice

Notice of a municipal bond election should comply with statutory requirements prescribing the contents and publication thereof, but an error or irregularity in the contents or publication is not necessarily fatal to the validity of the election.

Proper notice of an election on the question of issuing municipal bonds must be given where the statutes expressly or impliedly provide therefor.²⁷ Such a notice informs the voters that an election will be held²⁸ and that a certain proposition will be voted on at the election;²⁹ but it is not the means by which the election is called,³⁰ and is intended merely to give additional publicity to what has been already determined and announced by the ordinance, resolution, or order calling the election.³¹

The notice of election should contain such particulars as are required by statute³² and must not be misleading or obscure.³³ However, it need not contain statements not required by statute to be included in the notice,³⁴ and sometimes an error, omission, or irregularity in the contents of the notice³⁵ or a signature³⁶ is not fatal, as where the ordinance calling the election covered all the details required to be stated in the notice,³⁷ the informality or irregularity did not violate any specific provision of the statute,³⁸ the legal voters of the municipality had notice that the election was to be held,³⁹ the voters were not misled or deceived,⁴⁰ denied, or deprived of, the right to vote,⁴¹ or no voter failed to vote because of lack of knowledge or notice of the election,⁴² or the result of the election would not have been changed if the law had been followed with literal exactness.⁴³

Statutes as mandatory or directory. Some statutory provisions relating to notice of the election have been construed to be mandatory rather than directory.⁴⁴ However, other provisions,⁴⁵ such as provisions which do not lay down a specific mandate but merely direct the manner in which notice may be given,⁴⁶ have been held to be directory; and, where the statute is merely directory, any method of giving notice of the election which may reasonably be held to have served the purpose for which the notice was intended is sufficient, provided the manner, method, and time are not such as to affect the fairness of the election.⁴⁷ The construction of statutes relating to notice of a bond election as mandatory or directory is sometimes affected by whether the question is raised before or after the election,⁴⁸ it being held that the statutory directions are mandatory on the officers charged with the duty of calling the election, and will be upheld strictly in a direct action instituted before an election,⁴⁹ whereas, after the election has been held, such statutory requirements are directory unless it appears that the failure to give notice for the full time specified by the statute has prevented electors from giving a full and free expression of their will at the election,⁵⁰ or unless the statute contains a further provision, the necessary effect of which is that failure to give notice for the statutory time will render the election void.⁵¹

lication is not necessarily fatal.⁵³ Ordinarily the same form of notice should be given in each of several successive publications,⁵⁴ but an election has been held not invalidated by a change in the form of the notice where such change did not affect its purport or withhold information required to be published, and could not have caused any one to be deceived.⁵⁵ The election need not be advertised by the sheriff when not so required by statute.⁵⁶ The general nature of the election may be presumed to have been made known to the voters by the advertisement required by statute.⁵⁷

Where the notice of the election was not published until after the ordinance calling the election took effect, the fact that it was prepared, signed, and dated prior to that time is immaterial.⁵⁸ Also, where the ordinance takes effect on publication, the notice is not impaired by the fact that it and the ordinance are published simultaneously;⁵⁹ and it has been held that a notice of election posted as required by law is not rendered less effective by a slight irregularity in publishing the resolution ordering the election prior to its approval by the mayor.⁶⁰ Where the statutes do not provide for the giving of any notice of the election, the fact that the notice required by the ordinance providing for the submission of the question of the bond issue was not complied with has been held not to invalidate the election, the ordinance itself having been published for a sufficient length of time before the election.⁶¹

Analogy to town meeting. With respect to the notice required to be given of a meeting for a city election at which the question of a bond issue was voted on, it has been held that the meetings of cities and boroughs authorized by special charter provision are the direct successors of the town meeting, and are governed by the same law.⁶²

§ 1927. Vote Required, and Qualifications of Voters

- a. Vote required
- b. Qualifications of voters

a. Vote Required

It is necessary and sufficient that a proposition as to the issuance of municipal bonds receive the approval of the required proportion of those voting. In the absence of a provision requiring a specified number or proportion of the eligible voters to participate in the election, the fact that only a small number of voters participated is immaterial.

In order that the issuance of municipal bonds may be authorized by popular vote, it is necessary⁶³ and sufficient⁶⁴ that the proposition receive the proportion of votes required by constitutional, statutory, or charter provision. Ordinarily, and in the absence of any constitutional or statutory provision requiring a greater proportion, a majority vote is sufficient.⁶⁵ Under some provisions, however, a two-thirds vote is necessary,⁶⁶ unless a different proportion is prescribed by charter provisions or special act of the legislature,⁶⁷ the purpose of such a statute being to make it more difficult for municipal corporations to pay for public improvements by the issuance of bonds.⁶⁸ A constitutional provision fixing a minimum requirement with respect to the number of votes necessary to authorize the issuance of bonds by a municipality does not prevent the legislature from imposing other or additional requirements.⁶⁹

It is generally held that a proposition to issue bonds is carried or adopted when it receives the required proportion of the votes actually cast on the proposition or at the election, where the election is held on this matter alone,⁷⁰ and that it is not necessary for the proposition to receive the assent of a specified proportion of all persons in the municipality entitled to vote⁷¹ or of all the persons voting at the election, where other measures or officers are voted for at the same election;⁷² but a few statutes are construed to require the assent of a majority of all the electors entitled to vote⁷³ or to require a majority of the votes cast at the election, where officers or other measures are voted on at the same election,⁷⁴ and under some statutes or charters, where several propositions to issue municipal bonds are submitted at the same election, it is necessary to the adoption of any one proposition that it receive two thirds of the votes cast on the proposition on which the highest number of votes was cast.⁷⁵

In ascertaining the total number of votes cast on a proposition to issue municipal bonds it is proper and necessary to count the legal and intelligible ballots found in the ballot box at the close of the polls,⁷⁶ and to disregard ballots which are blank,⁷⁷ or unintelligible,⁷⁸ or which bear distinguishing marks,⁷⁹ or which are for any reason illegal.⁸⁰ However, in the absence of fraud,⁸¹ the reception and counting of some illegal votes does not invalidate the election in the absence of a showing that the result of the election was affected or changed thereby.⁸²

Number of voters required to participate in election. In the absence of a provision to the contrary, the election is not invalidated by the fact that the usual number of voters did not appear and vote at the election⁸³ or by the fact that only a small per cent of the qualified voters participated,⁸⁴ where all the qualified voters had notice and an opportunity to vote. Under some constitutional or statutory provisions, however, the election on a bond issue must be participated in by a prescribed number or proportion of the voters of the municipality,⁸⁵ such as a majority of the freeholders who are qualified electors,⁸⁶ or a majority of the total number of voters who voted at a previous election,⁸⁷ such as the general county or state election next preceding the bond election.⁸⁸

b. Qualifications of Voters

- (1) In general
- (2) Taxpayers or property owners

(1) In General

The qualifications of the voters at a municipal bond election, as, for example, with respect to residence, sex, or registration, are such as are prescribed by constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions.

The qualifications of voters at an election on the question of issuing municipal bonds are such as may be prescribed by constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions,⁸⁹ and, in determining such qualifications, in some jurisdictions a special or local law prevails over an inconsistent general law.⁹⁰ Such provisions are sometimes regarded as of the substance of the election,⁹¹ and an election participated in by persons not entitled to vote may be ineffective;⁹² but the participation of disqualified persons in the election does not render it void where their votes do not affect the result,⁹³ and the unconstitutionality of charter provisions pertaining to the qualifications of voters has been held not to invalidate an election where a majority of the qualified voters participated in the election and there was no suggestion of fraud or any showing that any qualified voter was deceived or prevented from voting because of such provisions.⁹⁴ In a jurisdiction in which no particular method of determining the qualifications of the voters is prescribed or prohibited, the determination of the judges of election of the qualifications of a voter may be final and conclusive.⁹⁵

Under some constitutional or statutory provisions the right to vote in bond elections is limited to residents of the municipality,⁹⁶ and nonresidents may not vote even though they own property in the municipality⁹⁷ which will be subject to an additional tax because of the proposed improvement.⁹⁸ Women may be entitled to vote at a municipal bond election,⁹⁹ at least where they own property or pay

Majority participation in part of election

(1) Where several series of bonds are submitted for approval, and a majority of the qualified electors participate in the vote on some of the series, a vote on the other series is valid even though less than a majority participate in the vote on that series.—State v. City of Miami Beach, 18 So.2d 785, 154 Fla. 748.

(2) However, where a bond election is held simultaneously with an election of candidates to office, a voter who indicates a choice only of candidates signifies an intention not to participate in the election with reference to bonds.—State v. City of Miami Beach, 23 So.2d 720, 156 Fla. 546.

What constitutes general county or state election

(1) The general county or state election next preceding the bond election refers to the general election held biennially for county or state officers.—Carey v. Port of Seattle, Wash., 179 P.2d 501.

(2) An election called for the purpose of voting on the repeal of an amendment to the federal Constitution was a special election, and not a general state or county election, and hence was not to be considered as the basis of determining whether a sufficient number of persons voted at a municipal bond election.—*Robb v. Votes not counted

The votes of women were not counted in determining whether the proposition had received the required number of votes where, under the statute, for the proposition to carry it was required to receive a vote larger than one half of the votes at the last preceding municipal election and only men were entitled to vote at such preceding election.—Sears v. Maquoketa, 166 N.W. 700,

Registration is sometimes,² although not always,³ required. An irregularity in the registration is not necessarily fatal,⁴ nor is the election necessarily invalidated by the fact that the books of registration were opened prior to the time specified by statute for the opening of such books.⁵ Under some provisions the eligibility of the voters should be determined as of the date of the election, and not as of the date of the closing of the registration books.⁶ Timely revision of such registration may be made under statutes providing therefor.⁷

(2) Taxpayers or Property Owners

In some jurisdictions only property owners or taxpayers are eligible to vote in a municipal bond election; but the property necessary to qualify a voter, under some provisions, may be either real or personal.

Under some provisions the only persons entitled to vote at a bond election are property taxpayers⁸ or the owners of taxable property in the municipality;⁹ but under other provisions the required number of votes of general electors is sufficient, and it is not necessary that a prescribed proportion of property-qualified electors vote in favor of the proposition.¹⁰ A charter provision limiting the persons qualified to vote in the election to those shown to be taxpayers by the tax rolls, thus excluding those who in fact pay taxes on property in the municipi-

pality but are not so shown, is invalid where it is in conflict with constitutional provisions giving the right to vote to all taxpayers, whether or not shown on the tax rolls;¹¹ and the absence of a person's name from a list of persons owning taxable property duly rendered for taxation does not establish the disqualification of such person where it appears that the list is incomplete.¹² A constitutional provision limiting the voting to property taxpayers in the case of bond issues to be paid out of special taxes does not invalidate a statute permitting persons other than property taxpayers to vote on bonds which are not to be paid out of a special tax;¹³ and thus such persons may vote on bonds which are to be secured exclusively by a mortgage on the property and equipment of a public utility to be constructed, extended, and improved, and by a pledge of the income and revenues from the utility.¹⁴

Property as real or personal. Under some provisions the property necessary to qualify a person as an elector may be either real or personal;¹⁵ but under other provisions the right to vote is confined to real property owners,¹⁶ or to real property taxpayers,¹⁷ that is, persons subject to taxation on realty and regularly paying taxes thereon.¹⁸

pality are qualified to vote in municipal bond elections,¹⁹ in which case only those who own taxable property and have in due manner given an account of the property or surrendered it for taxation may vote.²⁰ It is sufficient, however, if the elector's property was placed on the assessment rolls in his name by the assessor,²¹ and it is not necessary that the property be rendered in person by the elector or by his agent.²² The amount of property rendered, or the motive prompting the voter to render his property, is immaterial in determining whether he is eligible to vote.²³

Absence of previous provisions for taxes. It has been held that an election is not invalidated by the fact that the voters had not rendered their property for taxes where the only reason they had not done so was that there were no taxes to pay, the municipality never having levied an ad valorem tax;²⁴ but it has also been held, under a statute requiring the issuance of bonds to be ratified by a majority of electors who paid taxes on their property for the preceding year, that a valid election cannot be held if no provision has been made in the preceding year for the levy and assessment of taxes.²⁵

and statutory provisions, only those who pay a city poll tax may vote on the question of the issuance of bonds.²⁶

a. In General

An election on a municipal bond issue should be conducted as prescribed by statute, although mere informalities or irregularities not affecting the result are not necessarily fatal. The use of voting machines or secret ballots is proper.

An election on the question of issuing municipal bonds should be conducted in the manner prescribed by statute,²⁷ and an election is legal where it is held and conducted,²⁸ the returns are canvassed,²⁹ and the result declared³⁰ in compliance with statutes. However, an election conducted under the wrong statutes is not validated by the fact that the municipality proceeded in good faith, and in the belief that other statutory provisions were controlling,³¹ or by the fact that no fraud is shown and no proof adduced that a different result would have been obtained if the proper statutes had been complied with.³²

An election on different propositions for issuing city bonds was a special election rather than a general election, and therefore matters legally required to validate the result of a special election could not be disregarded.—Bilek v. City of Chicago, 71 N.E.2d 789, 396 Ill. 445.

When not otherwise provided by statute, a fair and impartial election will not be vitiated by mere informalities of the election officers in holding the election³³ or in ascertaining and declaring the result thereof.³⁴ As sometimes stated, mere irregularities in the election are not fatal where they do not affect the result,³⁵ or where, in the absence of a violation of a mandatory statute, they are not of sufficient importance to warrant serious consideration;³⁶ and provisions of an act making irregularities innocuous are usually given effect when the fundamental or substantial rights of the voter are protected.³⁷ In the absence of restriction, the municipality may choose the method for recording the vote cast in the election,³⁸ and it may have the voter's choice marked on a ballot and dropped into a box³⁹ or it may have such choice fixed by means of a voting machine.⁴⁰ The use of one ballot box for voting on two propositions to issue bonds,⁴¹ or at a combined general municipal and special bond issue election,⁴² is not prohibited by statute in some jurisdictions. Where outside territory is annexed to a city at such a time that no provision can be made for the residents of such territory to vote at a bond election, the fact that such residents were not provided with ballots and booths at such election will not invalidate it.⁴³

Secrecy of ballot. Under some statutes the vote must be by secret ballot.⁴⁴ At any rate, a vote by secret ballot,⁴⁵ rather than viva voce,⁴⁶ is proper, even though the common schools of the city will be the beneficiaries of the proceeds of the bonds when sold.⁴⁷ The failure to erect private booths in polling places as provided by statute does not invalidate the election where each voter was given an opportunity to vote in secrecy and without interference.⁴⁸

Records; destruction of ballots. The requirement of a statute that a record of the election shall be made is directory merely, and a failure to comply therewith does not invalidate the election.⁴⁹ Failure to preserve the ballots in the manner required by statute does not render the election invalid where the election has been honestly and fairly conducted and no one has been injured.⁵⁰ Under some statutory provisions the ballots must be destroyed without inspection at the expiration of a prescribed period after the election,⁵¹ and the fact that the ballots are still in existence after such period does not justify the court in compelling their production for use in an investigation of fraud in the election.⁵²

b. Officers

The election should be held by the officers prescribed by statute, although it is not necessarily invalidated by irregularities in their appointment or oath.

The election should be held by the officers prescribed by statute,⁵³ although the election is not necessarily rendered void by the fact that the appointment of such officers was not made in strict conformity to statutory provisions,⁵⁴ that they were not sworn before entering on the discharge of their duties,⁵⁵ or even, it has been held, by the fact that the officers were not appointed by the proper authority.⁵⁶ The election is not invalidated by the fact that the election officers appointed by the resolution pursuant to which the election was held resigned and others were duly appointed in their place;⁵⁷ nor does the absence of the regular election officers or judges invalidate the election where it does not appear that the persons holding the election were not elected to fill the vacancies caused by such absence.⁵⁸

c. Time

The election should be held on the day and during the hours prescribed by law, although it is not invalidated by an irregularity in keeping the polls open longer than necessary. Under some provisions the election cannot be held within a specified time after a regular municipal election or a previous bond election for a similar purpose.

The election may and should be held at the time,⁵⁹ that is, on the day⁶⁰ and during the hours,⁶¹ prescribed by law. Under some statutory provisions a special election on a bond issue may not be held within a specified time before or after a regular municipal election.⁶² However, the holding of the election at a time other than that prescribed by law does not necessarily invalidate the bonds where it does not appear that the result was affected thereby⁶³ or where the question is not raised until after the election.⁶⁴ Moreover, keeping the polls open for a longer time than is provided by law is a mere irregularity which does not invalidate the election;⁶⁵ and the opening of the polls earlier⁶⁶ or later⁶⁷ than provided by statute has been held not to invalidate the election in the absence of evidence of any injury resulting therefrom.

Second election. Under some statutory provisions an election on a bond issue cannot be held within a specified period of time after a previous election for a similar purpose;⁶⁸ but such provisions do not prevent a second election after the lapse of the statutory period,⁶⁹ and have been held not applicable where the first election was abortive in that a sufficient per cent of the qualified electors failed to participate therein.⁷⁰

While a municipal bond election should be held at the proper place, it is not necessarily invalidated by the fact that it was held at a place which was near the usual voting place and which the voters experienced no difficulty in finding.

Officials improperly appointed

Where town was situated in two counties, and similar orders by courts of both counties provided that election on question of issuing bonds should be conducted by officials appointed by electoral boards of both counties, an election held by officials appointed by electoral board of only one county was void.—*Vaughan v. It has been both affirmed⁷¹ and denied⁷² that the election is invalidated because held, in violation of a statute, at one voting place for the entire municipality instead of at separate polling places in the several election districts or precincts. In the absence of a contrary showing it will be presumed that the election was held at the usual voting places in the city,⁷³ and even though it appears that in one ward or precinct the election was held at a place other than the usual voting place, yet the election will not necessarily be held invalid on this account,⁷⁴ at least where the places are in close proximity,⁷⁵ and there is nothing to indicate that any voter experienced difficulty in finding the voting place⁷⁶ or was in anywise prevented from voting.⁷⁷

§ 1929. Operation and Effect

- a. In general
- b. Conformity with submission
- c. Successive submissions
- d. Time of issuance of bonds
- e. Actions attacking election

a. In General

A favorable vote on a bond issue permits, and sometimes requires, the issuance of the securities. However, a municipal debt is not created thereby and does not arise until the bonds are issued and become valid obligations in the hands of a purchaser or holder.

Where, in pursuance of constitutional, statutory, or charter requirement, a proposition to issue municipal bonds, stock, or other securities has been submitted to, and acted on favorably by, the voters of the municipality, the securities may,⁷⁸ and sometimes must,⁷⁹ be issued; but ordinarily there is no imperative duty on the part of the municipal officers to borrow money as authorized by a vote.⁸⁰ Where, although not required, a proposition to issue bonds has been submitted to the voters to obtain an indication of their opinion, this expression of opinion is not binding on the authorities,⁸¹ and does not add to,⁸² or detract from,⁸³ the authority to issue the bonds.

A vote of the electors in favor of bonds does not have the effect of dispensing with a statutory requirement,⁸⁴ and the issuance of the bonds must be in accordance with the statute in force at the time of the submission.⁸⁵ However, the courts will, as a rule, uphold the validity of a municipal bond election wherever possible,⁸⁶ and will not set it aside for a mere informality or irregularity which cannot be said in any manner to have affected the result of the election.⁸⁷ It has been held that a failure to comply with some statutory detail of procedure will not invalidate a bond issue when the question is raised after the election, even though, if attacked before the election, it might have proved fatal.⁸⁸ Further, clerical errors in the election proceedings may, before issuance of the bonds, be corrected by the council as the representative of the taxpayers.⁸⁹

A vote of the electors in favor of the issuance of municipal bonds does not ipso facto create a debt against the municipality;⁹⁰ the debt does not arise until the bonds are issued⁹¹ and become valid obligations in the hands of a holder,⁹² that is, when they are sold and delivered to the purchaser.⁹³ However, bond ordinances approved by a vote of the people may effect a setting aside of public revenues for specified purposes.⁹⁴ A vote of the electors in favor of the issuance of funding or refunding bonds is a ratification of the acts of the authorities in creating the original indebtedness where the voters could have authorized such acts in the first instance.⁹⁵ An unfavorable vote may terminate the liability of the municipality under a contract which was contingent on the voters' approval of a proposed bond issue.⁹⁶

Concurrent submission of several propositions.

Where separate bond propositions were carried at the same election, a single issue for the aggregate amount of all the bonds authorized may be made.⁹⁷ The defeat of one proposition, submitted concurrently with others, does not affect the validity of those receiving the requisite majority.⁹⁸

b. Conformity with Submission

Issuance of municipal bonds pursuant to an election must be in conformity with the terms of the submission, as, for example, with respect to the amounts and maturities of the bonds, the interest rate thereon, and the disposition of the proceeds thereof.

The issuance of bonds pursuant to an election may and must be in conformity with the terms and conditions of the submission⁹⁹ without regard to extraneous representations or arguments to the voters.¹ The necessity of conformity extends to conditions or provisions inserted unnecessarily, but not unlawfully, in the proposition submitted,² although

Cost of project

Intent to construct new plant

Where proposition submitted to vote left the question of construction or purchase of system to judgment of city commission, the existence of an undisclosed intention of the members of the commission to construct new plants rather than to negotiate for purchase of existing plants did not invalidate the election.—*Texasan Service Co. v. it does not extend to provisions which were unlawfully included in the submission³ or which conflict with a statute and cover matters not required to be submitted to the electors.⁴ In the absence of prejudice, a substantial compliance with the mandate of the voters may be sufficient,⁵ as, for example, where a literal compliance with all provisions is impossible because of inconsistent provisions in the proposition adopted⁶ or where an unimportant change has been made in the project because of engineering difficulties and for economic reasons.⁷ The bonds may contain terms not authorized by the electors where such terms were not required to be, and were not, submitted to the electors,⁸ and it has been held that a departure from the statements of the ordinance calling for the election, which is not in conflict with the statute, will not invalidate the bonds unless the defect complained of would result in an increased burden on the taxpayers.⁹

Proceeds of the bonds may be used for the purpose authorized by the vote,¹⁰ but not for a different purpose,¹¹ or for a more limited purpose involving a system radically different from that contemplated by the voters.¹² In a proper case the proceeds of a bond issue authorized by the electors need not be sufficient of themselves to build the proposed plant, or be the sole funds to be used in the proposed project, but may be supplemented by federal grant or the issue of revenue bonds or otherwise.¹³ The issuance of bonds to acquire a site for a proposed project is not permissible where the language of the submission was not broad enough to include such matter.¹⁴ Where the proposition submitted authorized the acquisition of a site, but did not specify any particular site, the proper officials may exercise their discretion in selecting the site,¹⁵ notwithstanding some previous representations as to the location of the improvement.¹⁶

Amount and interest. It is not necessary to issue bonds or stock for the full amount,¹⁷ or, except in some jurisdictions,¹⁸ at the maximum rate of interest,¹⁹ authorized by the vote. Bonds should not be issued in an amount greater than that authorized;²⁰ furthermore, where the election authorizes a bond issue for a project to cost not in excess of a specified amount, bonds should not be issued for a project costing more than such amount,²¹ and in computing such cost proper items should be included.²² If the question whether interest should be paid annually or semiannually has not been, and was not required to be, submitted to the voters, the municipal officials may determine such matter;²³ but where the question whether interest should be payable annually or semiannually has been submitted to the voters, although it was not required to be submitted, and the voters have voted to pay interest annually, the governing body of the municipality is without authority to issue bonds which provide for the payment of interest semiannually at the maximum rate.²⁴

Maturity. The maturity of the bonds may be fixed in accordance with that authorized by the voters.²⁵ Where the proposition submitted to the voters called for the issuance of bonds payable within a specified number of years, each issue of bonds may extend for the prescribed period after the date of their own issuance,²⁶ and thus where various bonds are issued at different times it is not necessary that the later issues mature within a specified number of years from the date of the issuance of the first bonds.²⁷

The defeat of a proposition to issue bonds does not preclude its subsequent submission to the voters. After approval of a bond issue, later ordinances incidental to, and in furtherance of, the approved plan need not be submitted to the voters, at least where their provisions are administrative rather than legislative in character.

The defeat of a proposition to issue bonds does not prevent a second submission of the proposition,²⁸ whereas a proposition to issue bonds which has been adopted by the voters ordinarily cannot be resubmitted in the absence of statutory authority.²⁹ However, a statute authorizing successive submissions of the proposition is not invalid,³⁰ and under some statutory provisions a second election to incur an additional bond indebtedness may be permissible where insufficient proceeds have been realized from a previous issuance of bonds;³¹ further, a new election has been held proper where a bond issue, although approved by the electorate, has been adjudged invalid.³² After the approval of the issuance of bonds by the voters, the enactment of new statutory or charter provisions requiring the submission of the question of a bond issue to the voters does not necessitate another vote where the new provisions are prospective in operation.³³ The adoption by the voters, at an election held in pursuance of a statutory provision, of a proposition to issue bonds for the purchase of an existing plant has been held to terminate the authority granted by a prior vote in favor of the issuance of bonds for the construction of an independent plant.³⁴

Later ordinance in furtherance of plan; variance. After approval of an ordinance providing for the issuance of bonds for the purchase or construction of a utility, later ordinances incidental to, and in furtherance of, the plan are not necessarily subject to a referendum.³⁵ Where there is some difference in the two ordinances, the question whether the later ordinance must also be approved by the voters depends on whether the changes made are legislative or administrative,³⁶ that is, whether the later ordinance makes a new law or merely executes the one already in existence,³⁷ a new vote being required if the change is legislative³⁸ but not if it is administrative.³⁹ In general, a vote is not required

Change held legislative

After approval by voters of ordinance authorizing bond issue, provision in later ordinance changing financial plan which resulted in stretching it over twenty years and eighteen annual payments of principal instead of fifteen years with thirteen annual payments was legislative in character and was subject to referendum.—Keigley v. Bench, supra.

39. Kan.—Lewis v. City of South Hutchinson, 174 P.2d 51, 162 Kan. 104.

Changes held administrative

(1) Where the voters approved a bond issue in a designated amount, an ordinance which specified the denomination and form of the bonds, the rate of interest, the maturity dates, and other matters common to utility bonds was held to be administrative rather than legislative in character and hence not subject to a referendum.—Tillamook Peoples'

on the later ordinance if the changes may reasonably be viewed as clearly within the ambit of the voters' intention when the original ordinance was adopted by them,⁴⁰ whereas a new vote is required if the change relates to matters which probably influenced the vote of the electors;⁴¹ and in this connection it may be assumed that a variance more favorable to the city than the submitted ordinance is in conformity with the voters' intent and presents no valid grounds for a new referendum.⁴²

Bonds authorized by an election should be issued within the time prescribed by statute, or, in the absence of statute, within a reasonable time after the election, the question of what constitutes a reasonable time in the particular case depending on the surrounding facts and circumstances.

While the bonds authorized by an election may be issued at once,⁴³ they need not be issued immediately,⁴⁴ but, in the absence of statute or ordinance prescribing a specified time, may⁴⁵ and must⁴⁶ be issued within a reasonable time after the election, the selection of the particular time of issuance resting in the discretion of the issuing authorities,⁴⁷ which will not be interfered with in the absence of arbitrary or fraudulent action on their part;⁴⁸ and, if the bonds are issued with reasonable promptness after the election, their validity is not affected by the fact that the body of taxpayers may have changed since the election.⁴⁹ Where the time of the issuance of the bonds has been submitted to the voters, such time cannot be departed from without their consent ascertained in the manner provided by law.⁵⁰

Under some statutes the bonds must be issued within a prescribed time after the date of the election or after final favorable determination of any litigation affecting such bonds,⁵¹ the purpose of such a statute being to prevent an undue delay in the issuance of the bonds⁵² and to prevent their being issued after the reason which prompted the electorate to assent has disappeared.⁵³ Such a statute is complied with, it has been held, where within the specified period the municipal authorities have made a contract with a purchaser of the bonds and nothing remains to be done except to deliver the bonds;⁵⁴ and, in the absence of undue delay, the fact that the mere mechanical and ministerial work of printing, signing, and delivering the bonds takes place after the expiration of the statutory period is not fatal.⁵⁵

(2) Provision in later ordinance changing the dates of the bonds and advancing the dates of interest and principal payments was administrative in character and not subject to a referendum.—Kelgley v. Bench, 89 P.2d 480, 97 Utah 69, 122 A.L.R. 756.

Manufacture or distribution of electricity

A favorable vote on the issuance of bonds for the construction of a municipal system to distribute purchased electricity does not authorize the construction of a generating plant and the manufacture of electricity a great many years later.—Jersey Central Power & Light Co. v. Changed circumstances

Where, some years elapsed before any steps were taken to carry out ordinance authorizing issuance of bonds to purchase electric light plant then serving the municipality or to construct a duplicate plant, and in the meantime city had so changed as to area, population, and demand for electrical energy that authorized bond issue would be insufficient to purchase then existing plant and probably insufficient to construct a duplicate system, ordinance had been rendered void through lapse of an unreasonable time and changed circumstances.—Bremerton Municipal League v. 55. Miss.—Love v. Mayor and Board of Aldermen of Yazoo City, supra.

There is no hard-and-fast rule as to what constitutes a reasonable time within which the bonds must be issued,⁵⁶ the question depending on all the surrounding facts and circumstances⁵⁷ and not merely on the length of time alone.⁵⁸ Even a delay of several years after the election is not fatal where under the circumstances the delay was reasonable and unavoidable⁵⁹ or where there has been no fraud or any radical change in conditions.⁶⁰

Issuance of all or part at one time. Where bonds have been authorized at an election, the municipality may issue them at one time in one issue,⁶¹ but it is not required to issue all the bonds at one time, and may issue them at different times as needed.⁶²

Actions attacking a municipal bond election must be brought within the time prescribed by law, and ordinarily are governed by the general rules applicable in civil actions with respect to parties, pleadings, and evidence.

It has been held that, in the absence of constitutional or statutory provisions so prescribing, a court of equity is without jurisdiction to set aside the result of a bond election on the ground that the election was fraudulently conducted.⁶³ Under statutes providing therefor, however, an action may be maintained attacking an election on a bond issue,⁶⁴ even though the result of the election has not been entered of record.⁶⁵ Mere allegations of fraud, dishonesty, or error of the election officials in calling the election, tabulating the votes, and making returns are not sufficient to justify an invasion of the secrecy of the ballot box in order to see whether, by such invasion, the allegations can, peradventure, be sustained.⁶⁶

Time. An action to contest the legality of the election or the bond issue authorized thereby must be brought within the time limited by constitutional or statutory provisions,⁶⁷ and should be tried as expeditiously as possible, without any unreasonable or unnecessary delays.⁶⁸ Under some provisions a bond issue cannot be contested after the lapse of a specified period from the date of the promulgation or publication of the result of the election authorizing the issue, in the absence of fraud or collusion.⁶⁹ Some limitations statutes have been held to apply where there has been a departure from the statutory method of holding an election only in minor details constituting irregularities or informalities,⁷⁰ and not where there was no attempt at all to comply with the statutes.⁷¹ A provision that the result of an election, as proclaimed by the mayor, shall be conclusive unless attacked in the courts within a specified time after such proclamation does not apply to an attack on a bond issue on grounds other than those relating to the result as proclaimed by the mayor.⁷²

Parties. Municipal taxpayers have been held to have legal capacity to maintain an action to test the validity of an election authorizing the issuance of municipal bonds,⁷³ and under some statutes an individual may contest a municipal bond election without being joined by anyone else;⁷⁴ but the action can be maintained only by one who has complied with the statutory requirements as to the maintenance of an election contest.⁷⁵ The members of the canvassing board and the county clerk have been held not proper or indispensable parties defendant in an action to contest the election.⁷⁶

Pleadings. The pleadings in a bond election contest are governed by the general rules of pleading.⁷⁷ Allegations of fraud in the conduct of the election should be sufficient to show that the results of the election would be changed if proof of the facts charged should be admitted.⁷⁸ Likewise, in a contest predicated on the participation in the election of disqualified voters, an allegation should be included to the effect that if the votes of disqualified voters were deducted from the total number of votes the result of the election would have been different;⁷⁹ but the contestee may waive the absence of such an allegation by failure properly to except thereto.⁸⁰ The petition in a bond election contest may be amended in a proper case.⁸¹ In a bond election contest it is proper to exclude evidence which is not properly admissible under the pleadings.⁸² The contestant need not prove matters definitely admitted by the answer of the contestee.⁸³

Evidence. In the absence of evidence to the contrary, a presumption may arise in favor of the regularity and validity of the election,⁸⁴ and also that the returns were made in accordance with legal requirements⁸⁵ and that a consolidation of returns is correct.⁸⁶ The votes of persons permitted to vote by the election judges are presumed to be legal,⁸⁷ and the burden is on the persons contesting an election on the ground of the disqualification of voters to show that their votes were illegal.⁸⁸ A charge of fraud committed in some of the voting precincts does not warrant the court in presuming that similar frauds were committed in the remaining precincts.⁸⁹ General rules apply as to the admissibility of evidence⁹⁰ and the weight and sufficiency thereof.⁹¹

Sale to agency of federal government
Municipality had the right to sell bonds to an agency of federal government which offered to buy major part of bonds and to make a grant.—

municipality to borrow money and to issue such securities.⁹³ The rules obtaining generally in determining the powers possessed by municipal corporations are applicable in determining the existence and extent of the power of a municipality, or its officers, to sell its securities.⁹⁴

Where the power to sell the bonds of a city is expressly conferred by statute on the common council, it cannot delegate the power to any third person;⁹⁵ but the council or other body or officer vested with authority in the premises may, in making the sale, act through the medium of a broker⁹⁶ or other agent.⁹⁷ The council may act by resolution.⁹⁸ The personnel of the council need not be the same at the time of sale of the bonds as at the time of the authorization of the issuance of the bonds;⁹⁹ and acts properly performed in the process of selling bonds by persons then in office are not invalidated by the expiration of their terms of office before the completion of the sale.¹

A municipality issuing bonds not callable for redemption before maturity will be presumed to have been benefited in the sale of the bonds by receiving a higher price than if the bonds had been callable for redemption.²

Time of sale or disposition. Bonds or other securities of a municipality are to be sold or disposed of at such time as is authorized or required by statutory or charter provisions.³ Authority to determine when bonds authorized by the legislature shall be sold is not legislative in its nature and it may be properly delegated to a board.⁴ Except to the extent that statutes or charter provisions may otherwise provide,⁵ it is beyond the power of a municipality to contract to sell or dispose of bonds before they come into existence,⁶ or, at least, before they are authorized;⁷ but, in the absence of a statutory provision to the contrary, a sale of bonds for the acquisition of property may precede the taking over of the property.⁸

In the absence of contrary statutory or charter regulations, the question of when it is advantageous to sell bonds is one for the determination of the municipal authorities rather than for the judgment of a court, and the only limitation which courts ordinarily place on the exercise of the discretion of the municipal authorities arises in circumstances where the purposes for which the bonds were originally voted have so changed that it would be inequitable to allow the bonds to be issued.⁹

Validity of statute

General statute requiring municipal bonds to be advertised for sale at least once each week for two successive weeks in newspaper of general circulation, is not invalid in its application to bonds, which were authorized by amendment to city charter to provide funds for establishing an electric light and power system, and which were to be paid entirely from revenues derived from operation of plant, as an infringement of constitutional provision prohibiting legislative repeal of municipal charters, since the refunding of the bonds under such circumstances is not purely a matter of local concern.—City of Cascade Locks v. The legislature may vest the municipality with wide power relative to the sale of bonds.²³ Where the power to sell or dispose of bonds or other securities is granted without restriction, the municipal authorities are free to dispose of them on such terms as they can obtain.²⁴ In such case municipal bonds or other securities may be sold at a private sale without advertisements for bids;²⁵ and a municipality authorized to issue and sell bonds to pay a debt or subscription may, where the debtor or beneficiary consents, deliver the bonds at par in payment of the debt or subscription in lieu of raising money on them by loan and then paying that money in discharge of the debt or subscription,²⁶ although it may not deliver bonds issued for one purpose in payment of property purchased for an entirely different purpose.²⁷ It is not illegal for a contractor with a city, on a cost-plus-a-fee basis, to use part of his fee in the purchase of bonds sold to raise funds for the work.²⁸

Sale for best interests of municipality. Some statutes and charters provide that municipal bonds shall be sold in such manner and on such terms as the council or other body shall deem for the best interests of the municipality,²⁹ or in such manner as the council may deem advisable, at not less than par and accrued interest.³⁰ Such provisions grant discretionary powers to the council or other body in the sale of bonds.³¹ Under such provisions it has been held that municipal bonds may be sold at a private sale,³² but it has also been held that such provisions do not permit the city to avoid public and reasonable advertisement or a proposal to receive bids or offers for bonds proposed to be issued and sold.³³ At any rate, under such provisions the city council may direct the city clerk to advertise for sealed bids for the purchase of the bonds.³⁴

Private sale after delay caused by litigation

Where city had been authorized by voters to issue bonds to build a municipal electric light plant, lawsuits had held up the sale of the bonds and erection of the plant for over six years, and, at the time the bonds were sold, a suit seeking to require a new bond election was pending, the act of the city council in selling the bonds for par and accrued interest without permitting competitive bids could not be condemned as unwise or arbitrary, notwithstanding generally public welfare may best be served by permitting competitive bids on all contracts where taxpayer's

A sale of municipal bonds to members of the city council is void; and under some statutes municipal bonds must first be offered to a specified commission having funds to invest.

A sale of municipal bonds to members of the city council is void;⁴¹ and some statutes prohibit any member of a municipal agency from being interested in any contract made for, or on behalf of, the agency.⁴² Under some statutes municipal bonds must be offered to, and declined by, a specified commission having funds to invest before they are sold or offered for sale to other persons;⁴³ but some of such statutes have been held invalid in so far as they require a municipality to offer bonds to a commission for sale at a price below their market value.⁴⁴ Under a charter provision that bonds may be awarded to the treasurer for

§ 1932. Discount, Commission, and Expenses

- a. In general
- b. Commission and expenses

a. In General

Unless prohibited by constitutional, statutory, or charter regulations, a municipal corporation may sell its bonds for less than their par value.

A sale by a municipal corporation of its bonds for less than their par value is permissible when expressly authorized,⁴⁶ or not prohibited,⁴⁷ by constitution, statute, or charter. On the other hand, municipal bonds may not be sold for less than par where such a sale is expressly prohibited by statutory or charter regulations or by ordinance;⁴⁸ and, under some provisions, municipal bonds may not be sold for less than a prescribed percentage of their par value.⁴⁹ Where the maximum rate of interest which municipal bonds may bear is fixed by statute, charter, or ordinance, the municipality may not sell the bonds below par so as to produce a greater rate of interest than is allowed by law;⁵⁰

but the bonds may be sold for less than par where as a result of such sale the actual interest rate does not exceed the rate fixed by law,⁵¹ at least in cases where there is no statutory or charter provision expressly prohibiting a sale below par.⁵² Where the rate of interest is not limited, bonds are not invalid because they have been sold below par, if the discount added to the interest expressed does not make the rate usurious.⁵³ Where the statute or charter authorizes the issuance and sale of municipal bonds bearing a certain rate of interest and directing their sale to the highest bidder, the provision with respect to interest has been held merely to refer to the form of the bonds and the method in which they shall be executed, and, in the absence of an express statutory or charter prohibition against the sale of the bonds below par, the bonds may be sold for less than par, even though such sale makes the rate of interest greater in effect than the rate provided for.⁵⁴

"Par" or "par value." "Par" means equal, and "par value" means a value equal to the face of the bonds, and a sale of bonds at par is a sale at the rate of a dollar in money for a dollar in bonds.⁵⁵ This is the accepted meaning of the term in the mercantile world, which the legislature is presumed to have adopted in enacting the statute.⁵⁶

Where nothing to the contrary appears the words "par" or "par value" include not only the principal but also interest accrued at the time of the sale;⁵⁷ and in some jurisdictions statutes expressly prohibit the sale of municipal bonds for an amount less than par with accrued interest.⁵⁸

A commission may be paid by a municipal corporation for the sale of its bonds or other securities where such payment is authorized by statutory or charter provisions.

In some jurisdictions it has been held that there is no authority in law for paying a commission for the sale of municipal bonds;⁵⁹ and a commission may not be paid for the sale of bonds or other securities where such payment is expressly forbidden by statutory or charter provisions.⁶⁰ In other jurisdictions, however, it has been held that a municipality may pay an agent or broker a commission for his services in effecting a sale of bonds;⁶¹ and a commission may be paid where authority to do so is expressly conferred on the municipality by statutory or charter provisions.⁶² Where a commission is allowed, it is not to be considered in determining whether the bonds were sold below par in violation of statute or charter regulations;⁶³ but the municipality may not allow a purchaser of the bonds at par a commission, as agent of the municipality for the sale of the bonds,⁶⁴ as in substance and effect this would be a sale of the bonds below par⁶⁵ and a violation of statutes requiring a sale at par.⁶⁶ A commission for the sale of municipal bonds may not be paid out of the sinking fund where such payment is prohibited by statute.⁶⁷

Expenses. There is considerable divergence of holding in respect of payment of expenses incident to a sale of municipal bonds, such as printing and attorney's fees, since it is variously held that such expenses may⁶⁸ or may not⁶⁹ be allowed the purchaser, or that they may⁷⁰ or may not⁷¹ be paid from the general funds of the city. The payment of such expenses out of the proceeds of the bonds has been held proper in some decisions,⁷² or, even if improper, not to be fatal to the validity of the bonds;⁷³ but in other decisions it has been held that such expenses may not be paid from the proceeds of the bonds unless the bonds sell at a premium sufficient to cover the expenses.⁷⁴

- b. Conditional bid or contract
- c. Rescission

a. In General

The acceptance by the municipal corporation of an unconditional bid or offer to purchase municipal bonds constitutes a complete contract for the sale and purchase of the bonds.

An unconditional bid, offer, or proposition to purchase municipal bonds and an acceptance thereof by the municipal corporation constitute a complete contract,⁷⁵ obligating the municipality to abide by its acceptance⁷⁶ and to issue⁷⁷ and deliver⁷⁸ the bonds. The municipality is liable for a breach of its contract for the sale of bonds in the same manner and to the same extent as individual persons or private corporations would be liable for breach of contract.⁷⁹ The contract of purchase obligates the purchaser to accept⁸⁰ and pay for⁸¹ the bonds.

Conversely, the contract is incomplete until the proposal is accepted,⁸² and the municipality inviting the proposals is not liable for damages for refusing to accept an offer, even though it is the highest regular offer made.⁸³ A person who, pursuant to an advertisement of sale, makes a bid for municipal bonds of a certain kind cannot be required to take all or part of the amount in bonds of another kind,⁸⁴ even though the latter bonds are equally valuable.⁸⁵ If the municipality was without power to issue the bonds, the bidder is not bound to take them.⁸⁶

A buyer of municipal bonds from a city is not liable in damages for refusing to accept them when their marketable value is destroyed or impaired by questions of legality arising from facts shown by, or omissions in, the records of the city;⁸⁷ and it is immaterial that after his refusal, and after the bonds have been sold by the city to other persons, the state supreme court adjudges the bonds to be valid, since the purchaser then has no opportunity to accept them with the benefit of such adjudication.⁸⁸

A contract for the sale of bonds, which is illegal and void in its origin, cannot be ratified by the city.⁸⁹

Deposit. The statutes and charter provisions sometimes require that the bidder submit with his bid a certain sum in cash or its equivalent.⁹⁰ The deposit is a pledge of good faith⁹¹ and protects the municipality against possible loss because of the failure of the bidder to comply with his bid, if it is accepted.⁹² The provision for such a deposit is one made wholly for the benefit of the municipality and is not for the benefit of other bidders or of individual taxpayers.⁹³ The requirement may be waived by the municipality,⁹⁴ and the failure of the bidder to make the deposit does not render the bid void or preclude the municipal officials from accepting the bid.⁹⁵

Where the bidder is required to accompany his bid with a deposit to be forfeited on failure to complete the purchase if his bid is accepted, he is not entitled to a return of the deposit where there exists no justifiable cause for his refusal to take the bonds;⁹⁶ and the municipality may declare the deposit forfeited where the purchaser or his assignee without cause unconditionally declares his intention to abandon the agreement.⁹⁷ On the other hand, if for any reason the bidder is entitled to be released from his bid, he may recover his deposit;⁹⁸ but interest on the deposit is not recoverable,⁹⁹ at least where the deposit is held in the registry of the court.¹

b. Conditional Bid or Contract

A bid to purchase municipal bonds subject to the approval of the legality of the issue by the attorney of the bidder is a valid and conditional bid.

A bid to purchase municipal bonds may be made subject to a valid condition,² but, if the condition is illegal, the bid may not be legally accepted by the municipal corporation.³ A bid or contract to purchase municipal bonds subject to the approval of the legality of the issue by the attorney of the bidder is a valid⁴ conditional⁵ bid or contract. Where an opinion favorable to the legality of the bonds is rendered by the bidder's attorney, the bidder is under obligation to accept and pay for the bonds.⁶ Where the bidder's attorney has honestly and in good faith, without fraud or collusion, rendered an opinion adverse to the legality of the bonds, the bidder is relieved of the obligation to take the bonds⁷ and is entitled to a return of the deposit accompanying his bid,⁸ regardless of whether the opinion is correct or erroneous⁹ and regardless

Contract between company and city, that company would buy and city would sell all revenue bonds to be issued by city to finance construction of city waterworks system if company received an "unqualified approving opinion" from third persons, called for an approving opinion preceding the time when consideration was to be paid for the bonds and not a final market opinion, and, therefore, company was not authorized to refuse to purchase the bonds and could not recover deposit of liquidated damages merely because opinion stated that it was impossible to give a final opinion.—City of El Campo v. South Tex. Nat. Bank of San Antonio, Tex.Civ.App., 200 S.W. 2d 252, error refused.

Resale of bonds by city

Where city advertised sale of its bonds to highest bidder, and plaintiff whose bid was highest and who had made deposit to insure good faith attached condition to bid that plaintiff's attorneys must approve legality of bond issue which bid was accepted by city, but plaintiff's attorneys disapproved bond issue whereupon city sold bonds to another without notice or tender to plaintiff, city had failed to fulfill its contract and plaintiff was entitled to return of its deposit.—Milwaukee Co. v. of whether the bonds are valid or invalid as a matter of law.¹⁰ Like rules obtain where a contract to find a purchaser for municipal bonds contains the same condition and is accompanied by a deposit.¹¹

On the other hand, where a bid is made subject to the legality of the issue generally without provision for approval by an attorney, the bidder is or is not bound according as the issue is or is not valid as a matter of law;¹² and, where the issue is valid and the bidder refuses to accept the bonds, he is not only not entitled to recover the deposit accompanying the bid,¹³ but is liable for such damages as the municipality suffers by reason of his breach of contract, even though such damages exceed the amount of the deposit.¹⁴

In a proper case a contract for the sale of municipal bonds may be rescinded or canceled.

A municipal corporation is entitled to a rescission of a sale of its bonds and to a return of the bonds where the buyer purchased when insolvent and without intention to pay for the bonds.¹⁵ A purchaser is entitled to a rescission and cancellation of the contract created by the acceptance of his bid where he made the bid under a misapprehension of the valuation of the taxable property in the municipality, and a statement as to such valuation contained in a circular inviting bids was false,¹⁶ or the bidder was honestly mistaken as to the meaning thereof.¹⁷

§ 1934. Proceeds of Sale

The proceeds of a sale of municipal bonds issued for a particular purpose belong to the fund to which they were dedicated and must be used for the purpose for which the issuance of the bonds was authorized.

The proceeds derived from the sale of municipal bonds or other securities are to be used or disposed of in such manner as is directed by statutory or charter provisions.¹⁸ All the proceeds of a sale of bonds issued for a particular purpose belong to the fund to which they were dedicated,¹⁹ and cannot be legally transferred to another fund.²⁰

The funds or proceeds arising from a sale of municipal bonds or other securities must be used for the purpose for which the issuance of the bonds was authorized²¹ and may not be diverted to, or used for, other purposes,²² unless such use is merely incidental to, and reasonably implied as part of, the designated object for which the bonds were authorized²³ or unless the diversion is authorized by a valid statute.²⁴ Thus, in the absence of authority conferred by statute or charter, the proceeds arising from a sale of bonds for a particular purpose may not be used to pay the general indebtedness of the city.²⁵ A statute, making a certificate of the auditor that the requisite funds are in the treasury a condition precedent to an ordinance or contract involving the expenditure of money, does not apply to an ordinance appropriating the money obtained from the sale of bonds to the purpose for which the bonds were sold.²⁶

The obligations incurred by the municipality on receipt of the proceeds of the sale of the bonds are essentially those that rest on the custodian of a trust fund.²⁷ The municipality is bound to see that the fund is applied to the purposes for which it was created;²⁸ but that in general is the extent of its obligation²⁹ and it is not bound to complete the entire improvement for which the bonds were authorized;³⁰ nor is it under any obligation to use immediately the full amount derived from the bond issue.³¹

It may be proper to deposit the proceeds of bonds in a bank³² or to purchase government bonds.³³ In the case of improvement bonds, the city may not permit the purchaser of the bonds to retain the proceeds, without security to the city, and pay them over to the city only as the work on the improvement progresses.³⁴

poses do not declare what proportion of the proceeds of the sale of the bonds shall be applied to each specific purpose.³⁵ Under such statutes the matter is left to the sound discretion of the city authorities.³⁶

Disposition of premium. Any premium on the sale of municipal bonds is to be used or disposed of in such manner as the statutes or charter provisions direct.³⁷ Under some statutes any premium realized on the sale of municipal bonds issued for a particular purpose is to be placed in the fund created to fulfill such purpose and is not to be used for interest and redemption payments,³⁸ at least until the purposes and objects for which the bonds were issued have been fully accomplished.³⁹ Under other statutes the net premium is credited to, and held in the sinking fund for, the purpose of reducing the tax levy necessary to pay the interest thereon and to create a sinking fund for the retirement of the bonds.⁴⁰ Where a city, on the sale of water bonds, received a sum in excess of the face of the bonds for accrued interest coupons which were left attached to the bonds, such sum should be deducted from the water bond fund and set apart to be applied to the payment of the coupons.⁴¹

Where the city issues bonds for a particular purpose to the limit allowed by law, any premium realized on the sale of the bonds may not be used for such purpose, but becomes a part of the general funds of the city.⁴²

Disposition of excess funds. Funds received from the sale of municipal bonds over and above the amount needed for the particular purpose for which the money was borrowed are to be used or disposed of in such manner as may be directed by constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions or by ordinance.⁴³ Where the ordinance providing for the issuance of the bonds so requires, any excess funds obtained by the sale of the bonds should be placed in the general sinking fund of the city.⁴⁴ Where the constitution or statutes expressly provide that the proceeds of a bond sale shall be used only for the purpose specified and for no other purpose, a balance of funds received from a bond issue after the purpose for which the money was borrowed has been served may not be used for another purpose, but must be placed in the sinking fund for the purpose of retiring pro tanto the bonds issued in excess of the amount needed for the purpose for which they were issued.⁴⁵ However, excess funds may be diverted to other purposes to the extent authorized by statutory or charter provisions.⁴⁶

Disposition of funds realized on sale of improvement. Where a municipality sells bonds for the purpose of purchasing or constructing an improvement, such as a public utility, and after its acquisition or construction the municipality sells such improvement, the funds realized on the sale of the improvement are to be used or disposed of in accordance with statutory directions.⁴⁷ Under some

Interest on unexpended funds

Where interest on daily balances on unexpended bond funds of city has been credited by county treasurer to general fund instead of sinking fund and where there was on hand in general fund on July 1 of that fiscal year much larger sum out of which the sum could have been properly transferred to sinking fund, but such funds were not on hand at time of hearing before court of tax review, that court, while having no authority to order funds transferred to general fund, could direct that record be corrected to show that such sums were sinking fund account asset.—*Sinclair Prairie Pipe Line Co. v. 4. FORM, CONTENTS, VALIDITY, AND CONSTRUCTION GENERALLY

§ 1935. Form and Contents in General

Municipal bonds and other securities should be in such form and contain such recitals as are prescribed by constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions.

Constitutional, statutory, and charter regulations frequently prescribe the form and contents of municipal bonds and other securities,⁵⁰ and such securities should be in the form and contain the recitals required by such regulations.⁵¹ Nevertheless the failure to comply with mere directory provisions as to matters of form will not invalidate the bonds,⁵² nor will a mere misnomer of the municipality issuing the bonds.⁵³ Surplusage in the bonds will not invalidate them where no substantial right is affected.⁵⁴

The conditions on which municipal bonds are authorized to be issued need not be expressed in such bonds.⁵⁵ Printed bonds duly executed and substituted for typewritten bonds are valid, if the typewritten bonds were valid.⁵⁶

Discretion of municipal authorities. The municipal authorities have a discretion in fixing the form and contents of municipal bonds or other securities

Removal from sinking fund

(1) City council would not be permitted to divert money realized from sale of city's interest in bridge from sinking fund, in which council by ordinance had directed money be placed, to current general expense fund, where bonds issued by city to secure capital required for improvement had been excluded from computation of city's bonded indebtedness, since effect of diversion would be to make city's debt greater than was allowed by statute.—Corporation for Relief of Widows and Children of Clergymen in Communion of Protestant Episcopal Church in Commonwealth of Pennsylvania v. City of Philadelphia, 176 A. 727, 317 Pa. 76.

(2) Money received by city from sale of city's interest in bridge, money for erection of which had been obtained by city by bond issue, was properly placed in sinking fund by ordinance, and could not be removed therefrom by city council to current general expense fund, in view of statute requiring all money pledged for such debt to be paid into sinking fund and to be inviolably reserved for and applied exclusively to debt.—Corporation for Relief of Widows and Children of Clergymen in Communion of Protestant Episcopal Church in Commonwealth of Penn-

§ 1936. Denomination

Municipal bonds may be issued in such denominations as are authorized by statute or charter provisions.

Municipal bonds may be issued in such denominations as are authorized by statute or charter provisions.⁵⁹ Where a municipal corporation is authorized to issue bonds of a certain denomination, bonds for a greater denomination cannot lawfully be issued.⁶⁰ The municipality or its council may fix the denominations of the bonds where such authority is conferred by statute.⁶¹ Where the statute fixes a minimum and maximum limit as to the denominations of the bonds, the municipality or its council has authority to exercise discretion within the limits prescribed.⁶²

§ 1937. Provisions or Recitals as to Particular Matters

Municipal bonds and other securities should contain provisions or recitals as to such matters as are required by constitutional, statutory, and charter regulations.

Municipal bonds and other securities should contain provisions or recitals as to such particular matters as are required by constitutional, statutory, and charter regulations.⁶³ Where a portion of the municipal area has been excluded since the time when municipal bonds were issued, refunding bonds should contain some recognition of the territorial exclusion, particularly where the taxing covenant in the refunding bonds is confined to the property in the present limits of the city.⁶⁴ In the absence of a constitutional or statutory regulation or restriction, the municipal authorities may insert in the bonds as an inducement to prospective holders that any subsequent issue of like bonds will be subordinate and junior to the issue in question.⁶⁵

§ 1938. — Authority to Issue

Municipal officers in issuing bonds have the right and duty to refer to the authority under which they are acting.

It is the right and duty of municipal officers to refer in issuing bonds to the authority under which they are acting.⁶⁷ The bonds should refer to the statutes which constitute their true basis.⁶⁸ Trifling errors in recitals have no effect on the validity of the bonds, if lawful authority to issue the bonds had been conferred on the issuing authority, although it is incorrectly recited or described.⁶⁹ A recital on the face of the bonds of a statute which does not grant authority to issue them is not fatal to their validity, where power to issue the bonds has been vested in the municipality by appropriate legislation,⁷⁰ and it is not claimed that any condition precedent to the issuance required by the

The ordinance under which the bonds are issued may,⁷⁴ and, under some statutes, must,⁷⁵ be designated in the bonds.

§ 1939. — Name, Purpose, or Class

In issuing bonds, municipal corporations should comply with statutory provisions requiring recitals as to the purpose and name of the issue and the class of indebtedness.

In issuing bonds and other securities, municipal corporations should comply with statutory provisions requiring such bonds to express on their face the purpose for which they were issued,⁷⁶ bear an appropriate name indicating the purpose of their issuance,⁷⁷ state on their face the class of indebtedness to which they belong,⁷⁸ or, in the case of improvements, identify the improvement, as by stating the name of the street or the name and number of the district.⁷⁹ It has been held, however, that the improper naming of bonds issued by a city does not invalidate them;⁸⁰ and bonds representing a valid indebtedness are not rendered unenforceable by their failure to recite the class of indebtedness to which they belong, as required by statute.⁸¹

Municipal bonds or other securities may bear interest at such rate and from such time as is authorized by constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions.

Where authorized by constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions, as is usually the case, municipal bonds or other securities may bear interest.⁸² The provisions of at least one state constitution, however, prohibit, or have prohibited, municipalities from issuing any interest-bearing evidences of indebtedness, except such bonds as may be authorized by law to provide for and secure the payment of the indebtedness existing at the time of the adoption of the constitution.⁸³ Where the Nature of interest

Amendment to constitution

Const. 1874 art 16 § 1 was amended by Amend. No. 13 which provides, among other things, that cities of first and second class may issue bonds at an interest rate not greater than six per cent per annum payable from a tax not to exceed five mills.—Lewis v. Tate, 195 S.W.2d 640, 210 Ark. 326.

Purpose of constitutional prohibition

(1) Purpose of restriction is to prohibit municipalities from issuing interest-bearing evidence of indebt-

bonds or other securities call for the payment of interest contrary to the constitutional prohibition, the provision for interest is treated as surplusage and does not render the instruments void.⁸⁴

Rate of interest. In various jurisdictions, the rate of interest which municipal bonds or other securities may bear is expressly limited by constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions.⁸⁵ Such securities may bear the rate of interest thus authorized.⁸⁶ Where the maximum rate is fixed by statute or charter, the municipal authorities have a discretion in fixing the rate within the statutory maximum.⁸⁷ Refunding bonds may be issued at a rate not exceeding the maximum rate, notwithstanding the bonds to be refunded by the new issue bore a lower rate of interest.⁸⁸ While it has been held that, where a city is authorized to issue bonds bearing a certain rate of interest, bonds cannot lawfully be issued at an increased rate of interest,⁸⁹

it has also been held that, when bonds bear a greater rate of interest than that authorized, they are valid obligations for the principal and the authorized rate of interest.⁹⁰ The validity of municipal bonds will not be affected by the fact that they provide for interest at a lesser rate than that which they are authorized to bear.⁹¹

In some jurisdictions no interest rate is prescribed by the constitution, statutes, or charter provisions or such provisions leave the determination of the rate of interest to the municipal authorities.⁹² Some authorities take the view that, under such statutes, where only part of the authorized issue has been actually issued, the remainder may be issued and negotiated at a different rate of interest,⁹³ but other authorities take the view that there should be only one rate of interest for the entire issue.⁹⁴

Time from which interest runs; accrued interest. The interest allowed on municipal bonds and other securities runs from such time as is fixed by statutory or charter provisions.⁹⁶ A statute authorizing the issuance of bonds at a certain rate of interest means that interest should run from the date of their issuance.⁹⁷ Municipal bonds issued for the purpose of retiring existing bonds cannot be made to bear interest from a date prior to that at which the old bonds fell due, where the municipality is without power to contract a new debt.⁹⁸

It has been held that a person who has purchased, or has agreed to accept in payment of the contract price for work done, bonds or debentures which, according to the terms of a statute or by-law, bear interest from a certain date is entitled to the bonds or debentures with all interest coupons attached thereto, even though one or more of the coupons may have matured before the delivery of the bonds or debentures;⁹⁹ but there is also authority to the contrary.¹ Under some statutes the accrued interest is credited to, and held in the sinking fund for the purpose of, reducing the tax levy necessary to pay the interest on the bonds and to create a sinking fund for the retirement of the bonds.²

§ 1941. — Payment

- a. In general
- b. Time for payment
- c. Place of payment
- d. Medium of payment

- e. Fund or source from which securities payable

a. In General

Municipal bonds or other securities must contain such provisions relative to payment as are required by constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions.

Such provisions relative to payment must be inserted in municipal bonds or other securities as are required by constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions;³ but the municipal authorities may determine and fix the terms as to payment to the extent that constitutional, statutory, or charter regulations confer discretion on them⁴ or where the law fails to prescribe the terms.⁵ A municipality is liable on the coupons of municipal bonds, although such coupons themselves show no promise or undertaking on the part of the municipality, where by the express terms of the bonds the municipality is bound for their payment.⁶ Where an ordinance of a city authorizing a contract with a gas company and the issue to it of bonds of the municipality provides that such company shall "guarantee the said bonds and assume the payment of the principal thereof at maturity," the indorsement on the bonds by the president of such company guaranteeing "the payment of the principal and interest" is a compliance with the ordinance and contract as to the guaranty.⁷

b. Time for Payment

Municipal bonds and other securities are to be made payable at such time or times as may be prescribed by constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions.

Constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions usually designate the time within which municipal bonds or other securities shall be made payable.⁸

Thus, under various provisions an issue of municipal bonds or other securities shall not extend beyond a certain number of years from the date of issuance,⁹ or from the date of the taking effect of the by-laws providing for their issuance.¹⁰ Such provisions have been held to be mandatory¹¹ and to constitute a limitation on the power of the municipality to issue the securities,¹² and bonds or debentures having a longer time to run than that prescribed are void.¹³ On the other hand, bonds running for a shorter period than the maximum prescribed by the constitution or statute may be lawfully issued;¹⁴ and it has been held that the period prescribed by charter or statute may properly be computed from a date subsequent to the execution of the bonds, such as the date when the bonds commence to bear interest, where the interval is only a reasonable time for issuing and delivering the bonds.¹⁵

Determination of maturity by municipal authorities. The municipal authorities may fix the maturity date of municipal bonds and other securities where such authority is conferred on them by constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions.¹⁶ Such provisions leave the fixing of the maturity date to the discretion of the municipal authorities.¹⁷ Furthermore, the municipal authorities are vested with discretionary power in fixing the maturity date where the law does not prescribe the time for which the securities may run.¹⁸

Acceleration of maturity. Some statutes and charters make provision for the reservation of a right or privilege in municipal bonds or other securities to pay or redeem before they would otherwise mature.¹⁹ When authority is thus conferred, the municipality may insert in the bonds or other securities an option to pay before maturity;²⁰

Although municipal bonds have on their face many years to run, nevertheless an indorsement on each of them to the effect that, if default is made in paying any of the interest coupons at maturity, then as a part of the contract the bond itself shall become due and payable, will be given effect, whenever a default in paying interest according to any of the coupons occurs.—Griffin v. Macon City Bank, 58 Ga. 584.

and the municipality may insert in its bonds or other securities an option to redeem before maturity under a statute giving the municipality the authority to determine the length of time such securities shall run.²¹ A reservation for payment before maturity is in the public interest.²²

Some statutes providing for the reservation of a right or privilege to pay or redeem municipal bonds before they would otherwise mature are construed to be mandatory,²³ but others are construed to confer an option for the benefit of the city which may be waived by it,²⁴ and still others are construed to apply only to bonds bearing a higher rate of interest than that permitted by prior statutes.²⁵ Where a reservation of a right to redeem conflicts with a statute, the reservation is void, but the bonds are not invalidated thereby.²⁶

Payment at one time or in installments. When authorized by statutory or charter provisions the municipal authorities may make municipal bonds or other securities payable serially or in installments;²⁷ and the bonds must be made payable serially or in installments when constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions so direct.²⁸ The first installment is to be made payable at such time as may be prescribed by constitutional or statutory provisions,²⁹ such as after the lapse of a certain number of years from the date of issue.³⁰ Some statutes requiring payment in installments provide that not less than a certain proportion of the whole amount shall be paid each year,³¹ while others provide that not more than a prescribed proportion shall fall due in any one year,³² but it has been held that a violation of the latter provision does not invalidate the bonds in the hands of a purchaser who was without means of ascertaining whether the municipal officers complied with the requirement.³³ Under such statutes, the bonds must be made so payable that they will mature in installments in each year following their issuance and during their term,³⁴ and under some charters or statutes the amounts to be paid each year must be equal or uniform in amount,³⁵ although it is immaterial whether the amount payable each year is to be paid in one installment or in semiannual installments,³⁶ but, under other statutes, leaving the determination of the part of the bonds which shall be payable each year to the legislative body of the municipality,³⁷

Where the municipality pursuant to the express terms of the statute inserts in the bonds a provision authorizing it to call them after a certain date in such manner and form as it deems best, the municipality is not required at the time of the issuance to provide also in the bonds the method by which the bonds are to be liquidated at the time the option to redeem is exercised.—*Reuther v. the annual payments need not be uniform in amount.³⁸

Time for payment of interest. In the absence of statutory or charter regulations, interest may be made payable at such time or times as the municipal authorities may determine;³⁹ but, where the time for payment of interest is fixed by constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions, the interest must be made payable at the time or times prescribed.⁴⁰ In the absence of statutory or charter regulations to the contrary, whether the interest on bonds shall be payable annually or semiannually is a matter to be determined by the officers authorized to issue them.⁴¹ A provision merely fixing the maximum rate of interest per annum generally permits the municipal authorities to exercise their discretion in making the interest payable annually or at shorter periods than a year, such as semiannually or quarterly.⁴² Payment at periods less than a year does not operate as such an increase of the rate of interest as will affect the validity of the bonds.⁴³ A statute providing that bonds shall bear interest not exceeding a certain rate of interest payable semiannually does not require that the interest shall be payable semiannually but merely requires that the rate of interest shall not exceed semiannual interest at the rate prescribed.⁴⁴ If, however, the statute provides that the interest shall be payable annually, bonds with interest payable semiannually may not be issued.⁴⁵ Where the statute requires the interest to be made payable semiannually, the fact that the first installment of interest is, as a matter of convenience, made payable for a little less or a little more than six months will not invalidate the bonds.⁴⁶

Municipal bonds are to be made payable at such place as statutory or charter provisions may designate, but, in the absence of statutory or charter directions, they ordinarily may be made payable at such place as may be determined by the municipal authorities.

Municipal bonds and other securities may,⁴⁷ and should,⁴⁸ be made payable at the place prescribed by law; but, where a statute authorizing the issuance of such bonds or other securities does not designate the place at which they shall be made payable, the municipal officers whose duty it is to issue them may in their discretion determine where they shall be made payable.⁴⁹

(1) Deferred interest coupons, attached to refunding bonds as evidence of deferred obligation to pay in lump sum at maturity of bonds difference between stated interest rate per annum and lesser rates specified in new bonds, were valid.—State v. City of New Smyrna Beach, 4 So.2d 660, 148 Fla. 482.

(2) Provision for paying half the difference between interest rate on original city bonds and refunding bonds represented by deferred interest coupons if called before maturity could not be severed from provision making bonds callable on any interest date.—Meredith v. City of Winter Haven, C.C.A.Fla., 141 F.2d 348, rehearing denied 141 F.2d 1019, certiorari denied 65 S.Ct. 42, 323 U.S. 733, 89 L.Ed. 592.

(3) If provision for payment of of one-half the difference between rate of interest on original city bonds and refunding bonds if called before maturity was void because not approved at popular election, but severable from provision making bonds callable before maturity, refunding bonds were unenforceable in part, so that, under resolution of city commission authorizing refunding bonds, holders could enforce payment as holders of like amount of refunded indebtedness, plus interest at rate provided in original bonds to date of call less interest payments made, but not to exceed amount due under provision for payment of deferred interest.—Meredith v. City of Winter Haven, supra.

(4) Where city refunding bonds bore same rates of interest as original bonds, provision that interest in excess of three per cent per annum maturing on and before Jan. 1, 1936, should be extended and certificates of indebtedness bearing two per cent interest issued therefor so as to relieve city of cash payments during such period was valid.—State v. City of Miami, 157 So. 13, 116 Fla. 517.

(5) A covenant made by city in issuing refunding bonds, to refund accrued unpaid interest by issuance of delinquent tax notes, did not render bonds invalid, though amount of unpaid interest and of delinquent tax notes was not known.—State v. City of Lakeland, 180 So. 754, 132 Fla. 489.

The Depository Act was not intended to interfere with the power of municipal corporations to contract as to the place where their bonds and interest coupons were legally to be made payable, or with the manner in which they were to be handled in

Municipal bonds and other securities may be made payable at a place outside of the state where the municipality is expressly authorized to make such provision;⁵⁰ and it has generally been held that, in the absence of express authority or restriction, the municipality has implied power to make its bonds and other securities payable outside of the state.⁵¹ In some jurisdictions, however, it has been held that a municipality has no implied power to make its bonds payable at any place other than its treasury,⁵² and that a provision in bonds for their payment at another place is void,⁵³ although the invalidity of the provision does not render the bonds void.⁵⁴

In the absence of statutory or charter directions or restrictions a municipal corporation may fix the medium in which the principal and interest of its bonds may be paid.

Where the statute authorizing the issuance of municipal bonds contains no directions as to the medium in which the bonds shall be paid, the municipal corporation has a discretion in fixing any medium of exchange not otherwise prohibited.⁵⁵ General power to issue municipal bonds carries with it, in the absence of legislative restrictions, the implied or incidental power to make them payable generally, that is, in currency which is constitutionally a legal tender, or payable in a particular coin which constitutes the legal and commercial standard by which the value of other kinds of currency is measured.⁵⁶ Although there is authority to the contrary,⁵⁷ it has been held that, in the absence of legislation to the contrary, municipal bonds may be made payable in gold coin of the United States, of the present standard weight and fineness.⁵⁸ Where the proceedings preliminary to the issuance of the bonds, including the proposition voted on by the electors, provided that the bonds should be payable in gold coin, in the absence of directions contained in the statute authorizing the issuance of bonds as to the medium of payment the city may nevertheless make them payable in lawful money of the United States.⁵⁹

Municipal bonds or other securities must contain such provisions, recitals or covenants with respect to the fund or source pledged to secure payment as are required by constitutional, statutory, or charter regulations.

When authorized by constitutional, statutory, or charter regulations, municipal authorities may insert in municipal bonds or other securities provisions, recitals, or covenants with respect to the fund or source pledged to secure payment or from which the securities are payable,⁶⁰ and they are under a duty to insert such provisions when constitutional, statutory, or charter regulations so direct.⁶¹ Thus, under such regulations the municipal authorities may, or when directed, must, insert in municipal bonds or other securities a provision, recital, or covenant that the securities shall be payable out of taxes or that the municipality shall levy or be obligated to levy taxes for their payment,⁶² or that the municipality will collect that place.—City of Casper v. Joyce, supra.

Pledge in original and refunding bonds

Refunding bonds issued under charter provision authorizing city to pledge net revenues of its light and water department in addition to full faith and credit of city for payment of refunding bonds were not invalid as going beyond the pledge of original bonds issued under former charter provision pledging the full faith and credit of the city for the payment thereof.—State v. City of Fort Pierce, 19 So.2d 468, 155 Fla. 58.

Tax on different areas in municipality

Fla.—State v. City of St. Petersburg, 173 So. 434, 127 Fla. 509.

Tax on homesteads

Refunding bonds and interest certificates proposed to be issued by city to be exchanged for principal and in-taxes for payment of the securities in the same manner and at the same time that other taxes are collected, and that it will not accept payment of other taxes unless there is also paid at the same time the taxes for payment of the securities,⁶³ or that the securities shall be payable from the revenues derived from the operation of a public utility or facility.⁶⁴

Where, as a matter of law, the full faith and credit of a city are pledged for the payment of bonds, the fact that the bonds set forth a formal pledge to this effect does not affect their validity.⁶⁵

Tax anticipation notes. When required by statute, tax anticipation notes, warrants, or certificates must show on their face that they are payable solely from taxes when collected;⁶⁶ and, when authorized by law, the municipal authorities may covenant that the delinquent taxes and tax certificates pledged to secure the payment of delinquent tax anticipation notes shall be paid and discharged solely by the payment and receipt of money.⁶⁷

§ 1942. Validity

Municipal bonds or other securities, valid when issued, ordinarily are not rendered invalid by subsequent events.

The validity of municipal bonds or other securities has been considered in connection with various objections.⁶⁸ Subsequent events ordinarily terest claims of bonded debt were not invalid under homestead exemption provisions of constitution, enacted subsequent to issuance of original bonds, because of provisions obligating city to levy taxes on homesteads for payment, since instruments constituted extension of original contract, and bondholders were entitled to have tax levy made on property as authorized under original bonds.—State v. City of West Palm Beach, 174 So. 334, 127 Fla. 849.

Lands excluded from city

Provisions in refunding bonds for a tax on lands excluded from city since issuance of original bonds were held valid.—State v. City of Fort Myers, 198 So. 814, 145 Fla. 135.—State v. City of Auburndale, 197 So. 739, 144 Fla. 210.

63. Fla.—State v. Town of Gulfport, 189 So. 703, 138 Fla. 505.—State v. City of Lakeland, 180 So. 754, 132 Fla. 489.—State v. City of Orlando, 170 So. 887, 126 Fla. 251, 127 Fla. 280.

Acceptance of lawful money in payment of taxes

The covenant of a city issuing refunding bonds to accept nothing but lawful money in payment of taxes or special assessments imposed for payment of bonds and delinquent notes, except that delinquent tax notes would be accepted in payment of special assessments for particular years, did not render bonds invalid under statute permitting use of past-due obligations in paying taxes levied for payment of interest and for sinking fund.—*State v. Compromise of special assessments Where refunded bonds were general obligations of municipality but payment thereof had as additional security special assessments which municipality was obligated to collect for use in such bond payments, fact that city has compromised special assessments does not affect validity of refunding bonds which merely continued obligations of refunded bonds.—Fahs v. Kilgore, 187 So. 170, 136 Fla. 701.

Effect of power of sale in mortgage

Until a power of sale in a mortgage on a municipal water system is sought to be exercised, its mere grant in a mortgage securing bonds cannot affect otherwise valid bonds.—City of Hamlin v. Brown-Crummer Inv. Co., C.C.A.Tex., 93 F.2d 680, certiorari denied Brown-Crummer Inv. Co. v. City of Hamlin, Tex., 58 S.Ct. 831, 303 U.S. 664, 82 L.Ed. 1122.

Exemption of homesteads from taxation

Fact that bonds refunding public improvement bonds issued by town might be subject to discretionary power of general assembly to exempt from taxation homesteads not exceeding one thousand dollars in value would not affect validity of refunding bonds.—Nash v. Board of Com'rs of St. Paul, 190 S.E. 475, 211 N.C. 301.

Improvements costing more than amount of bonds

Bonds are not void because the improvements will cost more than the amount of bonds authorized.—Wheeler v. Denver, Colo., 231 F. 8, 146 C.C.A. 196, appeal dismissed 38 S.Ct. 10, 245 U.S. 626, 62 L.Ed. 518.

Statutory provisions for election to approve tax levy by town board to aid town port commission in performing its duties do not affect validity of latter's bonds, since such election is not a condition precedent to issuance of such bonds.—Webb v. Port Commission of Morehead City, 172 S.E. 377, 205 N.C. 663.

do not invalidate a bond issue.⁶⁹ Municipal bonds which are valid when executed cannot be rendered void by a subsequent charter amendment.⁷⁰ Bonds which are valid when issued and sold cannot be defeated by the failure of municipal authorities to do their duty with respect to things to be done or records to be made after the bonds have been issued.⁷¹ Revenue bonds issued in connection with a municipal utility are not invalidated by the failure of the city to name a city utility commission to manage the plant, as required by statute, where the statute does not make the establishment of the commission a condition precedent to the issuance of the bonds.⁷²

The obligations of a municipality will be sustained if authorized by any statute, even where the municipality apparently is acting under an invalid law.⁷³ Bonds which are in fact issued under a valid charter provision are not rendered invalid by the fact that, in issuing the bonds, the municipal officers assume to act under invalid charter amendments.⁷⁴

The validity of revenue bonds, the proceeds of which are to be used for a particular purpose, is not impaired by the fact that funds derived from general taxation, or from other sources, also have been, and are to be, used for the same purpose.⁷⁵ Refunding bonds are not rendered invalid because a part of the proceeds of some of the original bonds was spent in installing improvements beyond the legal corporate limits of the city when

at the time such proceeds were used the area benefited was included as a part of the city by a statute which was subsequently declared invalid.⁷⁶

Collateral attack on validity. The validity of bonds cannot be tried in a collateral proceeding.⁷⁷

Effect of reincorporation of municipality. The dissolution of a municipal corporation and its reincorporation with less territory does not invalidate bonds issued before its dissolution.⁷⁸

§ 1943. — Who May Challenge

The validity of municipal bonds may not be challenged by a person who has not been injured by their issuance.

The validity of municipal bonds may not be challenged by a person who has not been injured by their issuance;⁷⁹ by one for whose benefit they were issued when the municipality has never repudiated them or denied its obligation to pay them, principal and interest, and does not propose to repudiate them;⁸⁰ by a ministerial officer of the municipality charged only with the duty of paying the bonds;⁸¹ or by the holders of bonds duly authorized, who have, without objection, allowed a large amount of bonds to be issued in violation of their rights and to pass into the hands of bona fide holders.⁸²

On the other hand, where corporate bonds recite their issue under a certain valid statute, and in

Determination of validity from charter section

Sometimes a section of a municipal charter is so worded that the validity of particular bonds is to be determined from an examination of that section alone.—Wheeler v. Denver, Colo., 231 F. 8, 145 C.C.A. 196, appeal dismissed 38 S.Ct. 10, 245 U.S. 626, 62 L.Ed. 518.

Failure of private persons to contribute

If contemplated contribution to harbor project by private persons is not made or project fails of completion, such result would not show lack of authority to exercise powers conferred by charter acts on cities issuing bonds for project, since subsequent events do not invalidate bond issues.—*State ex rel. pursuance of its provisions, and nothing on their face indicates their invalidity, a defendant to a bill, seeking their sale in part satisfaction of certain liens, may, by cross bill, show that they are in reality void, and thus prevent the court from decreeing a sale, whereby they may pass for value to innocent purchasers.⁸³

§ 1944. — Ratification or Estoppel

- a. In general
- b. By levy of taxes for payment
- c. By payment of principal or interest

a. In General

In the absence of legislative sanction, a municipal corporation may not ratify municipal bonds issued without authority and a municipality may not be estopped to deny the validity of bonds where it was without power to issue them.

An issue of municipal bonds without authority of law may not be ratified⁸⁴ without legislative sanction.⁸⁵ Where there is a total want of power to issue bonds, a municipality cannot be estopped to raise such a defense⁸⁶ by admissions,⁸⁷ recitals in the bonds, as considered infra § 1968, the issuance of securities negotiable in form,⁸⁸ any acts or conduct on the parts of the officers⁸⁹ or inhabitants⁹⁰ of the municipality, or even by the receipt and enjoyment of the proceeds of the bonds.⁹¹

On the other hand, irregularities in the execution and issuance of bonds, or in the proceedings preliminary thereto, may be cured by ratification;⁹² the acts of municipal officers constituting a distinct recognition of the validity of the bonds estop the municipality to assert their invalidity on the ground of irregularity in their issuance;⁹³ and when a municipality has authority to issue bonds, it may be estopped by long acquiescence in their validity to assert that certain conditions attached to the exercise of the power were not complied with.⁹⁴ A municipality having received and retained stock which was issued in exchange for its bonds cannot raise the objection that the bonds and coupons were not made payable at the time directed by the statute;⁹⁵ but a claim that a town, by accepting and retaining stock of the railroad company for which the bonds were exchanged in violation of a statute, ratified the issue of bonds cannot be upheld where a judgment has previously been rendered, which was not appealed from, adjudging that such bonds were void, and that the certificates of stock should be delivered up and canceled.⁹⁶ Where a town was a de facto corporation at the time it issued certain bonds, and after reincorporation of the town the succeeding de jure corporation assumes the payment thereof as authorized by statute, the bonds become valid obligations of the succeeding corporation.⁹⁷

A person at whose instance municipal bonds have been issued is estopped to question their validity.⁹⁸ Abutting owners will not be heard to question the legality of municipal bonds issued to pay for street paving or other like improvements, where the bonds were issued before the assessment was made and the abutting owners allowed the work to proceed to completion without objection.⁹⁹

The levy of a tax or assessment to pay municipal bonds irregularly issued estops the municipal corporation to deny their validity.

Where the power to issue municipal bonds existed but has been irregularly exercised, the levy of a tax or an assessment for their payment estops the municipal corporation to deny their validity.¹ On the other hand, the levy of a tax to pay municipal bonds does not estop the municipality to deny their validity where they were issued without authority,² or in excess of the constitutional limit,³ or to aid a purely private enterprise,⁴ or were fraudulently issued by officers in satisfaction of a judgment already paid;⁵ and sometimes ratification⁶ or estoppel⁷ is held not to result from the levy of a tax for the payment of interest where, at the first opportunity thereafter, liability is denied and payment refused.

c. By Payment of Principal or Interest

The payment of a part of the principal of municipal bonds void at their inception, or the payment of interest thereon, does not estop the municipal corporation to deny their validity.

Where municipal bonds are void in their inception for want of power to issue them,⁸ or because in excess of the debt limit,⁹ or because issued in aid of a private enterprise,¹⁰ and not merely because of irregularities in their issuance, the payment of a part of the principal or the payment of interest thereon by the municipal corporation, however long continued, does not amount to a ratification which estops the municipality to plead their invalidity. On the other hand, where there is authority to issue bonds, a municipality may, by paying a part of the principal thereof or the interest thereon, become estopped to deny that they are binding obligations,¹¹ because of irregularities or defects in their issuance or in the proceedings preliminary thereto,¹² particularly where the bonds contain recitals that they were duly authorized and regularly issued,¹³ or where the municipality has received and retained the proceeds of the bonds¹⁴ or has renewed them at maturity.¹⁵

Where the legislature ratifies, or authorizes a city to ratify, an issue of bonds, and authorizes the city to levy taxes to pay the interest on such bonds, the levy of taxes for such purpose and the application of the proceeds to the payment of the interest for a number of years constitute a ratification of the bonds.¹⁶ Ratification of one series of bonds does not result from the payment of interest on another series of bonds issued for a different purpose and for which the municipality received full consideration.¹⁷

§ 1945. — Curative Constitutional or Statutory Provisions

The effect of curative statutes ratifying municipal bonds or other securities is to validate such securities from the beginning.

In various jurisdictions constitutional and statutory provisions have been enacted validating municipal bonds or other securities.¹⁸ The purpose of such provisions is to protect individual investors and to maintain the salability of municipal securities.¹⁹ The intention of the legislature to cure or ratify municipal bonds or other securities must clearly appear,²⁰ especially where the bonds have been declared invalid by a court²¹ or the municipality has not received any consideration therefor.²²

Whether or not a curative act applies to particular municipal bonds or other securities depends on the terms of the act;²³ and in various cases a curative statute has been held to apply²⁴ or to be inapplicable²⁵ to particular municipal securities. An act expressly relating only to bonds previously issued does not validate bonds issued subsequent to its passage.²⁶ Where the curative statute applies to all proceedings which have been taken prior to the date the statute becomes effective, it is not limited to a situation where bonds have been already issued or to a situation where the validation proceedings had previously been completed, but covers a situation where the proceedings for the issuance of the bonds had been taken before the adoption of the statute.²⁷

Effect of curative acts. The rule that curative statutes make the acts to which they relate valid ab initio, considered in the C.J.S. title Statutes § 430, also 59 C.J. p 1179 note 51, applies to curative statutes relating to municipal bonds and other securities,²⁸ provided no vested rights have intervened.²⁹ Curative statutes cure all defects resulting from a failure to comply with provisions which are merely directory of the mode of the exercise of the power,³⁰ but they cannot cure defects and omissions which go to the jurisdiction of the mu-

5. EXECUTION, ISSUANCE, DELIVERY, AND REGISTRATION

§ 1948. Execution, Issuance, and Delivery

A municipal corporation may not issue bonds except on substantial compliance with charter and statutory provisions.

It is within the power of a state to prescribe the form of execution of municipal bonds,⁴⁸ and, if not executed in the manner prescribed, they impose no liability.⁴⁹ The execution of municipal bonds may precede their sale and delivery.⁵⁰ A municipal corporation may not issue bonds except on substantial compliance with charter and statutory provisions.⁵¹ Bonds are issued, not when they are authorized or executed,⁵² but when they are delivered,⁵³ that is, when the possession and control thereof pass from the municipality to the donee or purchaser or some person in whose hands they become a claim or charge against the municipality;⁵⁴ even though executed, the bonds do not become operative and obligatory unless and until they are delivered.⁵⁵ In the absence of a statute requiring bonds to be issued at or within a specified time, a municipality may issue authorized bonds from time to time in its discretion,⁵⁶ and particular

(1) A mere lapse of time between

bonds have been held not invalidated by delay in their issuance.⁶⁷

Municipal bonds may and should be executed,⁵⁸ issued,⁵⁹ and delivered⁶⁰ by, or with the authority of, the officers designated by statute or ordinance. However, some statutes designating the officers to sign the bonds have been held to be directory only,⁶¹ and, in the absence of a mandatory statutory direction, the bonds may be signed by any of the officers of the municipality who have been appointed or designated for that purpose by the governing board of the municipality⁶² or the body having power to issue the bonds.⁶³ The bonds may and should be signed by persons who are in office at the time of execution,⁶⁴ even though they are not in office at the time of the sale and delivery of the bonds,⁶⁵ and even though, according to some,⁶⁶ although not other,⁶⁷ authorities, they were not in office at the time stated in the bonds as the date of issuance. In the issuance, signing, and delivery to a purchaser of municipal bonds, the acts of officers de facto are, as to third persons, equally as binding on a municipality as though they had been officers de jure.⁶⁸

The duty to sign or attest duly authorized bonds has been held to be a ministerial duty whose performance may be compelled⁶⁹ unless the bonds are unlawful or contravene some statutory, charter, or constitutional limitation,⁷⁰ but it has also been held that a mere ministerial officer has no right to question the validity or constitutionality of the bond issue.⁷¹

Coupons. The fact that the coupons are not properly signed, as where they are signed by only one officer, is not fatal where the bonds to which the coupons are annexed are properly signed and sealed by the municipal officers⁷² or contain a authorization and issuance of bonds, such as sewer and drain bonds, by a city, does not in and of itself show a forfeiture or an abandonment of the right to issue bonds duly approved by the electors—Quaid v. City of Detroit, 29 N.W.2d 687, 319 Mich 268.

(2) A delay, even of several years, in exercising city's authority to issue bonds, will not necessarily cause forfeiture of such authority, if delay was reasonable, prudent, or necessary in light of all facts and circumstances.

Facsimile signatures

(1) Where city charter required bonds to be signed by mayor and city treasurer and countersigned by comptroller and attested by city clerk, comptroller was not obliged to countersign bonds executed by other named officers by printed, lithographed, or engraved facsimile signatures adopted as official signatures, since words "signed" and "attested" meant manual signatures.—Smith v. Curran, 255 N.W. 276, 267 Mich 413, 94 A.L.R. 766.

(2) The fact that railroad aid bonds have the signature of the clerk of the council lithographed thereon does not render them invalid—Lexington v. Union Nat. Bank, 22 So. 291, 75 Miss. 1.

(3) Revenue certificates and attached coupons, executed in accordance with city charter, are not invalid because ordinance providing for execution thereof authorizes officers to cause execution of coupons by their respective facsimile signatures—State v. City of Fort Lauderdale, 5 So 2d 263, 149 Fla. 177.

Acting officers not qualified statement that the officers have caused one of their number to sign the coupons.⁷³

Stock. Limited power to issue stock is sometimes conferred on the mayor and council of a city.⁷⁴

Notes. A municipal corporation may issue its notes only by the hand of one or more duly authorized agents.⁷⁵ The mayor empowered by the board of aldermen to execute a note exceeds his authority by executing a bond.⁷⁶ Some statutes designate the officers by whom the notes of a municipality shall be signed and countersigned.⁷⁷

Seal. It has been held by some,⁷⁸ although not all,⁷⁹ authorities that municipal bonds are not necessarily invalidated by the fact that they are not under seal. Municipal bonds are not invalidated because after their issuance a stranger affixes to them wafer seals opposite the names of the officers who signed them but neglected to affix their seals as required by law.⁸⁰

Date. Municipal bonds or debentures are properly dated as of the date of their actual issuance;⁸¹ but they are not necessarily rendered invalid by a mistake in their date⁸² or by the fact that they are antedated⁸³ or bear no date.⁸⁴

Registration of municipal bonds is essential under some statutes.

Under some statutes municipal bonds must be registered by a specified officer,⁸⁵ such as the state auditor.⁸⁶ Where a statute expressly provides that bonds must be registered and certified as such before they shall obtain validity or be negotiated, a compliance with the statute is essential to the validity of the bonds;⁸⁷ but if it merely provides that they shall be registered, and does not provide that they shall not be valid until registered, the statute will be construed as directory,⁸⁸ and a failure to register will not invalidate the bonds,⁸⁹ although all bonds issued as registered bonds, notwithstanding the registration is not a condition precedent to their validity, ought to be registered.⁹⁰ Where bonds have been duly certified as registered by the proper officer, the fact that he failed to make a record of such registration in his office will not destroy their validity.⁹¹

When bonds are presented to the proper officer for registration, he is authorized and required, before registering or refusing to register, to ascertain whether the bonds were issued in compliance with law⁹² and whether the signatures of the officers thereto are genuine;⁹³ but he does not exercise judicial functions.⁹⁴ It is his duty to register the bonds on a prima facie showing that they have been issued in compliance with the conditions prescribed by law;⁹⁵ and he is not relieved of the

Two sets of bonds

The state auditor, having registered bonds based on special election, was not precluded from registering additional bonds based on authority of same special election, where auditor was not requested to register second set until after proof had been made that first set was not sold, that they had never become obligations of city, that they had been destroyed, and that ordinance authorizing their issuance had been repealed.—Missouri Electric Power Co. v. Smith, 155 S.W.2d 113, 343 Mo. 738.

discharge of this duty by mere delay or nonaction of the municipality in issuing and negotiating bonds after authorization by an election,⁹⁶ or by a failure to show or prove matters antedating the judgments to refund which the bonds are issued,⁹⁷ or, in the case of railroad aid bonds, by a failure to prove that the purposes of the aid have been accomplished.⁹⁸

In some cases it is provided by statute that bonds shall not be entitled to registration unless the question of creating the indebtedness was submitted to the voters of the municipality at an election,⁹⁹ or that, when presented for registration, any interest coupons shall be detached which will mature before the first tax levied to pay them will become due and collectable,¹ or that after registration the auditor shall notify the authorities issuing the bonds of the fact of such registration.² The certificate of the municipal officer required by statute as to a compliance with the conditions entitling the bonds to registration need not be positive,³ but may be sworn to on the best of that officer's knowledge and belief.⁴ Payment or tender of the prescribed registration fee is necessary before registration will be compelled,⁵ and, where convertible coupon bonds contain a recital that they may be registered at the option of the holder, the proper remedy, in case of a refusal of the authorities to register them on demand, is a suit for specific performance of the contract, and not mandamus or an action for damages.⁶ Where bonds are presented for registration but the registration is delayed by injunction, they should, when actually registered, be registered as of the date when presented.⁷

Under some statutes bonds duly registered are prima facie valid⁸ although registration is not conclusive of validity and the bonds may nevertheless be shown to be invalid.⁹ It has been held that bonds registered while a suit attacking the validity of the bonds is pending are not within a statute providing that registered bonds are prima facie valid.¹⁰

Municipal bonds may be negotiable instruments with all the qualities, attributes, and incidents of commercial paper where they possess the essential requisites of negotiable paper, notwithstanding they are sealed instruments.

Municipal bonds may be negotiable or nonnegotiable.¹¹ While it has been said that municipal bonds were originally held not to be negotiable because they were sealed instruments, they subsequently came to be acknowledged by the courts as negotiable instruments,¹² and it is now well established that bonds issued by a municipal corporation under statutory authority may be negotiable,¹³ with all the qualities, attributes, and incidents of commercial paper,¹⁴ notwithstanding they are sealed

Negotiable Instruments Law applied

(1) The Negotiable Instruments Act applies to municipal bonds and must be looked to in determining instruments,¹⁵ where they possess the essential requisites of negotiable instruments,¹⁶ or, in other words, where they are negotiable in form¹⁷ and payable at a future date.¹⁸

It has been held that the negotiability of municipal bonds is not affected by the fact that by the statute under which they were issued the municipality has the right, at its option, to pay them before they are due.¹⁹ Also, the omission to insert the name of a payee is not a feature, or a defect, which affects the negotiability of the bonds;²⁰ bonds payable to bearer are negotiable paper,²¹ and are deemed payable to the holder, as discussed infra § 1955, who is not regarded as the assignee of the contract²² but as the holder through transfer by delivery.²³ It has been held that in order that municipal bonds may constitute commercial paper they must contain recitals that prerequisites or conditions precedent imposed by statute have been complied with.²⁴

Municipal bonds are not negotiable when they are payable on a contingency,²⁵ or only out of a particular fund,²⁶ such as a fund derived from special assessments.²⁷ Sometimes municipal notes are so worded as to be nonnegotiable,²⁸ as where they provide for payment in municipal bonds.²⁹ The coupons usually attached to municipal bonds may be negotiated after they have been separated from the bond.³⁰

Provision for increase in interest rate

(1) Fact that bonds provided for an increase of interest on the happening of certain contingencies did not render such bonds nonnegotiable as not being a promise to pay a sum certain.—State v. City of Inverness, 188 So. 767, 137 Fla. 629.

(2) Refunding bonds are not nonnegotiable because of covenant that, on default by city, rate of interest of bonds would revert to the original rate borne by the bonds being refunded.—State v. City of Fort Myers, 198 So. 814, 145 Fla. 135.

Tax anticipation notes have been held to be negotiable instruments.³¹

Registered bonds. Bonds or stock registered in the holder's name under a system limiting their transfer are not negotiable instruments,³² although they are assignable.³³ Registration of the bonds before issuance to establish the regularity and authority of the issue, discussed supra § 1949, does not affect the character of the bonds as negotiable instruments where the bonds are not registered in the names of their owners or holders and no restrictions are imposed on their transfer.³⁴

§ 1951. Power to Issue Negotiable Paper

Unless such power is conferred on it by statute or charter, a municipal corporation has no power to issue negotiable bonds or other negotiable instruments.

Unless such power is conferred on it by charter or statute, a municipal corporation has no power to issue negotiable bonds or other negotiable instruments.³⁵ According to some authorities the power does not exist unless it has been expressly conferred on the municipality by the legislature,³⁶ but other authorities take the view that the power may be implied,³⁷ and it has frequently been held that a mere grant of power to issue bonds implies that bonds having the commercial quality of negotiability may be issued,³⁸ in the absence of provisions showing a contrary intention.³⁹

The power to issue negotiable bonds may not be implied from the right to borrow money⁴⁰ or to contract an indebtedness,⁴¹ but there is also authority to the contrary.⁴² Where a municipality has power to issue negotiable paper, the power may be exercised only as specified in the grant of the power.⁴³ Where a municipal corporation has the power to bind itself by written obligation, without the power to make such instrument negotiable, and it executes its written obligation, making it negotiable in form, the instrument will not in fact be negotiable,⁴⁴ but it will not be void.⁴⁵

Obligations circulating as money. The issuance by municipalities of bills, scrip, or other corporate obligations to circulate as money has been frequently prohibited by express statutes;⁴⁶ and it seems that, even in the absence of such express prohibition, municipalities have no right to exercise this prerogative;⁴⁷ but there is no violation of law where scrip is issued by a municipality for a lawful purpose and not to circulate as money,⁴⁸ even

Registration by treasurer

Municipal bonds, in order to be registered under statute, need not be presented by owner or any other particular person; owner could ratify town treasurer's act in registering municipal bonds under statute by treating them as registered after they bore treasurer's indorsement showing registration.—Sims v. U. S. Nat. Bank, supra.

Release from registration

Fact that owner's attorney unauthorizedly presented registered municipal bonds to town treasurer, who wrote thereon, "Released from registration," and subsequently pledged them with banks, did not entitle banks to prevail against owner, statute not being complied with.—Sims v. Refunding bonds. A statute authorizing cities to issue refunding bonds has been construed as giving authority to issue negotiable bonds in the usual form;⁵³ but power to issue new negotiable bonds having the attributes of commercial paper to take the place of a former issue may not be implied merely from ordinary municipal powers,⁵⁴ from the power conferred by statute to issue the original bonds,⁵⁵ or from a mere power to borrow money without authority to issue bonds.⁵⁶

§ 1952. Mode of Transfer

Unless otherwise provided by statute, municipal bonds

Unless provided otherwise by statute,⁵⁷ municipal bonds which are on their face made payable to bearer or to a person therein named or bearer are transferable by delivery,⁵⁸ without indorsement⁵⁹ or assignment.⁶⁰

The transfer of nonnegotiable municipal bonds is governed by the law of the place where the transfer is made,⁶¹ although the bonds were executed in another state.⁶² Such bonds have been held not within the purview of the Uniform Stock Transfer Act.⁶³

Coupons. Where the statute authorizing the issuance of municipal bonds provides that they shall be transferable only on the books of the city, interest coupons, which have been attached to the bonds, are not transferable except in the same manner as the bonds themselves.⁶⁴

Notes. Where a note purports to have been made by a town to the order of its treasurer, the treasurer has no authority to impose a financial obligation or liability on the town by indorsing the note.⁶⁵

Impairment or diversion of sinking fund as impairment of contract see Constitutional Law § 312 c.

"Sinking fund" defined

A sinking fund, within constitutional and statutory provisions requiring city to maintain such fund for retirement of obligations, is a fund instituted and invested in such manner that its gradual accumulations will enable it to meet and wipe out a debt at maturity; a fund spe-

to a municipality to establish a sinking fund is exhausted by its exercise,⁶⁷ and the municipality is without power to rescind its exercise of the power and disestablish the fund.⁶⁸ Where a sinking fund is created by statute for existing bonds, holders of interest coupons which mature while the statute remains in force have a vested interest in the fund;⁶⁹ but holders of coupons which mature after the repeal of such a statute acquire no rights therein.⁷⁰

A sinking fund may not be diverted from the purpose for which it is created;⁷¹ but where it is not pledged to the redemption of any specific bonds it may be applied to the redemption of bonds held as a part of the fund under a statute authorizing the sinking fund commissioners to cancel all bonds that may have been purchased by them for the redemption of the debt of the city.⁷² It has been held that the measure of damages arising from the failure of a city to provide a sinking fund as it has agreed in the contract with its bondholders is not capable of legal computation.⁷³

Revenues constituting fund. A sinking fund is properly composed only of taxes and other revenues⁷⁴ and not of borrowed money.⁷⁵ Where it is provided that a certain portion of the revenue of a city, derived from a particular source, shall be set aside as a sinking fund, it has been held that it is intended that such proportion of the gross revenue shall be so set aside.⁷⁶ A tax collected for a sinking fund may not be used or applied for any other purpose.⁷⁷

Custody and control. The right to the custody

Funded debt

Under constitutional provision that every city should create sinking fund, which should be inviolably pledged for payment of city's funded debt, term "funded debt" included all municipal indebtedness embraced within or evidenced by bond, principal of which was payable at time beyond current fiscal year of its issue, with periodical terms for payment of interest.—Corporation for Relief of Widows and Children of Clergymen in Communion of Protestant Episcopal Church in Commonwealth of Pennsylvania v. City of Philadelphia, 176 A. 727, 317 Pa. 76.

Lease of municipal gas plant

A bondholder cannot object to a lease of a municipal gas plant on the ground that the ordinance authorizing the issue of bonds for an extension of the plant provided for a retention of a certain amount of the annual receipts of the plant for the purpose of creating a sinking fund, where there is no pledge of the receipts of the plant for the security of the loan and there is no showing that the sinking fund has not been kept up by appropriation from the city treasury from time to time as required by law.—Baily v. Philadelphia, 39 A. 494, 184 Pa. 594, 63 Am. S.R. 812, 39 L.R.A. 837—44 C.J. p 1233 note 32.

Sinking fund for payment of refunding bonds

Where city issued refunding bonds for purpose of exchange and to take place of outstanding bonds, and refunding bonds were supported by a sinking fund, a holder of outstanding bonds who refused to exchange them for refunding bonds could not enforce payment of principal and interest of outstanding bonds from money held in the sinking fund created for the refunding bonds.—State ex rel. Garland v. City of West Palm Beach, 193 So. 297, 141 Fla. 244, followed in *State ex rel. Garland v. and control or supervision of sinking funds may be and is generally fixed by statute;⁷⁸ but sometimes the right to possession of instruments or documents involved in the administration of the fund is fixed by ordinance.⁷⁹ While the city has the legal title to money raised for a sinking fund,⁸⁰ together with the right to collect, manage, and protect it,⁸¹ such legal title is held in trust for the bondholders.⁸² The actions of officers vested with supervision over a sinking fund may not be controlled by injunction unless the fund is in danger of being wasted or impaired,⁸³ or unless a liability will be incurred or an injury done by threatened or probable misfeasance for which the officers' bonds or personal responsibility will afford no probable or adequate redress.⁸⁴

Investment. Some statutes expressly or impliedly authorize or require the investment of municipal sinking funds.⁸⁵ The investment may be made only in the securities,⁸⁶ and according to the requirements,⁸⁷ prescribed by statute, and any other investment or disposition of the funds is illegal and void.⁸⁸ Under some statutes the investment may be in bonds of the municipality,⁸⁹ although they are of another series⁹⁰ and mature at a later date⁹¹ than the bonds secured by the sinking fund. Under some statutes any surplus in the sinking fund must first be used to redeem or purchase bonds secured by the sinking fund, and only if such bonds are not available on fair terms may the surplus be invested in other bonds.⁹² It has been held that authority to purchase municipal bonds for the sinking fund does not extend to the purchase of bonds at the time they are offered for sale by the city;⁹³ but, as discussed supra § 1931, the statutes may expressly require that the bonds shall be offered to, and declined by, the sinking fund commission before they are sold or offered for sale to other persons. Where the statute provides for the investment of the prepaid assessments in bonds at par, the city may not purchase at less or more than par;⁹⁴ the determination of what bonds are worth par is within the sound discretion of the city officers,⁹⁵ and, if a municipal officer determines

§ 1954. Redemption, Cancellation, Extension, or Exchange

The right of a municipal corporation to redeem bonds is governed by the terms of the bonds and the provisions of the statutes and ordinances under which the bonds were issued and sold.

The right of a municipal corporation to redeem bonds is governed by the terms of the bonds and the provisions of the statutes and ordinances under which the bonds were issued and sold.⁹⁷ Where so provided in the statute or ordinance or in the bonds, the municipality may redeem bonds before their maturity,⁹⁸ but, in the absence of a provision therefor either in the bonds or a statute, bonds issued for a certain number of years are not redeemable before maturity without the consent of the persons holding them,⁹⁹ and the right to redeem bonds may not be conferred by a statute enacted after their issuance.¹ The existence of a constitutional or statutory right to refund bonds does not necessarily imply the right to call bonds for payment if they are not due.²

Redemption must be in the manner and on the terms provided by statute or the bonds,³ and, where there is no provision as to the nature of the notice required of the municipality as to its exercise of the option to redeem, reasonable notice is sufficient.⁴ Redemption may be made from any funds which the municipality may properly allocate to such purpose,⁵ but it has been held that a municipi-

Holder of street improvement bond, providing for payment from special assessment fund only, held not entitled to refuse payment from other sources before maturity.—Bal-

pality may not redeem part of a bond issue out of the funds pledged for the payment of all of the bonds where the funds are insufficient.⁶ The mere assertion by the bondholders of a claim for additional interest will not deprive the municipality of the right to proceed to redeem the bonds, nor does it require the municipality to postpone redemption until the determination of the claim.⁷

Interest. Where bonds are redeemed, interest is payable only to the date of delivery⁸ and current and future interest coupons are canceled,⁹ but a call for redemption does not stop the running of interest where proper notice is not given bondholders and funds for redemption are not on hand.¹⁰

Purchase of own bonds. It has been held that a purchase by the city of its own bonds to be placed in a sinking fund does not operate as a cancellation or retirement of such bonds.¹¹ Bonds so purchased constitute assets¹² and may be sold,¹³ subject to applicable limitations;¹⁴ but it has also been held that the purchase by a municipality of its own bonds before maturity amounts to their payment¹⁵ precluding their reissuance.¹⁶

Refund; exchange. Although bonds may be paid by their exchange for refunding bonds, where the bondholders consent,¹⁷ bonds may not be refunded in a manner which deprives the bondholders of their vested rights¹⁸ and a bondholder may not be compelled to accept refunding bonds in exchange for his bonds.¹⁹ Where the statute authorizing an issue of new bonds in exchange for outstanding bonds provides that the holders of outstanding bonds shall have the right to surrender them and receive the new bonds in lieu thereof, such holders of outstanding bonds may not be required to receive the new bonds at a premium.²⁰

It is no valid objection to municipal bonds that a single bond was at first issued in payment of the whole of a subscription in aid of a railroad, and afterward bonds of smaller denomination were given in exchange for the single bond.²¹

Extension. Where a statute confers on bondholders the right to an extension, its terms must be complied with by the bondholders in order to entitle them to demand such an extension.²²

Fla.—Rountree v. State, 135 So. 888, 102 Fla. 246.

Legislative transfer of liability

Legislative acts purporting to release city from liability on its validly issued bonds did not constitutionally release city where creditor did not accept arrangement, although acts imposed payment of bonds on special taxing district, and acts were not void but required district to pay bonds and to indemnify city for actions brought against it by bondholders.—City of Fort Lauderdale v. State ex rel. Elston Bank & Trust Co., 169 So. 584, 125 Fla. 89.

Contract to pay bonds

A person who enters into a contract with a municipal corporation to redeem bonds issued by the corporation cannot avoid liability on the contract on the ground that the cor-

the legislature fixes a method by which bonds are to be paid that method must be followed.²⁴ Payment of the bonds may be made from such funds as may be properly allocated to such purpose,²⁵ and it has been held to be the duty of the treasurer to pay matured bonds out of funds created for that purpose without any further order or allowance by the mayor or city council.²⁶ A municipal corporation does not free itself from liability on its bonds by merely placing funds for their payment in the hands of the proper officers²⁷ or with the bank at which the bonds are payable.²⁸ In the absence of provision to the contrary, bonds are payable at the treasury of the municipality.²⁹

Presentation of the bonds ordinarily is not necessary to entitle a bondholder to payment.³⁰ However, while municipal bonds need not be presented for audit,³¹ if they are transferable by delivery they should be presented by the holder³² or notice given to the corporate body in order that the owner may be known.³³ Where an interest coupon passes by delivery like a bank note, the holder is not bound to show his chain of title at the time he demands payment,³⁴ but it has been held that the city pays overdue coupons at its peril.³⁵

To whom payable. Bonds in which the name of the payee is not inserted are payable to bearer,³⁶ and bonds payable to bearer are deemed payable to the holder.³⁷ Where the bonds are negotiable in form³⁸ or are indorsed in blank by the payee³⁹ the municipality is justified in making payment to the holder, in the absence of any notice on its part of his want of title;⁴⁰ but where a city has had notice of the theft or loss of bonds it is, in order to justify a payment, bound to show that the holders to whom payment was made were purchasers in good faith before maturity and for value;⁴¹ and, where nonnegotiable municipal bonds have been stolen, the person from whom they were stolen,⁴² rather than the person who came into possession of them through a chain of transfers from the thief,⁴³ is entitled to payment from the municipality.

Medium of payment. If the bonds do not specify the medium of payment, they may be paid in any medium which is a legal tender at the time of their maturity;⁴⁴ but holders of municipal bonds may not be compelled to accept in payment anything but legal tender.⁴⁵ pality deposited with such institution sum to meet coupons, but institution failed on October 13 before holder had presented coupons for payment, holder subsequently presenting coupons to town treasurer could recover amount thereof, and was not estopped to do so because it had on prior occasions always collected interest by sending coupons to financial institution.—*Lusk State Bank v. Plans for reorganization of debt. A statute providing a plan for the readjustment of the debts of a municipality may not affect the rights of nonconsenting bondholders⁴⁶ and will be construed so as to preserve their vested rights.⁴⁷ A liquidation plan for the payment of a bond issue is not subject to attack by a taxpayer where the plan will result in a tax saving,⁴⁸ nor is it subject to attack by a nonconsenting bondholder where the plan provides for the payment of the bonds of nonconsenting bondholders at par with accrued interest.⁴⁹ Where, on the insolvency of a municipal corporation, bondholders accept refunding bonds under a provision subrogating them to all the rights, remedies, and privileges of the holders of the original securities, they are entitled to as much of the funds available for the payment of interest and principal as they would have been entitled to on the unrefunded claim, provided it does not exceed the amount to which they are entitled under the refunding bonds.⁵⁰

b. Priorities

Valid provisions as to priority in the payment of municipal bonds may be enforced.

Valid provisions as to priority and preference in the payment of municipal bonds may be enforced.⁵¹ A mere provision that a certain sum annually shall be paid on certain bonds does not give the holders priority over other bonds;⁵² nor does the fact that one issue is older than another give it priority.⁵³ Priority of demand of payment ordinarily will not create priority between bondholders.⁵⁴ As a general rule, where bonds are payable from a special or limited fund, there is no priority or preference among the bonds, but they are entitled to share in the fund pro rata,⁵⁵ at least where the fund is insufficient to pay all of the bonds in full.⁵⁶

Provision for levy and collection of annual tax

Where a city's taxable values decreased to such an extent that maximum annual tax required under statutes and constitutional provisions was insufficient to pay interest and provide sinking fund to pay principal of city's bonds on maturity, the provision for levy and collection of such annual tax did not constitute such an appropriation of the maximum taxing power of the city as to give priority to the first and earlier issues of bonds over bonds of a second or subsequent series.—Bankers Life Co. v. City of Littlefield, supra.

Payment of previously matured bonds

Where redemption fund, not replenishable by general levy, is insufficient to meet all outstanding district street improvement bonds, in absence of express statutory power bondholder may not compel full payment of his bonds, regardless of whether district is insolvent or whether previously matured bonds have been satisfied in full.—Kerr Glass Mfg. Corporation v. City of San Buenaventura, 62 P.2d 583, 7 Cal.2d 701.

Declaration of insolvency

Municipal bond redemption fund could be declared insolvent without finding of city's insolvency in suit by bondholder for equitable relief, where bonds were in default and maximum special tax levy would not produce more than enough to pay interest.—Brown-Crummer Inv. Co. v. City of Burbank, D.C.Cal., 17 F.Supp. 469, appeal dismissed, C.C.A., 97 F.2d 993.

Fund replenishable

Bondholder may compel full payment of his bonds, even though redemption fund is insufficient to meet all outstanding bonds, if fund is replenishable by general levy.—Kerr Glass Mfg. Corporation v. City of San Buenaventura, 62 P.2d 583, 7 Cal.2d 701.

Under statutes or bonds so providing, bonds have been held payable in the order of their maturity⁵⁷ or in numerical order,⁵⁸ and not pro rata even though the fund for payment is insufficient;⁵⁹ but it has also been held that, unless the statute or bonds clearly indicate the creation of a preference,⁶⁰ provisions for payment in numerical order,⁶¹ or at different maturity dates,⁶² or on presentment⁶³ will not be construed to create a preference but as merely fixing the order of payment where the fund is sufficient and the fund is to be distributed pro rata where it is insufficient.⁶⁴ Where the fund is to be pro rated, it has been held that it is to be pro rated in accordance with the amount of the bonds remaining due and unpaid and not in accordance with the amount of the bonds issued.⁶⁵

The holders of tax revenue and anticipation notes have been held entitled to payment ahead of, and in priority to, the general obligations of the municipality.⁶⁶

c. Interest after Maturity

Municipal interest-bearing bonds usually continue to bear interest when they are not paid at maturity.

Unless a contrary intent is indicated by statute,⁶⁷ interest-bearing or coupon bonds of a municipal corporation, which are not paid on demand at maturity, usually continue to bear interest,⁶⁸ especially

Owner of all bonds

Under statute giving owner of all outstanding bonds on any public improvement a right to immediate payment from proper disbursing officer of all payments made by property holders whether or not due, owner of special assessment bonds was held entitled to compel payment in accordance with statute as against contention that law under which bonds were issued provided that the bonds should be paid in order of their maturity.—Conter v. Statute not express as to order of payment

Where the statute authorizing the issuance of street improvement bonds by a municipality fails to provide in express language that the bonds shall be paid in numerical order, and the fund available is insufficient to pay them in full, the fund should be applied pro rata to their payment.—Brown-Crummer Inv. Co. v. City of Purcell, Okl., C.C. A Okl., 128 F.2d 400.

Proceedings instituted before effective date of statute

Where proceedings for street improvements were commenced prior to effective date of act providing that bonds are payable in their numerical order, the bonds were payable pro rata, notwithstanding they were not issued or the contractor's actual construction work begun until after the effective date of the act providing that bonds are payable in their numerical order.—Overstreet v. Interest on excessive payments to others

A judgment, equalizing all purchasers of serially maturing city street improvement bonds as of agreed date, should have allowed purchasers of later maturing bonds interest on their proportionate shares of city's payments of principal to holders of previously maturing bonds from dates of such payments until date of equalization—Enslin v. where it is so provided,⁶⁹ and this is also true of interest or interest coupons which are not paid;⁷⁰ but according to some authorities interest coupons do not bear interest after maturity unless such interest is provided for by contract or legislative act.⁷¹

Interest on interest or interest coupons has been held payable only from the time payment is demanded and refused and not from the date when payment is due,⁷² and it has been held that the city is not liable for interest accruing after maturity where it has funds on hand to pay the bond at maturity and the bond is not then presented at the municipal treasury or other designated place of payment,⁷³ but it has also been held that, where there are no funds to pay bonds if presented, they will continue to draw interest, although not presented,⁷⁴ and that, where no actual notice is given to the holder of an interest-bearing municipal bond which is overdue to present it for payment and surrender, and there is no statutory method provided for the calling in of such a bond and fixing a day beyond which interest will not run, interest will continue to accrue on such an obligation in the same manner as on an ordinary note of a private person.⁷⁵

The holder of a bond payable from assessments has been held not entitled to interest for the period after maturity, but before presentment, if the municipality has not collected interest on assessments for such period,⁷⁶ but if the municipality has collected principal and interest and fails to pay the bonds when presented it is liable for interest from the date of presentment until the bonds are paid.⁷⁷ Under a constitutional provision prohibiting a municipal corporation from issuing interest bearing evidences of indebtedness, a note does not bear interest after maturity.⁷⁸ Under a contract provision that temporary notes shall bear interest at a specified rate until bonds are issued, the holder of the notes is entitled to, and only to, interest at the specified rate from the respective dates of the notes until the bonds are issued.⁷⁹

The rate of interest after maturity is generally the same as that before maturity,⁸⁰ but there is

8. RIGHTS, REMEDIES, AND LIABILITIES

a. In General

§ 1956. In General

A holder of municipal bonds takes them subject to the law in force at the time of their issuance, and ordinarily has a right of action against the municipal corporation to require it to live up to the terms of the bonds.

An original or subsequent holder of municipal bonds or securities takes them subject to, and has the right to rely on, the terms of the constitutional and statutory provisions or law under which they were issued, and which were in force and effect at the time of the issuance of the bonds.⁸⁵ The rights and remedies of such a holder are fixed and determined by the terms of the bond,⁸⁶ and by the legislative acts or law relative thereto, at the time the bonds are issued,⁸⁷ and generally such rights and remedies of a bondholder cannot be restricted by the municipal corporation;⁸⁸ nor can they be adversely affected by subsequent legislation;⁸⁹ nor are such rights and remedies affected

Elimination of valueless right

Where bondholders' right to security of delinquent taxes is without value, its elimination as a feature of consideration in a settlement plan authorized by subsequent legislation to relieve pressing financial conditions existing in certain districts does not constitute an "impairment" of the bondholders' contract so as to defeat such legislation.—San Bernardino County v. Way, 117 P.2d 354, 18 Cal.2d 647.

Remedial legislation

Statute providing that, if municipality fails to enforce lien on special assessments, holders of bonds secured thereby may do so in manner provided for foreclosure of mortgages on realty has been held remedial in nature and not to impair obligation of contract, and, hence, applicable to bonds issued prior to enactment thereof.—Gray v. a. In General

Under some provisions, municipal bonds are regarded as general obligations of the municipal corporations, and the municipal corporation as being directly liable on the bonds.

Under the provisions of various municipal bonds, or of the constitution, statute, charter, or ordinance under which they were issued, the bonds are regarded as the direct, general, or absolute obligations of the municipal corporation,⁸ to the extent that the debt limitation is not exceeded,⁹ and the municipality is regarded as being directly liable on the bonds.¹⁰ The bonds, however, do not constitute a lien on any property owned by the municipality,¹¹ even though municipal property is to be acquired or improved by the proceeds of the bond,¹² unless such lien is expressly provided for.¹³ There is such direct or general liability on the municipality, even though there are also specific provisions relative to security or payment, as from a special fund,¹⁴ or where the securities, although payable out of a special fund or tax, are phrased

Improvement certificates guaranteed

Municipality issuing transferable improvement certificates is liable for payment of transferred certificates on their nonpayment by property owners on whose lands they constitute a lien under statute by which city guarantees payment of such certificates, since such statute must be read into certificates.—City of Saratoga v. Johnson, 167 So. 361, 123 Fla. 501.

as general obligations of the municipality;¹⁵ and such specific provisions are deemed to afford merely additional or collateral security for payment.¹⁶

Under such statutes, a municipality may appropriate money to pay its debts out of other and different sources of revenue than those particularly pledged in its bonds,¹⁷ and, accordingly, in case of a deficit in the special fund, the municipality may, in its discretion, provide for payment out of its general funds;¹⁸ but, where the bondholder's remedy, in case of nonpayment, is confined to the enforcement of the special assessments, the municipality may not enact an ordinance establishing a revolving fund for the payment of defaulted local improvement bonds.¹⁹ Since special assessment bonds are not negotiable, as discussed supra § 1950, holders or purchasers thereof have the same, and no greater, rights than the person to whom they were issued.²⁰ Where a bond contains a general obligation to pay, it cannot be converted into a promise to pay from a particular fund, except on the plainest grounds of construction.²¹

b. Payable from Special Tax or Fund

- (1) In general
- (2) Liability for negligence or delinquency
- (3) Municipal corporation as agent or trustee

(1) In General

A bond which is made payable only out of a special tax or fund is not a general obligation of the municipal corporation, but is payable only out of funds derived from special assessments or other specified resources.

Where, under the provisions of the bonds or statutes relating thereto, the bonds or other securities are to be paid exclusively out of a special fund derived from special assessments or other specified sources, there is no general or primary obligation or liability on the part of the municipal corporation in respect thereof,²² and the rights and liabilities

Payment out of general funds not harmful

Where city apparently recognizing indebtedness from paving improvements as a general liability, when pressed by certain bondholders, paid out sufficient funds out of its general funds to leave a balance of assessments and the remaining and uncollected assessments were adequate to discharge the balance of the unpaid bonds, city was not harmed by being required to pay the holder of unpaid bonds out of its general

Unauthorized issuance of bonds

Bonds, payable from a special fund, are not rendered a primary obligation of the city, because of a statute authorizing the city to issue the bonds, where no election is held to authorize their issuance as required by statute.—Gray v. City of Santa Fe, C.C.A.N.M., 89 F.2d 406—City of McLaughlin, S. D., v. Turgeon, C.C.A.S.D., 75 F.2d 402.

Effect of validating statute

A statute validating as debts of municipality municipal public improvement bonds payable only out of benefit assessments is unconstitutional, and does not obligate city to pay street improvement bonds redeemable only out of special assessments, particularly where city was under no moral obligation to contractor or to bondholders.—Harbold v. City of Reading, 49 A.2d 817, 355 Pa. 253.

Mont.—Stanley v. Jeffries, 284 P. 184, 86 Mont. 114, 70 A.L.R. 166.

Rights and obligations

The only rights and only obligations conferred or imposed by such provisions are the rights of bondholders to proceed against city, and obligation of city to maintain fund out of which city undertook to satisfy obligation.—Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Pontarelli, C.C. A.7, 97 F.2d 793.

The words "local improvement bonds," as used in statute authorizing establishment by municipalities of a fund to guarantee payment of their local improvement bonds, refers not only to bonds issued to pay for physical improvements, but also includes bonds issued to pay for local improvements made through eminent domain proceedings; and the fact that the cost of eminent domain proceeding and boundaries of district may not be known when proceeding is ordered does not establish that statute providing for local improvement guaranty funds applies only to bonds issued to pay for physical improvements, and not to bonds issued in eminent domain proceeding.—State ex rel. This rule applies notwithstanding the bonds provide that the city guarantees that the special assessments will provide sufficient revenue to retire the bonds, where the guaranty is ultra vires and void, and even as against an alleged bona fide purchaser for value.—City of McLaughlin, S. 28. Ill.—Simpson v. City of High-

municipality had power to issue the bonds under the statute.²⁹ Under such statutes, also, a municipality is liable for the payment of improvement bonds only to the extent of moneys actually collected and accumulated by it from assessments made against property benefited by the improvement;³⁰ and, under the express provisions of some bonds, the city is liable only for the amount collected on the assessments and as fast as collected,³¹ in the absence of a request by the bondholder that the city enforce assessments, and the giving of security for costs.³² Each annual installment of improvement assessments belongs to the series of bonds next falling due, and should be paid out only to the holders of bonds of such next succeeding period.³³ This does not mean that each installment of an assessment must be applied, when collected, to the payment of the corresponding bond;³⁴ but an assessment paid by one property owner cannot be diverted to the payment of principal or interest due from other property owners who are delinquent.³⁵ Under a statute requiring the bonds to show from which installment of the assessment they are payable, and authorizing payments against one installment from the surplus on other installments, bondholders have the right to insist that no other bonds be issued against installments from which their bonds are payable.³⁶

Application to principal and interest. The term "bonds," as used in a provision for the application of money collected from assessments to the payment of bonds, includes the obligation to pay interest as embodied in the bonds, and, therefore, all money collected from improvement assessments should be paid into one fund, out of which interest coupons should be paid first,³⁷ and any excess applied to the redemption of outstanding bonds.³⁸

Liability in rem. The liability on bonds payable out of special assessments or funds is a liability in rem against the property, and not a liability in personam.³⁹

(2) Liability for Negligence or Delinquency

By the weight of authority, the municipal corporation may be liable to bondholders for losses arising from negligence or delinquency, on the part of the municipal officers or agents, in failing to levy, collect, and apply adequate assessments, or to preserve and enforce the lien thereof.

Under some statutes providing for municipal bonds payable out of a special tax or fund, there is no liability,⁴⁰ direct or indirect,⁴¹ ex contractu or ex delicto,⁴² on the part of the municipal corporation for nonpayment of the bonds or interest thereon, even where there is negligence on the part of municipal officers in failing to levy and collect valid and adequate assessments,⁴³ or where there is a diversion of the funds collected.⁴⁴

By the great weight of authority, however, while the special fund raised by assessment,⁴⁵ rather than the general funds of the municipality, is primarily liable for the payment of the bonds, if the municipality, through its officers and agents, is guilty of negligence or delinquency in failing or refusing to levy, collect, and apply valid and adequate assessments, or to preserve and enforce the lien thereof, in breach of its duty or contract, it is directly liable to the bondholders for the losses or damages thereby sustained,⁴⁶ even though it has received no benefit from the improvement for which the bonds were issued,⁴⁷ and it is also liable for losses arising from a diversion, misappropriation, improper application of, or failure to pay over, the fund collected,⁴⁸ and for interest on the amount

The municipal officers are deemed to act in the premises, not as representatives of the municipality, but as special agents or instrumentalities to accomplish a public end.—Moore v. City of Nampa, C.C.A.Idaho, 18 F.2d 860, affirmed 48 S.Ct. 340, 276 U.S. 536, 72 L.Ed. 688.

(2) For insufficiency of assessment contrary to recital in bond, where delinquent installments of assessment, interest, and penalties exceeded aggregate of outstanding municipal paving bonds and interest thereon—City of Winner, S. D. v. Kelley, supra.

(3) For lack of diligence in collection of assessments, where city had acquired property which had been sold for delinquent special assessments, in the interest of the holders of bonds.—Bankers Life Co. v. City of Emmetsburg, 278 N.W. 311, 224 Iowa 1287.

(4) For failure to limit refunding issue to amount of unpaid special assessments as required by statute, notwithstanding an alleged loss in lien in amount of delinquent assessments resulting from county treasurer's failure to bring forward the amount of delinquent assessments on the tax lists, in absence of showing that injury resulted to the bondholders therefrom.—*Bankers Life Co. v. thereby lost or diverted,⁴⁹ at the statutory rate from the date of the maturity of the bonds to the date of the accounting by which they are sought to be collected.⁵⁰ This, however, does not prevent the temporary use of idle bond funds, to pay principal and interest on other bonds, where such funds are to be seasonably repaid on the collection of taxes;⁵¹ and, under some statutes, if a loan is made by the city to a special improvement district fund from a revolving fund, the latter fund has a lien therefor on all unpaid assessments and moneys thereafter coming into the district fund,⁵² and accordingly the security of the revolving fund bondholders is not in any way impaired.⁵³

for negligence or delinquency does not arise for a mere inconsequential irregularity,⁵⁴ or where the acts complained of do not constitute a breach of duty owed by the municipality to the bondholder.⁵⁵ A municipality may be held liable to bondholders for the loss or damage sustained by reason of its negligence or breach of duty, in failing to segregate moneys collected from special assessments to corresponding bond issues,⁵⁶ in failing to redeem bonds when there were sufficient available funds to do so,⁵⁷ in not making the security for the satisfaction of the bonds available for their payment,⁵⁸ or in failing to pay the bonds in their numerical order, causing a depletion in the fund out of which bonds are payable,⁵⁹ even though the bonds were

Restoration of funds transferred from general fund

Where a city transfers funds from a general fund to an improvement fund to prevent default in the payment of installments on improvement bonds, special assessment for which had not been collected, and the money is not restored to the general fund until a day before the maturity of the remaining unpaid bonds, the amount of which exceeds the amount remaining in the improvement fund, unpaid bondholders are entitled to recover from the city the amount due on the bonds after exhausting the improvement fund, since the city's failure to restore the loan promptly led the bondholders to believe that additional assessments were not necessary to pay the bonds, and that they need not take other steps to protect their interests.—Wheeler v. City of Blackfoot, 45 P.2d 298, 55 Idaho 599.

Acting through agent

The fact that the municipality acted through agent, in collecting special assessment for municipal improvement bonds and in placing amount collected in special fund for payment of bonds, did not relieve municipality from liability for failure to pay bonds out of special fund.—Smith v. Boise City, D.C.Idaho, 18 F.Supp. 385.

Excessive assessment

A city is not liable to holders of refunding street improvement bonds and of refunding sewer bonds because of alleged assessment of properties in excess of actual value, notwithstanding representation in bonds that all things had been done as required by law, since representation was merely a representation that the assessments had been fixed by the city council exercising its own judgment as to values, as authorized by statute, and equity had no authority to review the exercise of that discretion in absence of fraud.—Bankers Life Co. v. issued without being submitted to the vote of the electors of the municipality.⁶⁰ It has been held, however, that the municipality is not liable for a failure to levy an amount sufficient to take care of interest,⁶¹ or for applying to the payment of interest funds which had been collected for the payment of principal.⁶²

Nature and extent of liability. The nature and extent of the municipality's liability to the bondholders for loss or damage sustained by reason of its negligence or delinquency with respect to the special assessment funds depend on the provisions of the particular statute.⁶³ Under a statute which gives a bondholder the right to enforce the special assessment, if the municipality should fail or refuse to do so, the liability of the municipality is contingent on, and subject to, the corresponding duty of the bondholder to exhaust all remedies available to him,⁶⁴ such as to compel the municipality by mandamus to perform its express or statutory duty, and enforce collection,⁶⁵ or to enforce collection of assessments by a suit to foreclose liens in his own behalf,⁶⁶ and, accordingly, although there may be circumstances under which the municipality may be held liable as for a breach of duty or contract,⁶⁷ the municipality's mere failure or refusal to enforce the collection of the assessments, from which the bonds are to be paid, generally does not render it liable to the owners of the bonds,⁶⁸ even though the right of enforcement may thereby become barred by limitation,⁶⁹ and notwithstanding the city has continued to pay interest on the bonds after many assessments have become delinquent.⁷⁰

Under other statutes, the municipality is liable for its neglect or refusal to collect assessments only when the bondholder is unable to make the collection, as he is authorized by statute to do;⁷¹ and moreover it has been held that the municipality should not be held guilty of neglect or refusal to do its duty, in this connection, until it has been given an opportunity to make a reassessment, if a valid one can be made.⁷² Under still other statutes, if the municipality neglects or refuses to do all things necessary to levy the special assessments or enforce the payment thereof, it becomes primarily liable to pay the bonds.⁷³ Under some statutes, the municipality is under an implied contractual obligation to exercise diligence in levying and collecting the special assessments, and is liable to the bondholders for a breach of such obligation,⁷⁴ as where it fails to avail itself of all reasonable

Notice to bondholders

Where collection of assessments for sewer improvement was barred by statute of limitations, city could not be held liable to bondholders for failure, to enforce collection of assessments, since bondholders were required to know that which was being done or left undone by city treasurer and were afforded ample remedies under the law, but within statute of limitations, to compel him to follow mandate of law in enforcement of assessments levied.—Read v. measures to collect the assessments or enforce the assessment lien,⁷⁵ unless such measures would probably have been futile because of the financial condition of the nonpaying abutting property owners.⁷⁶

Duty of municipality to create, collect, and apply special funds. Under some statutes, a municipality which has issued, or may thereafter issue, any special improvement bonds, is mandatorily required to create a fund for the purpose of guaranteeing the payment of the bonds and interest thereon;⁷⁷ and to keep taxes collected from property owners in a separate fund for the payment of the bonds.⁷⁸ Obligations or duties imposed on the municipality by the bonds, or by the statute or ordinance under which they were issued, to levy and collect special assessments, or to set apart money from other specified sources, and to make application thereof to the payment of the bonds or interest thereon, should be performed,⁷⁹ for the benefit of all holders of bonds and interest coupons as a class,⁸⁰ and, where the city officials fulfill their duties in connection with the special assessments, the city is relieved from liability to the holder of bonds payable from such assessments,⁸¹ even though there is a deficien-

The duty of paying the bonds by special assessments is discharged only where the assessments are collected in season,⁸³ or, as has been held, where the special assessments are not collected in season, the city's statutory duty of paying the bonds is not fulfilled until a special additional tax is levied to make up the deficiency.⁸⁴ A provision pledging the city's full faith and credit to full performance of all its duties including the collection of special assessments for the payment of principal and interest places on the city the burden of exercising due care and diligence to collect assessments levied,⁸⁵ notwithstanding the city is not an insurer or guarantor of payment.⁸⁶ A bondholder may assume that the municipality will comply with such duty,⁸⁷ and the municipality may be held liable on the bonds although, under the ordinance, the city auditor is required to collect assessments, since the municipality must usually act through some agency.⁸⁸

Proration. The loss or damage for which the municipality is held liable should be prorated among all the bondholders as their interests may appear.⁸⁹

Trust funds

U.S.—City of Jacksonville v. Bank-

(3) Municipal Corporation as Agent or Trustee

The municipal corporation is generally regarded as an agent or trustee in charge of the special funds, as trust funds, for the benefit of the bondholders, and is charged with all the duties of such a fiduciary.

According to some authorities, where a city has issued improvement bonds and pledged special assessments or funds therefor, the city is not a guarantor of the bonds,⁹⁰ but, although there is authority to the contrary,⁹¹ a municipal corporation, through its officers, has been held merely an agent⁹² or trustee of the special funds for the benefit of the bondholders,⁹³ since the funds collected belong to the bondholders, and not to the municipality;⁹⁴ and the municipality is charged with all the duties of such a fiduciary, including, under some statutes, the obligations to spread the assessment, collect it, and make disbursements thereof, in conformity with the statute,⁹⁵ as well as never to use its position, as agent or trustee, to profit directly or indirectly by the execution of its powers, actual or assumed, without the consent of its principal, the bondholders.⁹⁶ The trust has also been held to be for the benefit of the municipality and taxpayers having a beneficial interest in the funds collected.⁹⁷

Any funds collected by the municipality applicable to the payment of the bonds and vouchers, together with interest earned on such funds,⁹⁸ even though the rate of interest, under the statute, exceeds the rate of interest which the bonds bear,⁹⁹ are trust funds, for which the municipality must account, for the benefit of the holders of bonds issued against such funds,¹ including the payment of interest on the bonds.² This trust fund doctrine, however, has been held not to apply to any funds which have not been collected,³ except to the extent that unpaid assessments are made trust funds by statute.⁴ It has also been held that the municipality is not liable for collected assessments with which the treasurer has absconded, on the theory that he is an agent for whose default the municipality is liable;⁵ and that, where the officers of the city, in levying and collecting the assessments, are not acting as agents of the city, but as special agents to accomplish a public end, the city is not chargeable with their negligence.⁶ Under some statutes, the municipality assumes no obligation, except that it stands as a trustee obligated to collect the installments and interest from the property owners,⁷ and no liability attaches to it if such owner fails to pay interest,⁸ and, if for any reason a full collection of an installment or interest is not made, the deficiency must fall on the bondholders and not on the municipality.⁹

Relation as contractual. Under some statutes, the relation between the municipality and the bondholders with respect to a sinking fund and special assessment deficiency fund is contractual, and is not a relation of trust, but that of debtor only,¹⁰ and the holders of past-due bonds are not entitled to an accounting by the city for amounts payable into such funds.¹¹ Where, as authorized by the statute, a property owner signs a waiver and secures the right to pay the assessments in deferred payments, and then elects to pay the entire assessment, the lien on the property is to that extent discharged, as discussed supra § 1569, and the city becomes the principal obligor on the bond to the extent of payments of assessments received by it,¹² notwithstanding a misappropriation or misapplication of the amounts collected by its officers,¹³ as where by error the funds are misapplied to the payment of bonds other than the correct ones;¹⁴ and, if prepaid assessments are lost or frozen in closed banks, the city must bear the loss rather than the bondholders.¹⁵

C. Taxation

The right of a bondholder to have taxes levied, as directed by law, for the payment of the bonds is a contractual right which cannot be affected by subsequent legislation.

and issuing bonds to be paid by the municipality from its tax collected fund, a direct contractual relationship arises between the municipal corporation and a bondholder,¹⁶ and, where there is a valid law, at the time of their issuance, directing a tax to be levied for their payment, the law for the tax becomes a part of the contract,¹⁷ and a failure to levy sufficient special taxes to cover principal and accrued interest constitutes a breach of such obligation.¹⁸ The right conferred on the bondholders thereby cannot be impaired by subsequent legislation¹⁹ or even by a subsequent constitutional provision.²⁰ The fact that the bonds have been reduced to judgment does not affect the bondholders' right to have the municipal officials levy a tax on lands for the purpose of paying the judgment.²¹ While a limitation on the taxing power of the municipality is binding both on the municipality²² and a purchaser or holder of its bonds,²³ the bondholder is entitled to insist on the full and proper exercise of the taxing power within the limitation.²⁴

A promise to pay contained in municipal bonds "without relief from the valuation or appraisal laws of the state" is a mere waiver by the debtor of the benefit of valuation or appraisal in case the obligation shall be enforced by execution at law,²⁵ and cannot be construed to require levies for payment of the bonds to be made on the same valuation that existed in the municipality when the bonds were issued.²⁶ A tax levied and collected as required by law to pay the interest²⁷ or the principal²⁸ of specific bonds cannot be diverted to other purposes. If the municipality fails to collect a tax for a special fund from which local improvements are payable, the municipality is not liable to pay the bonds from its general fund;²⁹ nor is it liable because the special taxes are insufficient to pay the bonds, as a result of the shrinkage in the market value of real estate.³⁰

d. Revenue from Utility

Under some statutes, the special net revenue derived from the operation of a revenue-producing utility must be applied to the payment of principal and interest on bonds issued in aid of such utility.

In the absence of a constitutional or statutory provision to the contrary, a municipal corporation may voluntarily use unencumbered funds derived from any source to pay revenue bonds issued for special purposes;³¹ and a statute authorizing a sale of bonds by a utility district and a tax levy for the payment thereof does not authorize an issuance of bonds to be paid out of income derived from property purchased with the proceeds of the bond issue.³² However, under statutes authorizing a municipality to issue bonds or other securities in aid of the construction and operation of various public utilities or enterprises, as discussed supra §§ 1907, 1908, and authorizing the municipality to pledge future net income or revenue from the operation of such utility or enterprise to the payment of the bonded indebtedness,³³ the special net revenue or income derived from the operation of such a revenue-producing utility or enterprise must be applied to the payment of principal and interest on the bonds or securities so issued,³⁴ and may not be diverted to other utilities or purposes,³⁵ except to another utility or purpose with which the revenue-producing utility is intimately connected and operated.³⁶ The object of a statute authorizing such revenue bonds or securities for a particular utility is that a portion of the income be set aside for the bonds and interest only after the expenses of the operation and maintenance of the utility are taken care of;³⁷ and the obligations of such bonds or securities may be paid only from the revenues of such public utilities,³⁸ and do not constitute debts against, or general obligations of, the municipality to be enforced by, or paid from, taxes assessed against general property,³⁹ or from other general funds or revenues of the city.⁴⁰ An essential prerequisite to the practical validity or enforcement of such bonds secured by an encumbrance of the revenue of a system is the ownership of the system by the municipality issuing the bonds.⁴¹

A proposed issuance of bonds payable solely from the revenues of the utility is not subject to the objection that the city might in the future feed the special fund from the general revenues of the city,⁴² or to the objection that the city would be estopped from denying general liability to pay the bonds by its receipt of the property,⁴³ or to the objection that the city did not, before entering into the contract, advertise for bids or budget the outlay in the annual budget.⁴⁴ A trust deed covering a municipal utility and its revenues and securing bonds will not be construed to present irreconcilable and mutually destructive provisions, unless no other interpretation is possible;⁴⁵ but, if such a trust deed attempts to impose liability on the city beyond that expressed in the ordinance providing for the utility, it is void.⁴⁶ A pledge of utility revenues to secure certificates issued to defray the cost of a utility improvement is superior to pledges and liens on the net revenues of the utility system contained in refunding and original general obligation bonds theretofore issued by the city.⁴⁷

e. Anticipation Warrants or Notes

An "anticipation warrant," which is an assignment of tax money if and when collected, creates no debt or obligation on the municipal corporation, except to apply the taxes, when collected, to the payment of the warrant.

An "anticipation warrant," or as it is sometimes called a "tax anticipation warrant," is an assignment of tax money if and when collected;⁴⁸ an assignment of tax money, which directs the treasurer to pay the holder of the warrant out of funds collected from the anticipated tax levy, when collected,⁴⁹ and which, in the alternative, may be presented to the tax collector in full discharge of taxes.⁵⁰ It creates no general debt or obligation on the part of the municipal corporation to pay the warrant to the holder thereof,⁵¹ and discharges the municipality from all liability on account of the services or obligation for which the warrant was drawn and accepted.⁵² However, such a warrant constitutes a charge or lien against the particular fund or taxes out of which it is payable,⁵³ and there is an obligation or duty on the municipality to apply the taxes, when collected, to the payment of the warrant;⁵⁴ and, accordingly, if the municipality disregards its duty to apply collected taxes to the payment of the warrant and uses the money for other purposes, it creates an obligation on itself to make the warrant holders whole, and, therefore, is liable to such holders for the funds diverted.⁵⁵

Continuing nature of liability

A supposed liability originating in tax anticipation warrant continues to be based on such warrant in whatever form the claim may thereafter assume, and invalidity of original claim cannot be avoided merely by changing form in which it is presented in an effort to conceal its identity.—Pratt v. Board of Education of Dist. No. 61, Kankakee County, 63 N.E.2d 275, 326 Ill.App. 610.

Taxes for the year

Tax anticipation warrants issued by city and interest thereon are to be paid only when taxes for the year in which the warrants are drawn are collected.—People ex rel. Gill v. Schiek, 14 N.E.2d 223, 368 Ill. 353.

The purchaser or holder of such a warrant must look solely to the specific tax assigned for the payment of his warrant⁵⁶ and interest thereon;⁵⁷ and, accordingly, he must depend solely on the collection of taxes from the previous levy as anticipated,⁵⁸ and must rely solely on the ability and fidelity of the revenue officials in collecting the taxes and paying the money mentioned in the warrant.⁵⁹

Anticipation notes. An "anticipation note" is an obligation payable out of a particular fund.⁶⁰ Under some statutes, the funds to pay an anticipatory note are appropriated as a matter of law at the next succeeding semiannual settlement,⁶¹ and the notes must be retired in strict conformity with the statute and charter provisions under which they were issued;⁶² and, if the notes are permitted to run past two semiannual settlements without collection and appropriated funds have been expended, no power exists to make another appropriation or to provide for the collection of such a note.⁶³

§ 1958. Where Holder Is Municipal Officer

Under some statutes a municipal officer may not purchase a bond of the municipal corporation at less than its face value.

Under some statutes, if a bond of a municipal corporation is purchased by an officer thereof at less than its face value, it shall be forfeited to the municipal corporation;⁶⁴ but such a statute does not apply where, under an agreement between a city and the holder of its bonds, they are assigned for less than their face value to trustees appointed by, and in behalf of, the city,⁶⁵ even though some of such trustees are members of the common council,⁶⁶ and have contributed to a fund for the payment of the bonds a sum equal to their proportion of taxes necessary to pay them.⁶⁷

A municipal corporation ordinarily is not liable, on a void negotiable bond issued by it, for the consideration paid for the bond by a purchaser, although under some circumstances it may be held liable on a quantum meruit.

A municipal corporation is not liable on the instruments themselves for the consideration received for its negotiable bonds, which are void for all purposes,⁶⁸ and such bonds can never become valid and collectable in the hands of a purchaser.⁶⁹ Moreover, where such bonds are issued by a municipal corporation without authority of law and are void as negotiable instruments, an action cannot be maintained on them as nonnegotiable instruments;⁷⁰ but it has been held that an action may be maintained on them as evidences of debt.⁷¹ A purchaser with notice of the invalidity of bonds cannot maintain their validity under an act to which they do not refer, as valid on their face under such act, if such act was not complied with and the bonds were actually invalid under it.⁷² The fact that money has been collected for the purpose of paying illegal bonds will not afford the holder of the bonds the right to have such funds paid over to him where he has no valid claim against the city.⁷³

Exchanging valid for invalid securities. Where the holder of valid bonds surrenders them to the municipality and receives in exchange therefor other bonds which the municipality had not the lawful right to issue, he is not divested of his title to the bonds surrendered⁷⁴ and may maintain an action on them after they mature.⁷⁵

Value received. The purchaser of an invalid bond may recover on the theory of an implied contract or quantum meruit, where the municipality has received some benefit from the transaction,⁷⁶ unless, under the circumstances, there is no privity between the purchaser and the municipality.⁷⁷

b. Rescission

A purchaser of municipal bonds which prove to be invalid may rescind the contract of purchase.

A person who purchases from a city bonds which prove to be invalid has the right to rescind the contract of purchase.⁷⁸ As respects the holder's right to rescind the contract on the ground of fraud, the controlling factor is not what the technical meaning of the term used in making representations might be, but what effect the use thereof had on the buyer's mind,⁷⁹ and, where the action to rescind covers several transactions extending over a number of years and many misrepresentations are charged, all the surrounding facts and circumstances should be considered in determining whether the misrepresentations are actionable.⁸⁰

c. Recovery of Money Paid or Received

- (1) In general
- (2) Following specific funds

(1) In General

Money paid or received for invalid municipal bonds or securities may be recovered back from the municipal corporation by the purchaser or holder of such bonds or securities.

The debt which invalid municipal bonds are given to pay,⁸¹ or the money received by a municipal corporation for its invalid bonds or other securities⁸² may be recovered from it by the purchaser of the securities,⁸³ on a promise implied by law,⁸⁴ where the money remains in the treasury or under the control of the municipality,⁸⁵ and the purpose of the loan was lawful and the creation of the debt was not prohibited by law.⁸⁶ Such money, however, cannot be recovered where the loan itself was in excess of the authority of the municipality to create a debt,⁸⁷ or where the municipal corporation has never received the benefit of the money,⁸⁸ or where the purchaser from the municipality had knowledge of its want of authority to issue the bonds for a prohibited purpose,⁸⁹ since it is essential that the municipality shall have received a benefit in the shape of money paid to it or property delivered into its actual possession under such circumstances that had no express contract been attempted a contract might have been implied.⁹⁰ According to some authorities the transfer of invalid municipal bonds or other securities carries with it the right to recover from the municipal corporation the money paid to it for them,⁹¹ but there is authority to the contrary where there is no privity between the purchaser and the municipality.⁹² It has also been held that a purchaser of invalid municipal bonds must return or offer to return the bonds before he may recover back the purchase money paid by him,⁹³ but as to this there is authority to the contrary.⁹⁴

Statutory power to repay. Under some statutes, a municipality is expressly empowered to repay the amount received from a purchaser of invalid bonds,⁹⁵ and may make such a repayment, notwithstanding a judgment is given for the municipality in the bondholder's action for money received, because of the action being barred by the statute of limitations.⁹⁶

(2) Following Specific Funds

Money paid for invalid bonds may be followed in rem into the thing bought with it, if it can be clearly identified and traced into the fund or other property which represents the money.

The money paid for invalid bonds may be followed in rem into the thing bought with it;⁹⁷ but, where it is sought in equity to pursue the money, complainants must clearly identify the money or the fund, or other property which represents the money, in such a manner that it can be reclaimed and delivered without taking other property with it⁹⁸ or injuring other persons⁹⁹ or interfering with others' rights.¹ It has been held that money paid for bonds which are not issued in accordance with paramount law, and, therefore, are illegal and void, does not raise a trust in favor of the purchaser,² even though the money is used for an authorized municipal purpose.³

particular transaction,⁴ such as between a municipal corporation which has issued new bonds for bonds which had been lost, and a bank which has loaned money on the original bonds,⁵ or with respect to the territorial limits of the municipality as affecting a landowner's liability on municipal bonds.⁶ Under some statutes, if a municipality avails itself of the privilege of incurring a bonded indebtedness for the purpose of investing the proceeds in its own bonds or in those of an improvement district within the municipality, it is required to collect the principal and interest on improvement bonds so acquired and not sold by it, as provided by the statute under which the improvement bonds were issued,⁷ and this includes the enforcement of assessments against the property and the levy and collection of a tax on assessable property for each delinquent district.⁸

The state is not obligated on a municipal bond,⁹ even though the municipality is directed by statute to incur debts pursuant to the exercise of essential governmental powers of the state.¹⁰

As between guarantor and holders of securities. Where a coupon promising to pay a certain sum as interest on a municipal bond designated by a specified number, and stating that it is due on a certain day, is stolen after such day, a subsequent innocent holder of the coupon is not the lawful owner,¹¹ and cannot maintain an action thereon against the state as a guarantor.¹²

As between municipality and former holders of securities. Where a railroad company has wrongfully and without authority of law procured the issuance of municipal aid bonds and has negotiated them, and the holders have by judicial proceedings fixed the liability of the municipality on such bonds, the municipality has a right of action against the railroad company for the amount of the bonds with interest;¹³ and an officer of a railroad company who sells to bona fide purchasers municipal bonds issued in aid of the company, which he knows to be invalid in the hands of the company, is liable to the municipality for the value of such bonds.¹⁴

As between prior and present holders. The former holder of nonnegotiable municipal bonds from whom they were stolen is entitled to the bonds as against a subsequent holder in due course.¹⁵ When, however, a negotiable municipal bond, after issuance, is stolen from the owner, and sold or pledged before maturity to a person who acts in good faith, such person has a good title as against the former owner,¹⁶ notwithstanding the number of the bond has been altered by the thief.¹⁷ There is no implied warranty or guaranty on the sale of municipal bonds by a holder thereof,¹⁸ and where, on a sale of such bonds, their invalidity not having been determined, the seller stated that he believed the bonds were valid, and the buyer, after notice that the town claimed that the bonds were invalid, sued the town for the value thereof, and their invalidity was determined, the buyer cannot recover the price on the ground of false representations by the seller as to their validity.¹⁹

As between prospective holders of securities. Time is held not to be of the essence of a contract by a person to sell municipal bonds to be received by him in the future in payment of work done for the municipality.²⁰

As between municipality and property owners. Under some statutes or ordinances, the entire obligation of an improvement bond is the obligation of the municipality, and a property owner cannot be held liable for the payment of the bond.²¹ On the other hand, as between the municipality and a taxpayer, the municipality may place the ultimate burden of paying for a bond issue on those specially benefited.²² Where a city which has issued street improvement bonds equaling the amount of street assessments, but constituting obligations only on the part of the city, subsequently refunds the bonds at a rate of interest lower than that paid by the property owners on the unpaid installments of their assessments, it is not bound to account to them for the difference in interest.²³ Where landowners, liable for a street assessment, contract with the city commissioner, acting for the landowner's accommodation, to purchase the street assessment bond for a price not to exceed a specified maximum, and pays such maximum without knowledge that the city had purchased the bond for a smaller price, or that there was accrued interest thereon, the landowners are entitled to the proceeds of the bond,²⁴ and, therefore, as against the city, are entitled to the excess paid plus accrued interest, retained by the city in the street fund.²⁵

Trustee. An original trustee named in a pledge or mortgage of a municipal district securing bonds is no longer capable of acting if he becomes insolvent;²⁶ and, where the provisions of the pledge or mortgage provide that the bondholders shall have the right to appoint a successor on the insolvency of the original trustee, such right of appointment is absolute,²⁷ and it is the duty of the court to give full effect to such contract rights of the bondholders.²⁸

b. Bona Fide Purchasers and Purchasers Therefrom

§ 1962. Who Are Bona Fide Purchasers in General

One who purchases negotiable municipal bonds or other securities for value, before maturity, and without notice of any illegality or defense which would defeat recovery thereon, is a bona fide holder.

One who is a purchaser for value, before maturity, and without notice, actual or constructive, of any illegality or defense which would defeat a recovery on a negotiable municipal bond is a bona fide holder,²⁹ even though he took a guaranty from the seller;³⁰ and his status as a bona fide purchaser is unaffected by the fact that he acquired the bonds from one who had unlawfully obtained them,³¹ or that they were not sold or disposed of by the municipal corporation but were transferred by a municipal officer for his own purposes,³² or by a bondbroker to whom the bonds were intrusted for the purpose of registration.³³ Where stock certificates are not negotiable, an assignee may not recover thereon on the theory that he is a bona fide holder for value without notice of any infirmity of title in the person from whom he received them.³⁴

Bonds stolen before issuance. A municipality is not liable to a bona fide purchaser for the value of bonds stolen and put on the market before they were issued by the municipal officers.³⁵

Purchase directly from municipality. Where a municipality sells its bonds in the open market, the right and title of the first purchaser directly from the municipality is as perfectly and fully enforced and protected as though he were a third person buying the bonds in a subsequent market sale.³⁶

§ 1963. Purchasers from Bona Fide Holders

One who purchases or acquires negotiable municipal bonds or securities from a holder in due course succeeds to all the rights of his transferor.

One who is a holder in due course may transfer his title, standing, and right to protection to another.³⁷ The rights of a transferee of a bona fide purchaser for value are the same whether the assignment or transfer is made before or after maturity,³⁸ whether or not the transferee has knowledge or notice of equities or defenses,³⁹ and whether or not a consideration is paid therefor;⁴⁰ but a person who purchases bonds payable to bearer and undorsed, having notice of defenses to the bonds, cannot claim the right of a bona fide holder on the ground that his vendor was a bona fide holder, in the absence of proof that his vendor was not the original payee.⁴¹ In order to be entitled to the protection of an innocent purchaser for value, one who purchases bonds after maturity must have purchased them from one who took them before maturity for value and without notice of any illegality or defense.⁴²

Where bonds are repurchased by a former holder

in due course after sale to an innocent purchaser, he acquires the rights of his vendee as innocent purchaser even though he has learned that the bonds originally were stolen, where he has not been party to any fraud or illegality.⁴³

§ 1964. Consideration for Transfer

While a bona fide purchaser must have purchased for value, he need not have paid the par or face value for the security.

While, in order to constitute one a bona fide purchaser of a municipal bond he must have paid value therefor,⁴⁴ it is not essential that he shall have paid the par or face value thereof;⁴⁵ and, although he has paid less than par value, he is not restricted in his claim on the bond to the amount paid,⁴⁶ but may enforce the bond for its par value.⁴⁷ One who purchases on credit, and who has not paid the purchase price, cannot be considered a purchaser for value so as to entitle him to protection as a bona fide holder.⁴⁸ If, however, at the time of purchase he gives his negotiable promissory notes payable at different times for the purchase price, this entitles him to claim as a purchaser for value,⁴⁹ although the notes have not matured or been paid.⁵⁰ A person who receives a municipal bond in payment of a preexisting debt,⁵¹ or in payment for services rendered and to be rendered, and which are in fact rendered,⁵² is a holder for value. Also, the holder of municipal bonds as collateral security may be entitled to protection as a bona fide holder,⁵³ as where he has surrendered other collateral therefor,⁵⁴ but where a railroad company pledges mu-

municipal aid bonds issued to it, giving the pledgee authority to sell them, such pledgee, although he would be protected to the amount of his advances to secure which the bonds were pledged,⁵⁵ is not such a bona fide holder as to entitle his transferee to recover on the bonds, where they are invalid.⁵⁶

§ 1965. Time of Purchase

A transferee after maturity takes municipal securities subject to all defenses against his transferor to which they were subject at the time of the transfer.

A transferee after maturity takes municipal securities subject to all defenses against his transferor to which they were subject at the time of the transfer.⁵⁷ Where a bond is purchased before maturity, the fact that unpaid and overdue coupons are attached does not render the whole bond dishonored, so as to deprive the purchaser of the character of a holder in due course,⁵⁸ but as to the past-due coupons the transferee takes them subject to existing defenses.⁵⁹ The rights of a purchaser or transferee after maturity from a holder in due course are discussed supra § 1963.

Purchasers of nonnegotiable special assessment bonds at a discount after the bonds were overdue, without making inquiry as to collections made and disbursement thereof and without ascertaining whether all payments had been made on the bonds to be purchased, have been held not to be innocent purchasers for value.⁶⁰

Bonds of same series

Where refunding bonds were exchanged for outstanding original bonds, and the exchange agent betrayed his trust and pledged the original bonds as collateral to his own obligations, but all bonds showed on their face that they were each one of a series issued at the same time for same consideration and purpose and secured by same instrument, the fact that some of the bonds were past maturity and unpaid was sufficient to put the transferees on notice of defenses to the bonds and the transferees were not holders in due course, and were not in a position to raise question of validity of the refunding bonds.—*First Nat. a. In General

In order to be a bona fide purchaser or holder, one must not have had notice, before or at the time of purchase, of any matters rendering the municipal bond or other security invalid.

In order to entitle a holder of municipal bonds to protection as a bona fide holder, it is essential that he should not have had notice,⁶¹ either at the time of the contract⁶² or at the time of the payment of the price,⁶³ of matters rendering the bonds invalid. While a purchaser who willfully closes his ears to information⁶⁴ or refuses to make inquiry when circumstances of grave suspicion imperatively demand it⁶⁵ is not entitled to protection, the test as to whether a person, at the time of purchasing municipal bonds, had notice of facts and circumstances requiring inquiry, is not whether the facts were such as would excite the suspicion of an ordinarily careful and prudent man⁶⁶ or would naturally and reasonably lead him to make inquiry,⁶⁷ but whether the facts were such as to make it bad faith not to make inquiry.⁶⁸ A holder or purchaser of municipal bonds or notes is chargeable with knowledge of matters of law,⁶⁹ but he is not required to examine further than the act of the legislature authorizing the issue and the recitals of the bond, when no such duty is imposed by constitution or statute.⁷⁰ While a holder in due course of bonds issued under proper authority is not charged with knowledge of any collateral facts tending to invalidate the bonds in the hands of a purchaser with notice,⁷¹ where the bonds are payable out of a special tax or assessment, he is charged with knowledge of matters relating to payment.⁷² One who has exercised more than reasonable diligence in inquiring relative to future payments is a bona fide purchaser where, through inaccurate city records, he could not discover the facts as to payment.⁷³ A purchaser of negotiable municipal bonds is not affected with constructive notice of the pendency of a suit involving the validity of such bonds,⁷⁴ nor is the pendency of such a suit constructive notice of any invalidity of the bonds.⁷⁵ A purchaser from the first purchaser is not chargeable with notice of the invalidity of the bonds by reason of an erroneous supposition on his part that he is buying from the body issuing the bonds.⁷⁶

b. Matters Apparent on Face of Instrument

A purchaser of municipal bonds or other securities is bound to take notice of all matters disclosed on the face thereof.

A purchaser of municipal bonds is bound to take notice of all matters disclosed on the face of the bonds,⁷⁷ such as recitals contained in the bonds,⁷⁸ or the terms of the bonds in respect of the source or method of payment;⁷⁹ and no person can claim protection as a bona fide purchaser where the bonds show on their face that they were not issued in compliance with the law⁸⁰ or the consent of the taxpayers required by statute.⁸¹ So also, if municipal bonds are not executed by the officers,⁸² or in the manner⁸³ required by statute, a purchaser is chargeable with notice. Where coupons refer to the bonds to which they are attached and purport to be for the periodic interest accruing thereon, the purchaser of such coupons is charged with notice of all which the bonds contain.⁸⁴ Notwithstanding the foregoing rules, the matters disclosed on the face of particular bonds may not be sufficient to affect a purchaser with notice of defenses.⁸⁵

c. Matters of Record

One who purchases municipal bonds or securities is charged with notice of the contents of any public record which under the law of the state furnishes the test of compliance with the conditions and the validity of the issue.

Where the constitution or the statute under which municipal bonds are issued prescribes a public record which furnishes the test of compliance with the conditions and the validity of the issue, a purchaser is charged with notice of the contents of such record;⁸⁶ and the record, rather than the

Recitals apparently false

Where it appears on the face of a bond that the recitals in it, with respect to statutory or constitutional limitations, are false, a municipality would not be bound by the recitals and would not be estopped to plead invalidity of the bonds in that particular, and the holder would not be a bona fide purchaser for value without notice.—Knott County v. recitals in the bonds,⁸⁷ must be looked to by all persons proposing to deal in the bonds; but a purchaser is not charged with notice of parts of the record not connected with such bonds,⁸⁸ nor is he required to look beyond the record;⁸⁹ and if the record fails to show the illegality of the bonds the purchaser may rely on the presumption that the officers faithfully discharged their duty in issuing such bonds⁹⁰ and, as discussed infra § 1967, on the recitals which the bonds contain. In some jurisdictions, however, where the recitals in bonds are sufficient to work an estoppel against the municipality, purchasers in the open market are not required to examine the record of the city.⁹¹

d. Lack of, or Limitations on, Power to Issue or Execute

The purchaser of municipal bonds or other securities is bound to inform himself of the power of the municipal corporation to issue them and is chargeable with notice of any lack of power to do so.

A purchaser of municipal bonds is bound at his peril to inform himself as to the power of the municipal corporation to issue such bonds,⁹² and is chargeable with notice of any want of power on the part of the municipality,⁹³ as well as of all provisions and requirements of the statute under which the bonds were issued,⁹⁴ especially where the bonds on their face refer to such statute.⁹⁵ Also, where a statute requires the passage of an ordinance or by-law for the issuance of bonds or notes,⁹⁶ or requires the bonds to refer to the ordinance under which they were issued,⁹⁷ a purchaser is bound to ascertain whether a valid and sufficient ordinance or by-law has been enacted; and where municipal bonds state on their face that they are issued under a certain ordinance, a purchaser is put on inquiry as to the validity⁹⁸ and provisions⁹⁹ of the ordinance. Purchasers of municipal bonds must at their peril ascertain that the authority assumed by the officers or agents executing or issuing them has been conferred¹ and that the power granted has not been exceeded.² The purchasers of municipal bonds or coupons must always take the risk of the genuineness of the official signatures of those who executed the paper they buy,³ and this includes not only the genuineness of the signature itself⁴ but also the official character of him who makes it.⁵ Likewise, where notes purport to be executed by municipal officers, the payee takes them at the risk of the authority of such officers.⁶

However, it has been held that, where a city is authorized to borrow money for some purposes, notes issued by it for money borrowed for an unauthorized purpose are enforceable in the hands of the lender where he did not have actual knowledge of the purpose for which the money was to be used,⁷ since it is not incumbent on him to inform himself, before lending the money, of the purpose for which it was needed.⁸

Excess of debt limit. A purchaser of municipal securities must at his peril ascertain whether the constitutional debt limit of the city is thereby exceeded.⁹

e. Matters Relating to Conditions Precedent or Preliminary Proceedings

A bona fide purchaser may presume that everything preliminary to issuance of securities which the municipal corporation has the power to issue has been done.

Where power to issue municipal bonds or other securities exists, a bona fide purchaser thereof has a right to presume that everything preliminary to their lawful issuance has been done,¹⁰ and is not bound to go back and examine all the intermediate steps which should have been taken before the bonds were issued,¹¹ or to ascertain whether all the details provided by the law authorizing the issue have been duly complied with by the corporate authorities,¹² especially where the bonds bear on their face the statement that they have been issued in pursuance of law and under the contingencies required by law.¹³ A purchaser of municipal aid bonds is not required to ascertain what conditions as to time of completing the enterprise were imposed by the proposition voted on¹⁴ or as to whether the corporation pursued the regular steps necessary to entitle it to receive the bonds.¹⁵ A purchaser before maturity of bonds payable to bearer is not ipso facto chargeable with constructive notice of their alleged invalidity because he investigated as to the fulfillment of the conditions necessary to their issuance;¹⁶ where there is no want of power in the municipality and there are no marks of infirmity on the face of the bonds, he will be deemed to have knowledge of their invalidity when and only when, as a matter of fact, he had actual notice.¹⁷

§ 1967. Effect of Recitals in Bonds or Absence Thereof

Where authority to issue bonds or other securities exists, purchasers are, in general, entitled to rely on recitals therein as to matters of fact.

Where innocent persons invest money in the bonds of a municipal corporation because of authorized recitals of its officers, the bonds should be sustained unless an insuperable legal obstacle prevents.¹⁸ Consequently it is well settled that, where the authority to issue municipal bonds exists, purchasers are entitled to rely on recitals therein that such authority has been regularly exercised,¹⁹ and the municipality is estopped to deny such recitals.²⁰ Recitals in municipal bonds are, however, binding only in respect of matters of fact,²¹ which it may be fairly presumed that the officers of the municipality were left to determine,²² and not in respect of matters of law or which all are bound to take cognizance,²³ and even as to matters of fact the municipality is not estopped if the facts recited are matters of public record open to the inspection of every inquirer,²⁴ or the constitution or the law under which the bonds are issued prescribes some public record as the test of the existence of the facts or circumstances recited,²⁵ and such record is in fact made as required by law.²⁶ While recitals in municipal bonds to the effect that they are issued in pursuance of, and in conformity with, statutes²⁷ and ordinances²⁸ authorizing their issuance, estop the municipality to deny that they were so issued, such a recital does not necessarily import a compliance with the state constitution,²⁹ nor does a recital in bonds that they were issued by virtue of a certain statute and in accordance with the vote of the electors of the town preclude inquiry into the performance of a condition to be performed after issuance of the bonds.³⁰ A city is not bound by recitals contained in bonds issued by the board of public works where such board is a distinct corporation, acting independently of the city, under the provisions of a special statute.³¹ Where recitals are true when made, the municipality cannot be held

a. Power to Issue or Execute

Lack of power to issue bonds or other securities cannot be cured by recitals in the instrument, nor can such recitals estop the municipal corporation to deny its power.

A lack of power on the part of a municipal corporation to issue bonds cannot be cured or supplied by any recital in the bonds,³³ and hence no recitals can estop the municipality to deny its power to issue the bonds,³⁴ where the laws are such that there can be no state of facts or of conditions under which the municipality would have the authority to issue the bonds.³⁵ It has been laid down that, if the laws are such as that there might under

Recital as to sufficiency of assessment

Recital in municipal paving bonds that assessment was sufficient to pay them is an expression of municipality's judgment and not representation which would render city liable thereon where law was complied with and there was no proof of bad faith; and a recital in municipal paving bonds that amount of assessment was sufficient to pay principal and interest is not false so as to render municipality liable there-any state of facts or circumstances be lawful power in a municipality or quasi municipality to issue its bonds, it may by recitals therein estop itself to deny that those facts or circumstances existed, and that it had lawful power to send the bonds forth,³⁶ unless the constitution or the law under which the bonds were issued prescribed some public record as the test of the existence of some of those facts or circumstances;³⁷ but this statement should be modified so as to limit the application of the rule to cases in which the fact represented by the recital is one which the law empowers or makes it the duty of the local board to ascertain and determine as a condition to its further proceeding.³⁸ It has been both affirmed³⁹ and denied⁴⁰ that, where the city is authorized to issue bonds only in aid of a domestic corporation, the fact that the bonds recite on their face that they were issued to a railroad company incorporated under the general laws of the state estops the city to show that such corporation was in fact a foreign corporation. A recital in municipal bonds that they were issued under a particular statute which is invalid has been held not to preclude inquiry as to whether there is other and valid legislative authority under which the power to issue the bonds can be upheld,⁴¹ but it has also been held that in such case the bondholders are estopped to set up some other statutory or constitutional authority.⁴²

Exceeding power. Where the statutory power to issue bonds has been exceeded, a purchaser is not protected by recitals in the bonds that they are issued in conformity with the statute,⁴³ and, a for-tiori, where the bonds do not contain any recital that they were issued in conformity with law, a purchaser for value cannot recover where their issuance exceeded the authority conferred.⁴⁴

Authority of officers to execute. Where municipal bonds contain no recital that the corporation is actually authorized to issue them, the corporation is not estopped to deny the authority of its officers to execute them.⁴⁵ However, where bonds recite that the city has caused the bonds to be signed by certain officers, who have in fact signed them, the city cannot urge that they were signed by such officers without its authority.⁴⁶ As against bona fide purchasers, the authority of officers having authority to issue bonds will be implied to extend to the making of recitals of facts essential to their validity.⁴⁷

b. Performance of Conditions Precedent

Recitals as to compliance with all preliminary steps before issuance of the instrument are generally binding on the municipal corporation as against a bona fide holder.

Where the power to issue municipal bonds exists, a bona fide purchaser of such bonds in the open market is entitled to rely on recitals in the bonds that all antecedent steps necessary to validate the securities have been taken.⁴⁸ Accordingly it is well established that the recitals of the officers of a municipal corporation who are invested with power to perform a condition precedent to the issue of negotiable bonds or with authority to determine when that condition has been per-

Recitals equivalent to representation, warranty, or certificate

Adequate recitals in negotiable municipal bonds are equivalent to a representation or warranty, or certificate on the part of the officers that everything necessary by law to be done has been done, and that every fact necessary to have existed did exist, to make bonds binding. —State ex rel. Fred J. Kiesel Estate v. Bishop, 129 P.2d 276, 169 Or. 448.

formed, that they have found that all the requirements of law necessary to authorize the issuance of the bonds have been fully complied with, preclude inquiry as against an innocent purchaser for value as to whether a condition precedent had actually been performed before the bonds were issued,⁴⁹ for such recital is of itself a decision by the appointed tribunal that the requisite facts exist.⁵⁰ Such an estoppel may arise in a proper case on a recital that an act or condition required by the constitution has been performed or fulfilled as well as on a recital of compliance with the statutory requirements.⁵¹ While the estoppel does not arise except as to matters of fact which the corporate officers making the recitals have authority by law to determine and certify,⁵² in order that recitals in municipal bonds shall constitute an estoppel as against the municipality, it is not necessary that the officers by whom the bonds are issued should be given express authority to decide as to compliance with preliminary conditions.⁵³ It seems that a municipal corporation may be estopped, by recitals in its bonds that all conditions necessary to their issue have been complied with, to dispute the performance of such conditions, although the bonds were not issued by the regular municipal officers, but by commissioners named by a court.⁵⁴ No recitals as to compliance with the law will effect an estoppel where the bonds were not authorized by statute,⁵⁵ nor may a purchaser rely on recitals known to be false.⁵⁶

It has been held or stated that if the bonds contain no recitals importing a performance of conditions precedent to their issuance, there is no estoppel to show nonperformance.⁵⁷

Where statute limited exercise of municipal authority to issue improvement bonds to those instances where property owners had elected to pay costs of improvement in installments and had executed waivers, and public records and statutes provided means of ascertainment so that all persons dealing with bonds had equal knowledge, recitals in improvement bonds could not render city liable on bonds issued in an amount equal to unwaivered assessments, on theory of fraud or estoppel.—*Read v. ments, precedent to the issuance of bonds by a municipal corporation is imported by a recital that the bonds are issued "in pursuance of,"⁵⁸ "pursuant to,"⁵⁹ "in conformity with,"⁶⁰ "in accordance with,"⁶¹ "by virtue of,"⁶² or "by authority of"⁶³ a particular statute or that they are "authorized by" a statute to which reference is made,⁶⁴ or by a recital that all acts, conditions, and things required to be done precedent to, and in the issuing of, the bonds have happened, and have been properly done and performed in regular and due form as required by law.⁶⁵ A recital in bonds issued on account of a municipal subscription to the stock of a railroad company, that the subscription was "made in pursuance of an act of the legislature and ordinances of the city council passed in pursuance thereof," imports not only compliance with the act of the legislature,⁶⁶ but that the ordinances of the city council conform to the statute.⁶⁷

Popular assent. The rule that recitals in municipal bonds that the conditions precedent to their issuance have been fulfilled are conclusive in favor of bona fide purchasers, and estop the municipality to deny their truth, applies in full force when the statute requires a petition or the consent of the voters or taxpayers as a condition precedent to the issuance of bonds;⁶⁸ but a recital in municipal bonds that they were for a subscription to the capital stock of a railroad company, authorized by acts of the state legislature referred to by title and date, does not estop the municipality to set up, in an action on the bonds, that their issue was not authorized by the vote of two thirds of the voters

Recitals in note. While a recital on the face of a note, made by the officers of a municipality charged with the duty of ascertaining the existence of necessary facts precedent to its valid issuance, will estop the municipality to show the nonexistence of those facts as against a bona fide holder of the note,⁷⁰ the rule does not apply to a recital made by only one of two or more officers charged with the duty of ascertaining the existence or nonexistence of the necessary facts.⁷¹

Recital of performance at improper time. When municipal bonds recite on their face that they are issued in accordance with the provisions of a particular act of the legislature, and that certain steps required by such act to be taken as a condition of their issue were taken at a time when the act itself shows they could not legally be taken, such bonds are invalid, even in the hands of a bona fide purchaser for value.⁷²

c. Debt Limit

Recitals that indebtedness evidenced by municipal bonds do not exceed the constitutional or statutory limit have been held conclusive in favor of a bona fide holder.

There is authority for the proposition that a recital on the face of municipal bonds that the indebtedness thereby created does not exceed the constitutional or statutory limit is conclusive in favor of a bona fide holder,⁷³ he not being obliged to go behind it,⁷⁴ and the municipality being estopped to deny it,⁷⁵ at least where there is nothing on the face of the bonds to indicate that the recital is untrue and the limit has in fact been exceeded,⁷⁶ and neither the constitution nor the statutes prescribe any rule or test by which to ascertain the extent of the existing indebtedness;⁷⁷ but there is also authority for the propositions that a bona fide purchaser of municipal bonds is not entitled to rely solely on the recital therein that the debt thereby created does not exceed the constitutional limit,⁷⁸ and that the city is not estopped by recitals in the bonds from asserting that the debt created by their issuance exceeds the constitutional⁷⁹ or statutory⁸⁰ limit, or at least that there is no estoppel where the officers making the recital are not authorized by constitution or statute to do so,⁸¹ the constitution or the statute prescribes some public record as a test of whether the limit has been exceeded,⁸² or it appears from the face of the bonds that the limit has in fact been exceeded,⁸³ as where the total amount of the issue is stated, so that an examination of the assessment rolls and a simple arithmetical calculation would show the excess.⁸⁴

Purchasers may not rely on recitals inconsistent with what they are chargeable with knowing.⁸⁵ Such recitals are of no avail where there is a complete absence of authority to issue bonds.⁸⁶ Where an entire issue of bonds exceeding the constitutional limit is purchased from the holder thereof by one person, as a single transaction, such person is not entitled to protection as a bona fide holder, no matter what recitals appear on the face of the bonds.⁸⁷ Where purchasers of bonds take them with notice that they are not direct obligations of the municipality, the doctrine of estoppel because of recitals in the bonds as to debt limitations is inapplicable.⁸⁸

General or insufficient recitals. Where there is no recital in the bonds that they do not exceed the limit prescribed by law, and each bond on its face, when taken in connection with the assessment roll, shows the limit to have been exceeded, a general recital that all the requirements of the law have been complied with will not estop the municipality issuing them to show that the bonds issued exceed the legal limit.⁸⁹ Also, a recital that the bonds are issued under the provisions of a given statute does not estop the municipality to show that the bonds are void because they created an indebtedness in excess of a constitutional limitation.⁹⁰

Recitals in new bonds issued in exchange for bonds which were void because in excess of a limitation of indebtedness do not create any estoppel as against a holder who is not a bona fide holder.⁹¹

d. Purpose

Recitals as to the purpose for which bonds were issued have been held binding on the municipal corporation.

bona fide holder that the bonds were in fact issued for another and unauthorized purpose,⁹² even though a diversion from the lawful purpose recited may be shown by the municipal records.⁹³ Accordingly, where municipal bonds recite that they were issued for the purpose of funding the existing debt of the city, and the city is authorized to issue such bonds, it is estopped as against a bona fide holder to set up that the antecedent indebtedness was fraudulent or invalid,⁹⁴ or that the refunding bonds either created or increased any indebtedness of the municipality;⁹⁵ and an innocent purchaser of such bonds is not required to consider or inquire into the question of excessive indebtedness.⁹⁶ On the other hand, where the bonds do not sufficiently comply with a charter or statutory requirement that they shall state the purpose for which they are issued, the municipality is not estopped or precluded from showing that they were issued for an illegal or unauthorized purpose;⁹⁷ and no estoppel can arise from a recital which discloses that the issuance was for a prohibited purpose.⁹⁸ Recitals in the bonds that they are issued for municipal purposes are of no avail to one who purchases after maturity with knowledge of the real and unlawful purpose of the issue.⁹⁹

e. Time of Issuance

Recitals in municipal bonds showing premature issuance have been held not to be conclusive.

A recital showing that the bonds were prematurely issued or ordered to be issued is not conclusive that they were so issued,¹ and it may be shown that the bonds were not ordered to be issued or that they were not issued until the time prescribed by statute.² The fact that municipal bonds bear a date prior to the time when the ordinance under which they were issued went into effect under the statute is not sufficient to defeat a recovery on such bonds in the hands of a bona fide holder, where there is no proof of the date of their actual issue,³ and their premature issuance would be contrary to a recital in the bonds that all conditions precedent have been properly performed in due and regular form as required by law.⁴

f. Seal

Recitals in municipal bonds as to a corporate seal have been held conclusive.

Recitals in municipal bonds to the effect that the seal attached is the corporate seal estops the municipal corporation, as against an innocent purchaser, to deny the validity of the seal.⁵ Also, a recital in bonds that they were issued under seal prevents the municipality from showing, as against a bona fide purchaser, that the bonds were delivered before any seal was affixed.⁶

§ 1969. Effect of Records, Decisions, Affidavits, or Certificates

As against bona fide holders of its bonds, a municipal corporation has been held concluded by recitals in municipal records and by official and judicial decisions, affidavits, and certificates.

A bona fide purchaser of municipal bonds has a right to rely on recitals in the municipal records as to matters affecting the validity of the bonds, and as against him the municipal corporation is estopped to contradict such records.⁷ Since the assessment roll of a municipality is a public record, bondholders are charged with notice of its contents.⁸

Omissions from assessment roll

Since an assessment roll of a city collector, is a public record, it charges a holder of a special improvement bond with notice of an omission from the roll of assessments, a part of which were charged with payment of his bond, and the city is not liable to the holder of bonds in a suit for an accounting for special assessments levied against pri-

respecting an issue of bonds, such as the existence of certain facts or the fulfillment of conditions precedent, are left to the decision of certain officers, their decision is conclusive in favor of a bona fide purchaser,⁹ and, a fortiori, where a court, before the issuance of bonds by a municipality, decides in a proper action or proceeding that it may lawfully issue such bonds, persons purchasing them have a right to rely on the law as declared by the court,¹⁰ and the validity of the bonds cannot be questioned as against them,¹¹ even though the decision is subsequently reversed¹² or subsequent decisions establish a different rule.¹³

Affidavits. Official affidavits required by statute as evidence of certain authorizing conditions for the issuance of municipal bonds have been held to be conclusive in favor of bona fide purchasers,¹⁴ but it has also been held that such affidavits do not preclude proof that the bonds were illegally issued.¹⁵

Certificates. Where a municipality has power to issue bonds, stock, notes, or debentures on certain conditions, the determination as to the existence or performance of which is devolved on a designated board or officer, the certificate of such board or officer as to the existence or performance of such conditions precedent estops or precludes the municipality to deny the truth of the matters recited therein, as against a bona fide purchaser;¹⁶ but the rule is otherwise where the certification is not within the official authority or duty of the officer making it.¹⁷

§ 1970. Defenses against Bona Fide Purchasers

Only such defenses as are available against bona fide purchasers generally can be urged against a bona fide holder of negotiable municipal bonds or other securities.

A bona fide purchaser of negotiable municipal bonds before maturity for value and without notice is entitled to all the protection which the law throws around the holder of a negotiable instrument;¹⁸ and his right cannot be taken away or affected by the subsequent repeal of the statute under which the bonds were issued.¹⁹ It follows that many defenses, discussed infra § 1972, which might be available against the original payees, purchasers with notice, or the holders of nonnegotiable bonds, cannot be set up against holders in due course of negotiable municipal bonds.²⁰ Generally speaking,

(1) One who acquired special improvement bonds after repeated inquiry by himself and former owners relative to future payment was an innocent purchaser for value, and city was barred by laches and estoppel from asserting as special defense to his suit on bonds that principal thereof was partially paid by overpayment of interest in excess of pro rata share of interest collected from property owners, where such payment was not included among numerous payments indorsed on bonds and city records were so inaccurate that alleged overpayment was discovered only as result of examination by public accountant.—Prange v. City of Marion, 48 N.E.2d 990, 319 Ill.App. 136.

(2) Innocent holders of municipal bonds had right to rely on conditions represented as existing at time bonds were issued, when it was claimed that town limits included lands on other side of bay, which lands were sought to be excluded in suit to compel officials to levy tax for payment of judgment on bonds, and owners of lands were estopped to urge dismissal of case on ground that state supreme court had declared that lands were not part of town because not contiguous thereto, where owners acquiesced in bond issue for more than three years, permitting bonds to be sold to public upon representation that lands stood as security for bonds, and some of proceeds of sale were spent for improvements on lands.—Brown-Crummer Inv. Co. v. Town of North Miami, D.C. Fla., 11 F.Supp. 73.

§ 1971. — Particular Defenses

- a. Lack or transgression of power to issue
- b. Lack of, or irregularity in obtaining, popular assent
- c. Nonperformance of conditions precedent
- d. Other matters

a. Lack or Transgression of Power to Issue

Want of authority to issue municipal bonds or other securities is a good defense even as against a bona fide holder.

Municipal bonds issued without authority are void, even in the hands of a bona fide holder,²⁷ and the municipal corporation may assert its want of authority as a defense against him.²⁸ Thus bonds issued under an invalid statute are void in the hands of a bona fide purchaser for value,²⁹ who acquired the bonds before the statute was adjudged invalid,³⁰ and the invalidity of the statute is available as a defense against him.³¹ Also, where a municipality has exceeded its power in issuing bonds, such bonds are void even in the hands of an innocent purchaser for value,³² and the

respecting an issue of bonds, such as the existence of certain facts or the fulfillment of conditions precedent, are left to the decision of certain officers, their decision is conclusive in favor of a bona fide purchaser,⁹ and, a fortiori, where a court, before the issuance of bonds by a municipality, decides in a proper action or proceeding that it may lawfully issue such bonds, persons purchasing them have a right to rely on the law as declared by the court,¹⁰ and the validity of the bonds cannot be questioned as against them,¹¹ even though the decision is subsequently reversed¹² or subsequent decisions establish a different rule.¹³

Affidavits. Official affidavits required by statute as evidence of certain authorizing conditions for the issuance of municipal bonds have been held to be conclusive in favor of bona fide purchasers,¹⁴ but it has also been held that such affidavits do not preclude proof that the bonds were illegally issued.¹⁵

Certificates. Where a municipality has power to issue bonds, stock, notes, or debentures on certain conditions, the determination as to the existence or performance of which is devolved on a designated board or officer, the certificate of such

board or officer as to the existence or performance of such conditions precedent estops or precludes the municipality to deny the truth of the matters recited therein, as against a bona fide purchaser;¹⁶ but the rule is otherwise where the certification is not within the official authority or duty of the officer making it.¹⁷

Only such defenses as are available against bona fide purchasers generally can be urged against a bona fide holder of negotiable municipal bonds or other securities.

A bona fide purchaser of negotiable municipal bonds before maturity for value and without notice is entitled to all the protection which the law throws around the holder of a negotiable instrument;¹⁸ and his right cannot be taken away or affected by the subsequent repeal of the statute under which the bonds were issued.¹⁹ It follows that many defenses, discussed infra § 1972, which might be available against the original payees, purchasers with notice, or the holders of nonnegotiable bonds, cannot be set up against holders in due course of negotiable municipal bonds.²⁰ Generally speaking,

where the power to issue negotiable municipal bonds exists, a person who purchases such bonds from the holder thereof in good faith, for value, and before maturity, acquires title free of any equities or defenses available between the original parties²¹ and the bonds in his hands are not assailable on any ground that does not relate to the authority for their issue.²² Defenses originally available against a purchaser for value may not be set up where the municipality and the property owners thereof have retained without complaint the benefits of the improvements for which the bonds were issued.²³

Set-off and counterclaim. Debts or claims arising out of transactions on the same bond or series of bonds cannot be set off as against innocent purchasers not connected with such transactions,²⁴ and, where bonds were purchased before maturity and without notice of previous cash payments on them, such payments are not available as a counterclaim on the bonds.²⁵

Coupons are entitled to the same immunity in the hands of a holder in due course as are the bonds of which they were originally a part.²⁶

Laches and estoppel as barring defenses

(1) One who acquired special improvement bonds after repeated inquiry by himself and former owners relative to future payment was an innocent purchaser for value, and city was barred by laches and estoppel from asserting as special defense to his suit on bonds that principal thereof was partially paid by overpayment of interest in excess of pro rata share of interest collected from property owners, where such payment was not included among numerous payments indorsed on bonds and city records were so inaccurate that alleged overpayment was discovered only as result of examination by public accountant.—Prange v. City of Marion, 48 N.E.2d 980, 319 Ill.App. 136.

(2) Innocent holders of municipal bonds had right to rely on conditions represented as existing at time bonds were issued, when it was claimed that town limits included lands on other side of bay, which lands were sought to be excluded in suit to compel officials to levy tax for payment of judgment on bonds, and owners of lands were estopped to urge dismissal of case on ground that state supreme court had declared that lands were not part of town because not contiguous thereto, where owners acquiesced in bond issue for more than three years, permitting bonds to be sold to public upon representation that lands stood as security for bonds, and some of proceeds of sale were spent for improvements on lands.—Brown-Crummer Inv. Co. v. Town of North Miami, D.C. Fla., 11 F.Supp. 73.

§ 1971. — Particular Defenses

- a. Lack or transgression of power to issue
- b. Lack of, or irregularity in obtaining, popular assent
- c. Nonperformance of conditions precedent
- d. Other matters

a. Lack or Transgression of Power to Issue

Want of authority to issue municipal bonds or other securities is a good defense even as against a bona fide holder.

Municipal bonds issued without authority are void, even in the hands of a bona fide holder,²⁷ and the municipal corporation may assert its want of authority as a defense against him.²⁸ Thus bonds issued under an invalid statute are void in the hands of a bona fide purchaser for value,²⁹ who acquired the bonds before the statute was adjudged invalid,³⁰ and the invalidity of the statute is available as a defense against him.³¹ Also, where a municipality has exceeded its power in issuing bonds, such bonds are void even in the hands of an innocent purchaser for value,³² and the fact that the municipality exceeded its power is available as a defense against him.³³ Thus the fact that constitutional limitations of municipal indebtedness or bond issues are exceeded in the issue of bonds is a good and sufficient defense against an innocent holder.³⁴ However, bonds which are issued to fund a valid indebtedness neither create any debt nor increase the debt of a municipality, but merely change the form of indebtedness; and, as against an innocent purchaser in the open market without notice, the fact that, at the time the bonds were issued, the indebtedness of the city already exceeded the prescribed limitations is no defense to an action on such bonds.³⁵

It has been both affirmed and denied that lack of popular assent is a good defense to municipal bonds in the hands of a bona fide purchaser.

It has been held that, where the statute authorizing the issuance of municipal bonds makes the exercise of the power dependent on the consent of the taxpayers, a lack of such consent is available as a defense, even as against a bona fide holder,³⁶ but there is also authority for the contrary view.³⁷ At any rate, a municipal corporation may not repudiate its bonds which are in the hands of a bona fide purchaser on the ground of mere irregularities in the election authorizing their issue.³⁸

Nonperformance of conditions precedent has been held no defense unless the validity of the bond or security is thereby impaired.

Where a municipal corporation is authorized to issue bonds they are binding in the hands of bona fide purchasers, although conditions precedent to their issuance were not observed.³⁹ On the other hand, where it is expressly provided by statute that the bonds shall not be valid and binding until there has been a compliance with conditions precedent,⁴⁰ or where the municipality has power to issue bonds only on a compliance with conditions precedent,⁴¹ the municipality may set up nonperformance of the conditions, as against a bona fide purchaser for value, unless, as discussed supra § 1968, it is estopped to do so.⁴²

Various defects, irregularities, and other matters have been held not good defenses as against a bona fide purchaser of a municipal bond.

Matters which a municipal corporation is precluded from setting up as defenses against a bona fide purchaser of negotiable bonds which the municipality has power to issue include irregularities in the exercise of the power;⁴³ the fraud⁴⁴ or misconduct⁴⁵ of the officers or agents of the municipality in issuing the bonds or of the person to whom the bonds were sold;⁴⁶ the use of unfair and corrupt means in obtaining the recommendation of the grand jury for the subscription,

Estoppel to claim noncompliance with referendum law

Where no objection was raised to issuance of local improvement bonds by municipality to anticipate collection of second and succeeding installments of assessment both against private property and against city, and taxes had been levied and collected without objection of taxpayers, the municipality, which as trustee had received the taxes as trust fund to be held and paid over to bondholders, was estopped to set up its own wrongdoing in issuing bonds to anticipate installments of its own assessment, without submitting question to voters, as ground for refusal to pay over trust funds to bondholder even if a referendum statute applied to such bond issue.—Bank of Burlington v. in payment of which the bonds are issued;⁴⁷ a delay which is not unreasonable in issuing the bonds after the election authorizing them;⁴⁸ the use of an improper seal on the bonds;⁴⁹ the fact that the bonds are made payable at an earlier date than directed in the ordinance of the municipality relating to the mode of executing them;⁵⁰ failure or want of consideration for the bonds;⁵¹ the existence or breach of collateral conditions or agreements, not appearing in the statute or ordinance authorizing the bonds or on the face of the bonds;⁵² and an irregular or illegal sale or disposition of the bonds;⁵³ or contract relating thereto,⁵⁴ made or entered into by the municipality or its officers. Also, there is no duty on the part of a holder of a bond or note issued by a municipality to direct or look after the application of the proceeds thereof,⁵⁵ and the diversion or misapplication of the proceeds constitutes no defense to the enforcement of the bond or note by an innocent holder.⁵⁶

c. Actions

§ 1972. Rights of Action and Defenses

- a. In general
- b. Defenses

a. In General

The rights of holders of municipal bonds or other securities may be enforced by appropriate actions at law or in equity, or in such manner as the statutes may provide, the selection of the remedy being largely dependent on the facts of the particular case and the nature of the relief sought.

Whatever rights, contractual in nature, are possessed by holders of bonds of municipal corporations may at their suit be enforced in the courts⁵⁷ by appropriate procedure.⁵⁸ Where a housing authority, although not a municipal corporation, is a corporation with full power to issue bonds and other obligations and to secure them by pledge of its revenue or mortgage of its realty, it may confer on its creditors reasonable remedies for enforcing such obligations.⁵⁹

In a proper case, a holder of valid bonds or other securities on which the municipality is liable to suit may enforce his rights in an action at law,⁶⁰ such

Nature of recovery

A recovery from city in amount of improvement bonds for payment of which the special assessments levied had been collected but the proceeds diverted rested on ownership of the bonds but was not a suit on the bonds in the sense that recovery had to be according to the tenor and effect of the bonds, and was essentially a recovery for money had and received arising from city's obligation to carry out trust reposed in it for the benefit of the bondholders.—Cook v. City of Staunton, 14 N.E.2d 696, 295 Ill.App. 111.

Controlling statutes

Where there is no agreement whereby landowners accept the ten-year payment plan with respect to street improvement bonds, the rights of the city or a contractor to proceed against a landowner are controlled by statutes relating to public ways.—City of Hazard v. Duff, 175 S.W.2d 146, 295 Ky. 628.

as *assumpsit*⁶¹ or an action of covenant;⁶² but an action against the municipality for money had and received will not lie where the money was not used for any appropriate municipal purpose,⁶³ or where there was no privity between the holder and the municipality.⁶⁴ Under some statutes bonds cannot be enforced against the municipality as a debt, or as a measure of damages either in an action ex contractu or ex delicto for neglect, delay, or refusal to assess or reassess property;⁶⁵ and where, by statute, it is provided that no action should be brought against a municipality by its creditors, no action will lie on bonds issued by it to fund its indebtedness and given to creditors surrendering their claims against the municipality.⁶⁶ In accordance with the general principles, as discussed supra § 1957, where a special fund has been created, bondholders may not maintain an action for a money judgment against the municipality on the ground that the bonds are unpaid;⁶⁷ and, while it has been held that in such case an action may be maintained against the city on the bonds to establish and perpetuate them as a claim on the funds and to prevent the bar of the statute of limitations,⁶⁸ where the proper remedy of the bondholder is mandamus, a judgment against the special fund cannot be had merely to preserve the claim of the bondholder against the bar of a statute of limitations.⁶⁹

A bondholder is not entitled to proceed in equity to enforce his bonds where he has an adequate remedy at law,⁷⁰ but he may in some cases proceed in equity to compel the municipality to perform its obligations to provide particular funds for, and apply them to, payment;⁷¹ or to prevent the en-

(1) An action for damages may be maintained by a bondholder against a municipality for failure of the treasurer thereof to pay bonds in their proper order.—Crist v. Town of Gallup, 183 P.2d 156, 51 N.M. 286.

(2) Prior decisions, however, held that the bondholder's statutory remedy of foreclosure, if the municipality failed to collect assessments, was the exclusive remedy available to the bondholder.

(3) Any liability of municipality in connection with breach of its express duty to collect special assessments is subject to corresponding duty of bondholder or certificate holder to exhaust all remedies available to him and to compel the municipality by mandamus to perform its duty and enforce collection, and the holder of sewer certificates could not recover balance due thereon from city which created sewer district, on theory of implied obligation to pay from general revenue where express promise to pay from general revenue was unenforceable because it was ultra vires, when remedy in nature of mandamus or suit to foreclose was open to him.—Purcell v. City of Carlsbad, C.C.A.N.M., 126 F.2d 748.

(4) It was held that, under the statute imposing duty on city issuing paving bonds payable from assessments to enforce collection of assessments but authorizing bondholder to enforce assessment liens on city's failure or refusal to enforce collection, bondholder is bound to take notice of city and other records pertinent to circumstances of whether assessments were delinquent and whether city had failed or refused to take steps to enforce collection, and the fact that city continued to pay interest on bonds until after statute of limitations had run against collection of assessments was not controlling factor as showing lack of notice to bondholder of delinquency as to assessments.—Munro v. City of Albuquerque, 150 P.2d 733, 48 N.M. 306.

(5) Where a valid and enforceable lien exists, holders of municipal paving bonds payable exclusively out of funds derived from special assessments against abutting property are entitled to foreclose liens of special assessments on failure of city to enforce collection of assessment.—Gray v. City of Santa Fe, D.C.N.M., 15 F.Supp. 1074, modified on other grounds, C.C.A., 89 F.2d 406.

Fictitious contract

Bondholders' right to recover from city by reason of city's diversion of special assessments collected for payment of particular improvement bonds to other corporate purposes did not rest in privity of contract, although action was at law in form ex contractu, but right to recover was governed by principles of equity.—Cook v. City of Staunton, supra.

Money had and received

Where municipality received municipal improvement bond special assessments which by statute belonged to bondholders, bondholders could recover for money had and received.—Smith v. Boise City, D.C.Idaho, 18 F.Supp. 385.

forcement of a subsequent statute impairing the obligation of the contract;⁷² and a return of the consideration may be compelled by an action in equity when the issues involved otherwise present grounds for equitable jurisdiction.⁷³ Where a municipal corporation has refused to pay bonds on the ground that the bonds issued increased its debt beyond the constitutional limit, the facts may be inquired into in a court of equity at the suit of the bondholders to ascertain what part, if any, of the debt created may be enforced without violating the constitutional limitation.⁷⁴

Accounting and injunction

Remedy of bondholders who sought accounting of special assessments collected by township issuing bonds for sewer and water improvements and injunction preventing surety on bonds from presenting bonds for payment prior to payment of plaintiffs' bonds was properly in equity rather than by mandamus—Whitman v. Royal Oak Tp, 258 N.W. 835, 269 Mich. 146.

Correction of mistake of law

In an action at law by the bondholder wherein the municipality filed a cross complaint in equity, where village and owner of all of village's outstanding local improvement bonds acted under mutual mistake of law in entering into and acting upon arrangement whereby bonds and interest coupons were used in lieu of cash in paying installments of special assessments and interest thereon, and neither village nor any third persons suffered loss, village would not be permitted to unjustly enrich itself, but remained obligated to pay balance owing on bonds after deducting from face value thereof, the payments indorsed on bonds when bonds were used in lieu of cash in paying installments of special assessments.—First Nat. Breach of trust

A statute requiring all claims for damages against any city or town to be filed within a designated number of days after time when such claim accrues begins to run against a city as trustee of funds of a local improvement district from time the cestui que trust acquires knowledge of city's repudiation of the trust.—City of Longview v. Longview Co., 150 P.2d 395, 21 Wash.2d 248.

To whom claim presented

Under statute, the city manager of a city which has adopted plan D for its government is not the "proper or lawful municipal authority" to whom a claim against the city may be presented for audit and allowance before an action on the claim can be maintained against the city.—Nevins v. City of Lexington, 194 S.E. 293, 212 N.C. 616.

Charter provision for claim

City charter requirement for filing claims against city is inapplicable in suit in equity against city for enforcement of street improvement bonds issued before charter provision became effective.—Brown-Crummer Inv. Co. v. City of Burbank, D.C.Cal., 17 F.Supp. 469, appeal dismissed, C.C.A., 97 F.2d 993.

Conditions precedent. Some statutes requiring the filing of a claim before commencement of action have been held applicable to actions by bondholders,⁷⁷ but such statutes have also been held to be inapplicable.⁷⁸ Restitution of part payments is not a condition precedent to a suit to collect the balance due on municipal bonds.⁷⁹

b. Defenses

In addition to matters which may or may not be urged as defenses against bona fide holders, various matters have been considered and ruled on as defenses in actions or suits on, or arising out of, municipal bonds or other securities.

Unless waived by it,⁸⁰ such defenses as the municipal corporation has against the original payee of its bonds may be asserted against such payee,⁸¹

Special statute

A special statute of nonclaim requiring suits against a city to be brought within six months from time of accrual of cause of action, at least thirty days after filing of written notice of intention to sue, is inapplicable to suits on bonds duly issued under the municipal corporate seal, which have become due by maturity and are in default because of nonpayment.—City of New Port Richey v. Financial difficulty

An answer merely reflecting a condition of insolvency, or financial difficulty, did not set up a valid defense to a right to interest asserted by a bondholder.—City of Breckenridge v. Avenius, Tex.Civ.App., 75 S.W.2d 916.

Interest paid by another entity

It is no defense to a proceeding to collect bonds that the bondholder accepted interest payments from a special taxing district which the legislature attempted to substitute for the municipality.—City of Fort Lauderdale v. State ex rel. Elston Bank his assignee or transferee with notice,⁸² or any holder, where the bond is nonnegotiable;⁸³ but, as has been discussed supra §§ 1970, 1971, many defenses are not available to the municipality as against a bona fide purchaser of a negotiable bond. Where the power to issue bonds is dependent on the performance of certain conditions precedent, a failure to comply with such conditions is available as a defense to the bonds.⁸⁴ On the other hand, the failure of the clerk of a municipal corporation to make a record of proceedings relating to the issuance of bonds cannot avail the corporation to defeat the enforcement of such bonds.⁸⁵ A municipality cannot question its own corporate existence in a suit brought on evidences of debt issued by it,⁸⁶ nor can it deny the official character of its own officers, who acted as such in performing duties necessary to execute conditions precedent to the issuance of negotiable bonds.⁸⁷ A city, having delivered railroad bonds, payable to bearer, to a railroad company, cannot defeat a recovery thereon by a purchaser, on the ground that it gave the railroad company no directions as to how the bonds should be transferred.⁸⁸ The fact that a judgment may not be enforceable constitutes no defense to an action on municipal bonds,⁸⁹ nor is the fact that an injunction restraining the corporation from paying the bonds involved has been granted in a taxpayer's suit a defense to an action by a bondholder who was not a party to such suit.⁹⁰

Where the right to sue for the principal of bonds has accrued by reason of failure to pay interest, it has been held that the acceptance of a tender of the interest and costs does not, in the absence of agreement to that effect, waive the right to prosecute a suit already begun to recover the principal and interest.⁹¹ In an action for the value of bonds made worthless by the act of the municipality in paying bonds out of their proper order, it is no defense that the municipality accepted some bonds from property owners as payment of assessments and liens on their property.⁹² In a suit on a promissory note given by a municipality to a contractor for work and labor,⁹³ it has been held no defense that the municipality failed to comply with a statute requiring appointment of an engineer to superintend the work. In an action by bondholders on delinquent improvement bonds, where the statute requires purchase by the city or state at delinquent sales and application of all available funds in the city treasury to the payment of interest and principal of delinquencies on the bonds, the city may be precluded from claiming that the tax sale was invalid.⁹⁴ Delay by a municipality in instituting foreclosure actions on delinquent assessments has been held excusable, in a suit by a bondholder for equitable relief, where the bondholder has not previously demanded foreclosure,⁹⁵ and where current economic conditions would have prevented sales except at a greatly depressed level.⁹⁶

§ 1973. Time to Sue

A suit on municipal bonds may not be brought before they mature, and an action on suit must be brought within the time limited by statute. Such a suit may be barred by laches.

A suit on municipal bonds may not be brought before they mature according to their terms,⁹⁷ even & Trust Co., 169 So. 584, 125 Fla. 89.

Legality of collections

In an action against the municipality to recover the face value of, and remaining unpaid interest on, bonds on the theory that it was responsible for dissipation of funds after payment, the municipality having permitted the clerk to make collections may not question the legality of the collection by the clerk, especially after adopting and ratifying the acts of the clerk.—Cruzen v. Boise City, 74 P.2d 1037, 58 Idaho 406.

Status as holder in due course

Where bonds are negotiable, payable to bearer, lack or want of status as a holder in due course is no defense.—City of Hialeah v. Groves, C.C.A.Fla., 101 F.2d 951.

The municipality may avail itself of statutory defenses.—City of Jacksonville v. Bankers Life Co., C.C.A. Ill., 90 F.2d 141.

though the municipal corporation repudiates its obligation on the bonds.⁹⁸ An action or suit between a municipality and a holder of its bonds should be brought within the period of time limited by statute for the maintenance of such action or suit,⁹⁹ computed from the time the cause of action accrued,¹ unless there is something to prevent or interrupt the running of the statute or avoid its operation.²

Laches on the part of a bondholder after repudiation of the trust precludes him from maintaining a suit in equity to charge the municipality as a trustee for the collection of taxes and payment thereof to the bondholder.³ An unnecessarily long delay by bondholders will, in a proper case, constitute laches so as to bar recovery,⁴ but mere lapse of time, without prejudice to the other party, does not constitute laches.⁵ Where a charter provision declares that an assessment lien shall continue in full force and effect until assessments and all interest thereon are paid, a general law of the state, extinguishing liens by lapse of time for bringing an action on the principal obligation does not apply, so that delay beyond such time is not laches.⁶

§ 1974. Who May Sue or Be Sued; Parties

Suit may be brought by the holder of a bond payable to bearer; and in any action or suit on, or arising out of, bonds or other securities all necessary parties must be joined.

Where bonds are payable to bearer, suit thereon may be maintained by the legal holder thereof,⁷ in his own name,⁸ although they are held only for the purpose of collection and the equitable title is in another.⁹ A bondholder may sue to enforce the payment of his bonds without holding or representing the entire issue;¹⁰ and a holder of a coupon need not have any interest in the bond to which it was formerly attached, in order to recover on the coupon.¹¹ It has been held that, where a municipal board is charged with an official duty to see that bonds issued by it are paid when due, it has such interest as will entitle it to maintain mandamus to compel payment.¹² While, in the absence of statute one bondholder may, for the benefit of himself and other bondholders in like situation, maintain a suit to enforce assessments by foreclosure or to recover against a property owner who has waived his right to contest assessments and agreed to become personally liable,¹³ and under a statute so providing may maintain an action to enforce the contractual rights and contractual and statutory remedies in favor of himself and other bondholders similarly situated,¹⁴ he may not forego remedies or accept less than the amount due for the other bondholders except with their express consent and on their express authorization;¹⁵ and the court cannot vest a receiver or other officer of the court with power to compromise for bondholders who are not before the court, and accept for them anything less than the full rights and remedies called for under their contract.¹⁶

Plaintiff's right of action against the municipality for his pro rata share of installments collected is not affected by his suit as class plaintiff to foreclose assessment liens against lands of persons failing to pay their assessments.¹⁷

Defendant. All necessary parties must be joined as defendants.¹⁸ The fact that bonds are to be paid from the proceeds of assessments against specific property does not render the owners of such property necessary parties to an action thereon.¹⁹ When the money for payment of bonds has been placed in the hands of officers charged with the duty of paying them, an action will lie on behalf of a bondholder against such officers;²⁰ and, where delinquent special assessments, pledged for the payment of improvement bonds, are returned to the county treasurer for collection as delinquent taxes, the county may be joined with the municipality as a party defendant in a suit by a bondholder for an accounting and other equitable relief;²¹ but a committee of the city government whose consent is not essential to the raising of funds for the payment of bonds is not a necessary party to a suit thereon.²² In a suit for accounting, the municipal officers, as well as the municipality, are proper parties to the bill,²³ and all parties who have dealt with trust funds may be joined as defendants.²⁴

Those whose rights and liabilities will not be affected by the determination of the cause are not necessary parties defendant,²⁵ although they may be proper parties;²⁶ but, where the rights of all bondholders will be affected, they must be joined.²⁷

Intervention. Under some statutes the holder of a certificate issued after issuance of bonds may intervene in a bondholder's action to enforce payment of the bonds.²⁸

Theory of case

Payee could not recover interest

petition should show the authority to issue the bond or note,³⁰ either by averment of the special act conferring such authority or by stating the recital of the bond in that respect;³¹ and, where the bonds contain no recital which will preclude the municipality from impeaching them in the hands of a bona fide holder, plaintiff must show in his complaint that they were issued in substantial compliance with the legislative enactments³² and for a proper purpose;³³ but, when it is alleged that plaintiff is a bona fide holder and the bonds recite their issuance in conformity with law, it is not necessary that the facts showing the regularity and legality of issuance should be set out.³⁴ Where bonds are payable to bearer, the complaint need not allege how and when plaintiff became owner of the bonds.³⁵ It has been held that a compliance with a constitutional provision requiring provision to be made for the payment of the indebtedness must be alleged.³⁶

Subject to the foregoing rules the complaint need not negative matters of defense;³⁷ nor need it set out the ordinance under which the bonds were issued,³⁸ show the authority of general agents of the municipality,³⁹ or aver matters not essential to the validity of the bonds, such as the statement of the proper name of the bonds on their face⁴⁰ or the performance of certain duties by officers after the issuance of the bonds.⁴¹ Averments concerning the activities of the mayor in matters in which the city can act only by ordinance will not be given weight in determining a motion to dismiss a bill in equity.⁴² A general judgment for misappropriation of moneys belonging to a special fund cannot be had in the absence of any allegation of misappropriation.⁴³

As in civil actions generally, plaintiff may be permitted to amend his pleadings so as to cure defects therein.⁴⁴

Statement of facts on submission of controversy. A statutory provision that in pleading the judgment of a court of special jurisdiction the facts conferring jurisdiction need not be set out is applicable to the statement of a case filed for the submission of controversy with regard to the validity of a bond.⁴⁵

b. Plea or Answer

The plea or answer in an action or suit on, or arising out of, a municipal bond or other security must allege all matters of defense to be relied on in accordance with the rules of pleading generally. Set-off or counterclaim may be urged in a proper case.

Defendant may plead generally non est factum or a plea in the nature thereof,⁴⁶ or may plead specially setting up special matter avoiding liability on the bond after its issuance.⁴⁷ Where it is alleged that plaintiff obtained possession of the bond in suit by fraud, the facts constituting the fraud should be specifically pleaded.⁴⁸ A municipality seeking to defend on the theory that the indebtedness evidenced by the notes sued on exceeded its debt limitation must allege with particularity and certainty the facts of such indebtedness, the character thereof, and when contracted.⁴⁹ A plea which

by way of damages for breach of contracts to pay notes by city, which was prohibited by constitution from issuing interest-bearing evidences of indebtedness, where complaint asked judgment for both interest and principal on notes, asserting right to recover interest under contract and not as award by way of damages for breach of contract—*American La-France & Foamite Corporation v. omits essential allegations is demurrable,⁵⁰ and a plea or answer alleging merely that plaintiff was not the owner or holder of the securities sued on raises no defense.⁵¹ An admission in the answer that plaintiff is the owner and holder of bonds payable to bearer precludes any defense questioning plaintiff's title.⁵²

Set-off and counterclaim. A claim of set-off for overpayment of interest is properly raised by an answer setting up payment as a defense.⁵³ Where bondholders are seeking merely an adjudication of their claims and not satisfaction of a judgment, a counterclaim of the municipality alleging insolvency and praying for intervention of equity to prevent a multiplicity of suits is dismissible as insufficient in law,⁵⁴ and as premature since a mere entry of judgment would not entitle the bondholder to payment in full or prevent intervention of other bondholders for the purpose of sharing in funds that might thereafter be collected.⁵⁵

c. Issues, Proof, and Variance

In actions or suits on, or arising out of, municipal bonds or other securities only such matters as are properly pleaded and controverted are in issue. Evidence bearing on such matters is admissible.

Recovery may be had on negotiable detached coupons without production of the bond to which they were formerly attached.⁵⁷ However, where the bonds are transferable only on the books of the city, a person suing on coupons cannot recover without showing a legal assignment of the bonds to him.⁵⁸ It is incumbent on defendant to sustain affirmative defenses pleaded by it by proper and sufficient evidence.⁵⁹ Evidence bearing on the matters put in issue by the pleadings is admissible.⁶⁰

§ 1976. Evidence

- a. Presumptions and burden of proof
- b. Admissibility, weight, and sufficiency

a. Presumptions and Burden of Proof

The rules of evidence in civil actions apply as to presumptions and the burden of proof in actions on, or arising out of, municipal bonds or other securities.

Subject to the rules of evidence in civil actions, it will be presumed as a general rule that the bonds or other securities of a municipal corporation issued in apparent compliance with a law authorizing their issue have been actually so issued,⁶¹ and that there has been a compliance with all conditions precedent,⁶² especially where the bonds are in the hands of bona fide holders.⁶³

The burden of proof rests, as it does in civil ac-

Status of plaintiff

Where no defenses against the first holder, obligee, or promisee are asserted in a subsequent holder's action on a negotiable instrument payable to bearer, no issue as to plaintiff's status as a holder in due course is raised, and proof that he is such a holder is unnecessary.—City of Hialeah v. Groves, C.C.A. Fla., 101 F.2d 951.

Delivery

(1) Where city had authority to issue negotiable bonds, delivery thereof by city is conclusively presumed in favor of bona fide holder who purchased bonds before maturity.—Bankers' Trust Co. v. City of Statesville, 166 S.E. 169, 203 N.C. 399—44 C.J. p 1259 note 53 [a].

(2) Delivery of negotiable city bonds payable to bearer is presumed until contrary is proved in action for amount due thereon.—City of Hialeah v. Groves, C.C.A.Fla., 101 F.2d 951.

tions generally, on the party having the affirmative of the issue;⁶⁴ and, as against a bona fide purchaser, the burden of proving want of performance of any of the prerequisites is on the municipality or other party attacking the validity of the bonds.⁶⁵ However, where bonds for a particular purpose are valid only if they fall within an exception of a statute forbidding the issuance of bonds for such purpose generally, the burden is on plaintiff to establish that they are within such exception;⁶⁶ and, where a bond on its face shows the conditions on which it is payable, the holder of the bond or coupons has the burden of showing that there has been a compliance with such conditions.⁶⁷ The burden is not on plaintiff to prove improper application of money collected for payment of bonds in a suit for accounting of proceeds of assessments,⁶⁸ but the holder of improvement bonds seeking a general judgment because of misappropriation of moneys belonging to a special fund has the burden of proving misappropriation by the municipality.⁶⁹ Where the municipality seeks to compel plaintiff to prorate with other creditors, it has the burden of showing that others have like claims against it amounting to more than the funds available.⁷⁰

If a municipality has the right to execute a promissory note, the execution thereof creates a prima facie liability on the municipality,⁷¹ and the burden is on it to show want of consideration or that it did not receive the proceeds of the note,⁷² rather than on plaintiff to prove that it did receive the proceeds.⁷³ In an action on such a note, in the absence of anything to the contrary, it must be assumed that current revenues of the municipality are sufficient to discharge the note.⁷⁴

Excessive issue or indebtedness. In the absence of evidence as to the indebtedness of a municipal corporation and the assessed value of its taxable property, it will be presumed, in support of the validity of bonds, that the authorized limit of indebtedness was not exceeded;⁷⁵ and, where a corporation has power to issue bonds to a limited amount only, the burden is on it to show that a particular bond in suit was issued after this limit was exceeded.⁷⁶

Status, title, and rights of holder. Possession of negotiable bonds raises a presumption of ownership;⁷⁷ but it has been held that the mere possession of coupons creates no presumption that the holder is entitled to the interest represented there-⁷⁸ A holder of municipal bonds is presumed,

In bank's action on note executed by city of fourth class, it was required to be assumed, in absence of pleading and proof to the contrary, that the current revenues of the city were sufficient to discharge the note, and the fact that the current revenues were not specifically pledged by ordinance directing execution of note or by note itself was immaterial.—City of Jackson v. Prima facie ownership

Where bonds payable to bearer on July 1, 1904 were discovered in 1929 in deceased lawyer's safe, plaintiffs, who were the only surviving heirs of the attorney, were prima facie the owners.—Batchelder v. City of Faribault, 3 N.W.2d 778, 212 Minn. 251.

Genuineness of coupons

(1) In action for principal and interest due on city bonds and coupons, not attached to bonds when produced in court, burden was on plaintiff to prove that coupons were attached to bonds when issued, where genuineness of coupons was put in issue.—City of Hialeah v. Groves, C.C.A.Fla., 101 F.2d 951.

(2) Proof that coupons, not attached to city bonds, corresponded to bonds and satisfied requirements of city charter and ordinances, did not sustain plaintiff's burden of proving that such coupons were city's valid obligations in action for principal and interest due on bonds and coupons; and, while proof of genuine-

in the absence of proof to the contrary, to have taken them before maturity for a valuable consideration and without notice of any objections to their validity;⁷⁹ and a mere irregularity not amounting to illegality does not place on plaintiff the burden of showing that he is a holder for value;⁸⁰ but, where the municipality proves that there was fraud or illegality in the inception of the bonds, the burden is thrown on the holder to show that he or, some one under whom he claims, is a bona fide holder for value.⁸¹ It has been held that want of notice of defects cannot be presumed from mere evidence of a purchase for value.⁸²

Nonnegotiable instrument. There is no presumption that a nonnegotiable instrument was rightfully issued by the municipality;⁸³ and, where nil debet has been pleaded, it places on plaintiff the burden of showing that the execution of a nonnegotiable note was within the power of the corporation.⁸⁴ The transferee of a nonnegotiable security has the burden of establishing his superior equity as against the true owner.⁸⁵

The general rules as to the admissibility, weight, and sufficiency of evidence apply in actions or suits on, or arising out of, municipal bonds or other securities.

The rules governing the admissibility, weight, and sufficiency of evidence in civil actions are applicable in determining the admissibility,⁸⁶ and the weight and sufficiency,⁸⁷ of evidence in actions or suits on, or arising out of, municipal bonds, coupons, notes, or other securities.

§ 1977. Trial and Judgment

b. Judgment; amount of recovery

a. Trial

In actions or suits on, or arising out of, municipal bonds or other securities, the general rules of trial in civil actions apply.

Where the trial is before a jury, questions of fact are to be submitted to, and determined by, it,⁸⁸ under proper instructions,⁸⁹ provided the evidence

ness of city bonds and attached coupons may be made by proving negotiating officers' acts pursuant to their authority in action for principal and interest due thereon, validity of coupons not signed by such officers depends entirely on whether they were attached to bonds when issued.—City of Hialeah v. is sufficient to require the submission of such questions to the jury.⁹⁰ Where the trial is had without a jury, the rules governing the requisites and sufficiency of findings of fact in civil actions generally are applicable in determining the sufficiency of the findings made by the court.⁹¹ In an action brought solely for recovery on bonds and coupons, questions arising out of the liability of the municipal corporation on a stock subscription, in payment of which the bonds were issued, cannot be determined.⁹²

b. Judgment; Amount of Recovery

The judgment or decree to be rendered in any action or suit on, or arising out of, municipal bonds or other securities depends on the nature of the action or suit and the facts and circumstances of the case.

In an action or suit on, or arising out of, municipi-pal bonds or other securities, the court will render such judgment or decree as will afford proper and adequate relief under the circumstances.⁹³ In a proper case the court may decree restoration of assessments wrongfully abated by the municipal corporation;⁹⁴ and a decree may order the municipality to levy a general tax on all property therein to pay a money judgment, provided for in the decree, for the amount of money wrongfully diverted.⁹⁵ Where the judgment can direct payment only as and when money therefor accumulates in the special fund out of which bonds are payable, a judgment against the fund is of no avail where the fund is exhausted.⁹⁶ If only the surplus remaining after the payment of current expenses may be applied to the payment of bonds, a court has no right to anticipate the existence of such a

Bona fides of holder

Unsevered overdue interest coupons do not as a matter of law defeat claim of holder in due course of an unmatured bond, but the bona fides in taking it is open to question as a matter of fact and all the circumstances of the purchase, including the number of past-due interest coupons, the price paid for bond, and the reliability of the seller, are to be considered in determining the question.—City of New Port Richey v. Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland, C.C.A.Fla., 105 F.2d 348, 123 A.L.R. 1352.

Questions not raised by pleadings, testimony, or by requests for findings of fact cannot be considered by the court on a trial in assumpsit without a jury.—Reading Trust Co. v. Reading, Pa.Com.Pl., 41 Berks Co. 101.

Compelling action

In bondholders' suit for injunction restraining diversion of net revenues of municipal revenue-producing enterprise required to be applied to payment of principal and interest due on bonds issued for such enterprise for other purposes, court could not order city officers to levy, assess, or collect taxes or fix rates for water system since that would be equivalent to awarding writ of mandamus, an extraordinary legal remedy, which equity court never awards.—George v. City of Asheville, C.C.A.N.C., 80 F.2d 50, 103 A.L.R. 568.

Judgment against city for amount due holders of improvement bonds, authorizing issuance of execution on judgment, is improper.

Amendment of decree, where warranted by the facts, is proper.—First Nat. Bank of Stevens Point, Wis., v. Village of Stickney, 82 N.E.2d 673, 335 Ill.App. 596.

Personal judgment

(1) A judgment imposing liability on the municipality to the extent of funds actually paid to it is not a personal judgment against the municipality.—City of Corbin v. Becker, 180 S.W.2d 419, 297 Ky. 85.

(2) Where city assessed cost of street improvements against abutting property and issued bonds therefor, and was endeavoring to make collections, a bondholder was not entitled to personal judgment against city at time of suit, but was entitled to judgment requiring city to collect assessments and pay collections to bondholder, and thereafter a personal judgment against city for any unpaid balance was proper.—City of Prestonsburg v. People's State Bank of Frankfort, 72 S.W.2d 1043, 255 Ky. 252.

(3) Holders of unmatured local improvement bonds issued by city under statute were not entitled to personal judgment against city which had wrongfully diverted money from special assessment fund securing bonds, where it could not be determined that bonds of such holders would have been selected in a drawing by lot, under statute authorizing selection of bonds by lot to be paid with proceeds of assessments prior to maturity of bonds.—City of Jacksonville v. Bankers Life Co., C.C.A.Ill., 90 F.2d 141.

Effect of consent decree for issuance of refunding bonds

Holders of defaulted city bonds, who had consented to decree providing for issue of refunding bonds and for compromise payment of accrued interest on old bonds out of such funds as would become available, were precluded thereby from compelling city to make back assessments on property of corporation which city had agreed not to assess, despite provision in decree construed as reserving to bondholders their rights to previously assessed but uncollected taxes, and future taxes, only.—McClung v. City of Elizabethton, 105 S.W.2d 95, 171 Tenn. 455.

surplus⁹⁷ and direct the payment of a fixed sum on such bonds annually.⁹⁸ A decree declaring the amount of money advanced for invalid bonds a lien on certain property purchased therewith is inconsistent with a bill which seeks to follow the money into such property, and seeks such property not as that of the city but as that of complainant.⁹⁹ In a suit for accounting of special assessments allegedly collected and misapplied, it has been held improper to direct the conduct of municipal officials as to future assessments.¹

A judgment must be enforced in accordance with specific statutory provisions if such provisions exist.² A statute prohibiting issuance of a fieri facias or any writ in the nature of a fieri facias on a money judgment against a municipality is ineffectual to limit the force and effect of a judgment against the municipality on bonds issued prior to its enactment.³

Where, as discussed supra § 1957, the circumstances are such that the municipality becomes liable to the holder of its bonds or other securities, although these are payable from a special tax or fund, the holder of the securities is entitled to recover the amount of principal and interest due thereon as damages.⁴ Where the bond issue has not matured, the damages are to be measured by the amount of the default in that issue occasioned by the breach of contract,⁵ but the amount of inevitable future defaults in interest or principal or both should be appropriately discounted.⁶

Interest may be recovered by a bondholder in a suit for accounting where the municipality, having collected funds applicable to the bonds, fails to apply them thereto.⁷ In an action at law to

Recovery on matured bonds

Where city issuing improvement bonds had breached its implied contractual obligation to exercise diligence, holders of matured bonds could recover face amount of bonds plus interest due and unpaid, the recovery being from collections on special assessments which had become absolutely payable and amounts raised by general taxes since the latter are in effect consequential damages imposed on the general taxpayers.—Bessemer Inv. Co. v. City of Chester, C.C.A.Pa., 113 F.2d 571.

Damages for breach of implied covenant

Where city broke implied covenant in improvement bonds providing they were dependent for their security only on assessments against property owners by negligence in enforcing collection of liens, resulting damage to bondholders was not unliquidated and limited to what might have been collected if city had been diligent, but bondholders were entitled to face amount of bonds and interest as therein provided.—Nagle Engine & Boiler Works v. City of Erie, 38 A.2d 225, 350 Pa. 158, followed in Pennsylvania Boiler Works v. City of Erie, 38 A.2d 229, 350 Pa. 167.

General judgments against city for damages in amount of principal and interest due on certificates, issued against street paving assessments, for negligence in allowing latter to become barred by limitations, were erroneous, since damage to certificate holders could not exceed real value of assessments pro rated to outstanding certificates.—City of El Paso v. West, C.C.A.Tex., 102 F.2d 927, rehearing denied 104 F. 2d 96, certiorari denied 60 S.Ct. 111, 308 U.S. 587, 84 L.Ed. 492, and West v. City of El Paso, 60 S.Ct. 111, 308 U.S. 587, 84 L.Ed. 492.

5. U.S.—Bessemer Inv. Co. v. City of Chester, C.C.A.Pa., 113 F.2d 571.

Bonds maturing after action commenced

Where action was brought by bondholders against city for breach of implied contractual obligation to exercise diligence regarding improvement bonds, as to bond issues which had matured since action was instituted, in determining damages check could be made against what had actually occurred.—Bessemer Inv. Co. v. City of Chester, supra.

6. U.S.—Bessemer Inv. Co. v. City of Chester, supra.

7. Ill.—Rothschild v. Village of Calumet Park, 183 N.E. 337, 350 Ill. 330—Cook v. City of Staunton, 14 N.E.2d 696, 295 Ill.App. 111—O'Laughlin Co. v. Village of Stickney, 9 N.E.2d 589, 291 Ill.App. 606.

Allowance of interest improper

A decree, allowing holder of city special assessment bonds interest on amount of assessment funds wrong-

recover interest past due on municipal bonds, the bondholder has been held not to be entitled to a judgment directing how and when the municipality shall pay.⁸ A statute allowing creditors interest on money withheld by unreasonable and vexatious delay of payment authorizes allowance of interest on special assessments collected and wrongfully withheld, even though the bonds are interest-bearing.⁹

In a proceeding to recover back the money paid for invalid municipal securities, interest may be awarded¹⁰ at the legal rate¹¹ from the time the city denied its obligation to pay.¹²

Where a municipality, having issued improvement bonds and levied assessments against property in the improvement district, acquires certain lots therein subject to delinquent assessments, a bondholder has been held to be entitled to a money judgment against the city for the amount of unpaid installments of principal¹³ and for accrued interest and penalties to the date on which the property was acquired.¹⁴

Effect of debt limitation. Where part of an issue of bonds is in excess of a limitation of indebtedness, judgment may be awarded for,¹⁵ and only for,¹⁶ the amount of indebtedness which the municipality could lawfully contract.

Lien of judgment. Under some statutes a judgment against an improvement district on certificates issued by it creates a general lien against the property of the district analogous to judgment liens against the property of other judgment debtors.¹⁷

Conclusiveness of judgment. In the absence of fraud in obtaining the judgment,¹⁸ a judgment in favor of the holder of bonds issued by a city, in an action thereon, is conclusive on the parties as to the validity of the bonds;¹⁹ but a judgment at law on a bond is not conclusive on the question whether it is entitled to share in the benefit of a trust imposed by statute, by which the property and revenues of the corporation were pledged to the payment of bonds issued under the authority of the statute.²⁰

Nonnegotiable securities. Purchasers of non-negotiable special assessment bonds, who were not innocent purchasers for value, could not recover the amount of funds not distributed pro rata on the bonds where excess payments made to previous owners of the bonds exceeded the amounts which would have been paid to the purchasers if proper pro rata distribution had been made.²¹ fully diverted by city from payment of bonds, was erroneous, in absence of evidence as to when assessments were collected and funds diverted.—Reconstruction Finance Corporation v. Calumet City, 57 N.E.2d 290, 324 Ill.App. 73.

Time from which allowable

A city which had collected the improvement assessments levied to pay particular bonds but had diverted the proceeds to pay other bonds became liable for payment of interest on amount misappropriated from date on which bondholders became entitled to demand and receive the funds under the bonds, but, in absence of evidence as to exact date when funds were collected, bondholders were allowed interest from dates of institution of suits against city to recover for money had and received.—Cook v. City of Staunton, 14 N.E.2d 696, 295 Ill.App. 111.

8. N.Y.—Van Derzee v. City of Long Beach, 31 N.Y.S.2d 359, 177 Misc. 894.

Remedy for collection of judgment

(1) In an action at law to recover interest past-due on city bonds, plaintiff was not entitled to a judgment directing city's fiscal officer to set apart and apply to payment of interest the first revenues received by him after receipt of a certified copy of a judgment to that effect in accordance with constitutional provision, but a proceeding in mandamus was the proper remedy for plaintiff to follow to collect the judgment recovered.—Van Derzee v. City of Long Beach, supra.

(2) The constitutional provision declaring that, if a city fails to make appropriations to pay interest on indebtedness, the fiscal officer of the city may be required to set apart and apply the first revenues received at the suit of any holder of obligations issued for indebtedness, was not intended to give to a bondholder-judgment creditor the absolute power to paralyze a city by enforcing his judgment, but the words "may be required" indicate the intention to permit the exercise of discretion in enforcing the provision.—Van Derzee v. City of Long Beach, supra.

Effect of improvements after acquisition

Where city issued street improvement bonds and levied assessments to pay principal and interest, and thereafter city took lots by purchase from owner subject to delinquent assessments and statutory lien, and there was neither pleading nor proof that bondholder had actual knowledge of conveyance or erection of improvements thereafter, taking as between city and bondholder could not be treated as equivalent to title by condemnation in absence of elements of estoppel, and amount of bondholder's recovery could not be limited to value of lots as of date of conveyance to city exclusive of value of later improvements.—*City of Eufaula, Okla., v. D. TAXES AND OTHER REVENUE AND APPLICATION THEREOF

1. POWER TO TAX

a. In General

To the extent that it is exercised by a municipal corporation, the power to tax is merely a delegated power, and is not possessed by a municipal corporation unless it has been plainly and unmistakably granted either in express terms or by necessary implication. Where the power has been granted, it is subject to such limitations and restrictions as may be placed on it, and it is not to be arbitrarily exercised, although the exercise of the power is within the discretion of the municipal governing authority.

The power to tax, inherent only in sovereignty, and belonging exclusively to the legislative department of the government, is, to the extent that it is exercised by a municipal corporation, merely a delegated power,²² and is not possessed by a municipal corporation unless it has been plainly and unmistakably granted to it either in express terms or by necessary implication.²³ It cannot be vested in a

Exercise of power. In exercising the taxing power a municipal corporation is a mere agency for, and political subdivision of, the state,³² and the levy and collection of taxes constitute one of the purely governmental functions of a municipal corporation.³³ While the power granted is not to be arbitrarily exercised,³⁴ the exercise of the taxing power granted to a municipal corporation is within the discretion of the municipal governing authority,³⁵ which has the power to supply in appropriate manner details necessary for the full exercise of the power.³⁶ The courts are not concerned with the wisdom of municipal action,³⁷ and will not interfere with the exercise of such discretion unless it is clearly apparent that the tax fixed by the municipal lawmaking body is arbitrary, un-

Classification

The latitude allowed a municipal legislative body in making classifications in a pure revenue measure is more restricted than in a police regulation, since element of regulating particular businesses because of their nature is missing.—Edmonds v. City of St. Louis, 156 S.W.2d 619, 348 Mo. 1063.

Powers of legislative and executive departments compared

Power to tax rests entirely with city's legislative department, which must determine how much money is to be spent and for what purposes, and which must raise appropriations, and power to expend rests with the executive departments, and legislative department is not required to uphold estimates of each executive department no matter what effect such estimates would have on public needs and the constitutional tax limitation.—Hutton v. Goodsell, 84 N.Y. S.2d 734, 274 App.Div. 373.

Tax levy by municipality, which is germane to purposes for which municipality was incorporated and is not in excess of limitation fixed by constitution or general law, is matter of local concern governed by charter.—City of Portland v. Welch, 59 P.2d 228, 154 Or. 286, 106 A.L.R. 1188.

reasonable, oppressive, or prohibitive.³⁸ A municipal property tax is neither a debt nor a contractual obligation, but an exaction or impost, levied by authority of the municipality, on property within its borders, for its support, and a charge on the land taxed.³⁹ The exercise of the power is a sovereign act,⁴⁰ and cannot be made to depend on contract.⁴¹ Power to levy taxes for municipal purposes is in no way, and to no extent, impaired by the exercise by a county of its powers to levy taxes for county purposes.⁴²

§ 1979. Express or Implied Power

Generally the power of a municipal corporation to tax need not be expressly conferred, but may be implied from the grant of other powers; but the power cannot be extended by implication.

While it has been said that the power of a municipal corporation to levy a tax is never implied,⁴³ but must directly and specifically be granted,⁴⁴ as a general rule the power to tax need not be expressly conferred, but may be implied from the grant of other powers,⁴⁵ even in jurisdictions where a constitutional provision authorizes the legislature to grant to municipalities power to impose taxes "in such manner as shall be prescribed by law,"⁴⁶ or requires the legislature to restrict the taxing power of municipalities to prevent its abuse.⁴⁷ In some decisions, as discussed supra § 1878, the courts have regarded the power of taxation as essential to the life of a municipal corporation and have accorded weight to this consideration in arriving at the conclusion that the power is implied.⁴⁸ In other decisions it has been said that the power cannot be deduced from any consideration of convenience⁴⁹ or necessity,⁵⁰ and that no doubtful inference from other powers granted,⁵¹ or from obscure provisions of the law,⁵² will be sufficient to establish an implied power of taxation; and hence it has been held that the power is not to be implied from authority to enact by-laws for the good government of the municipality,⁵³ or from a mere grant of police power to regulate certain callings,⁵⁴ since the rule is that a municipality cannot, in the exercise of its police power, levy taxes,⁵⁵ although it is but reasonable and fair to require the thing that necessitates policing to pay the expense thereof.⁵⁶

the grant of further power to tax arises from an express power to levy and collect particular taxes,⁵⁸ and so, as considered infra § 2000, where only the power to tax real property has been delegated, the municipality cannot tax personal property. Likewise, a municipal corporation cannot tax property outside the municipal limits under a power to tax property within such limits.⁵⁹ As discussed infra § 1992, a power to tax for general purposes does not include a power to tax for special or unusual purposes.

§ 1980. Constitutional Grant

Municipal power to tax may be granted by express constitutional provisions or implied from constitutional provisions conferring other powers; but, where it is contended that the state has yielded a part of its sovereign power, the rule of liberal construction does not apply.

Municipal power to tax may be granted by express constitutional provisions,⁶⁰ or it may be implied from constitutional provisions conferring on municipal corporations, or certain classes thereof, power to enact and amend their own charters;⁶¹ but where the contention is made that the state has yielded to a community a part of the sovereign power, the rule of liberal construction does not apply, but it must clearly and unambiguously appear that the state has done so in apt words contained in its constitution.⁶² Thus the power to tax will not be implied from constitutional provisions limiting the power where such provisions are consistent with the assumption that the source of the taxing power is in the legislature,⁶³ and, where a home-rule amendment explicitly excepts from its operation the power to levy particular taxes, it has been held that to the extent of the exception the legislature is the source of municipal taxing power.⁶⁴ A constitutional provision that municipal corporate authorities "shall be vested" with power to tax is a direction to the legislature, and not an immediate conferring of the power.⁶⁵ Taxes levied under an assumed charter authority may be validated by a direct constitutional provision.⁶⁶

§ 1981. Statutory Grant

Municipal power to tax may be granted by express statutory provisions.

The power of a municipal corporation to tax may be granted by express statutory provisions.⁶⁷

Subject to constitutional limitations and exceptions, the legislature has power to delegate to a municipal corporation authority to levy taxes for local purposes within its corporate limits.⁶⁸ It may confer such measure of power with respect thereto as it deems expedient where it is not different from, or greater than, the power possessed by the state itself,⁶⁹ even though constitutional provisions relating to this power make no reference in terms to a delegation of the power to the municipality;⁷⁰ but the legislature cannot empower a municipal corporation to impose a tax for a purpose for which the state itself cannot tax,⁷¹ and, in order to sustain the authorization of the power to tax, the purpose of the municipality must be governmental.⁷² If there is any fair and reasonable doubt as to the extent of power delegated, in accordance with the rules stated infra § 1983 a, the doubt must be resolved against the municipality claiming the right to exercise it.

b. Constitutional Restrictions or Requirements

A legislature granting to a municipal corporation authority to exercise the taxing power must observe constitutional provisions, requirements, limitations, or restrictions.

must observe and keep within constitutional provisions, requirements, limitations, or restrictions,⁷³ as, for example, provisions that the legislature shall restrict the municipal power of taxation⁷⁴ and that taxes shall be assessed on the basis of the value of the property⁷⁵ to be ascertained in proceedings which shall protect the taxpayer's constitutional rights;⁷⁶ and statutes are not unconstitutional as long as they accord with the fundamental constitutional concepts.⁷⁷ A statute granting the power of taxation to a municipality may not be invalid because it does not in terms contain the constitutional restrictions or limitations,⁷⁸ as where it does not attempt to dispense with them,⁷⁹ or the power is conferred by charter, and regulations conforming to the constitution are made by general laws.⁸⁰ A constitutional requirement that a statute which imposes, continues, or revives a tax shall distinctly state the tax and the object to which it is to be applied, does not apply to a statute which does not itself impose a tax but merely authorizes certain cities to do so,⁸¹ or which extends the lien of a tax,⁸² and, even if it is regarded as applicable, it is complied with where the tax and the object to which it is to be applied are stated with precision.⁸³ The welfare clause in general statutes conferring powers on municipalities and usually found in their charters cannot be cited or expanded to defeat constitutional limitations on the power of municipalities to tax.⁸⁴

Provisions requiring delegation. While constitutional provisions which require the legislature to authorize municipal corporations to assess and impose taxes for municipal purposes,⁸⁵ or which declare that the legislature itself shall not impose taxes on municipal corporations, or the inhabitants or property thereof, for municipal purposes,⁸⁶ may be mandatory, nevertheless the legislature may, without violating such a constitutional provision, enact a law providing for the appointment of state officers to supervise the action of municipal taxing

c. Taxation within District

The legislature may provide for the creation of a new taxing district in a municipal corporation or for the combination of two or more municipal corporations into one taxing district, and delegate to the governing board thereof power to tax for proper purposes.

The legislature may provide for the creation of a new taxing district in a municipal corporation theretofore divided into districts,⁹⁰ or may provide for the combination of two or more municipal corporations into one taxing district,⁹¹ and delegate to the governing board of the district power to tax for a particular purpose,⁹² where such board is elected by the inhabitants of the political divisions of the district;⁹³ but it has no power to provide for the taxation of a district less in area than a municipality for benefits accruing generally to the municipality.⁹⁴ Consolidation acts and amendments

providing for the consolidation of a city and the outlying territory, in so far as they provide for separate taxing districts to equalize the burdens of the old and new parts of the city, have been held to be a valid exercise of the legislative power.⁹⁵

d. Delegation to Officers, Boards, or Individuals

The legislature ordinarily has no power to authorize persons not corporate officers functioning as the legislative branch of the government to levy a tax without the consent of those to be affected thereby or the municipal authorities; but boards or individuals occupying no legislative position may be delegated duties with respect to taxation which are advisory or ministerial in their nature.

The legislature ordinarily has no power to authorize persons not corporate officers to levy a tax, either directly or indirectly, without the consent of those to be affected thereby, or the municipal authorities,⁹⁶ and the term "corporate officers," within the meaning of a constitutional provision so restricting the power, refers exclusively to the legislative branch of the city government,⁹⁷ and to the members thereof when they are functioning as the legislative branch of the government;⁹⁸ but in some instances, where the consent of the taxpay-

Constitutional provision that taxes for the several corporate bodies may be levied only by their corporate authorities did not apply to provision in housing co-operation act that city may serve as agent to contract for all taxing bodies within city with reference to service charges assessed against housing authorities' property, since charge was not a tax.—Krause v. Peoria Housing Authority, 19 N.E.2d 193, 370 Ill. 356.

Statutes held not unconstitutional

(1) Act pursuant to which water and sewer subdistrict was created for fire protection and garbage disposal is not an unconstitutional delegation of the taxing power in view of provision stating that until the principal and interest of all bonds issued under the act shall be fully paid, there shall be levied annually on all taxable property in the subdistrict a tax sufficient to pay interest and to provide a sinking fund, since the legislature itself has levied the tax, and the subdistrict has no discretion in the matter.—Floyd v. Parker Water & Sewer Sub-District, 17 S.E.2d 223, 203 S.C. 276.

(2) Fact that statute authorized city mayor to appoint directors by reason of whose acts property was taxed to care for dependent and neglected children was held not objectionable as authorizing taxation without representation.—Fox v. Board for Louisville & Jefferson County Children's Home, 50 S.W.2d 67, 244 Ky. 1.

ers may be implied from a long-continued custom,⁹⁹ constitutional provisions for the encouragement of intellectual improvement "by all suitable means" have been construed to permit a delegation of the taxing power to municipal boards or departments with jurisdiction over such matters.¹ Furthermore, boards or individuals occupying no legislative position may be delegated duties with respect to taxation which are advisory or ministerial in their nature.²

"Corporate authorities," within the meaning of a constitutional provision limiting the power of the legislature to delegate the right of taxation to any other than corporate or local authorities, are those municipal officers who are either directly elected by the people to be taxed or appointed in some mode to which the people have given their consent.³ In the absence of constitutional restrictions to the contrary, the taxing power may be delegated to corporate authorities who are appointed rather than elected,⁴ such as a board or department appointed by the state independently of consent of the taxpayers,⁵ or, in accordance with the principles stated supra subdivision b of this section, where the state has a sovereign interest in matters within the jurisdiction of the board.

Private individual or private corporation. The power to tax cannot be delegated to a private individual or private corporation.⁶

§ 1983. — Construction and Operation of Statutes

- a. In general
- b. General laws and special charters or statutes

a. In General

Statutes conferring on municipal corporations authority to impose taxes must be strictly construed, and doubts or ambiguities arising from the terms used by the legislature must be resolved against the municipality and in favor of the taxpayers; but the courts must not defeat the legislative intent by turning the language used from its natural and obvious meaning.

Statutes conferring on municipal corporations authority to impose taxes must be strictly construed,⁷ and there must be strict compliance with

La.—National Bank of Commerce in New Orleans v. Board of Supervisors of La. State University and Agricultural and Mechanical College, 20 So.2d 264, 206 La. 913.

Certification of amount of tax

A statute authorizing others than corporate authorities to act in an advisory capacity in certifying the amount of the tax is not unconstitutional where the final determination rests with the city council.—People ex rel. Schlaeger v. Jarmuth, 75 N. E.2d 367, 398 Ill. 66.

Appraisal of property

The statute providing for sale of realty where market value is less than total amount of municipal tax claims, and providing that there should be no sale under fixed upset price to be fixed by board of revision of taxes, is not invalid as unlawfully authorizing the board to place valuation on property against which there exists a tax claim which is in excess of the market value of the property, since board has been merely designated for the purpose of making an appraisal and can do so only under the conditions prescribed by the act.—Burkley v. City of Philadelphia, 15 A.2d 201, 339 Pa. 426

Supervisory board

Provision of firemen's annuity and benefit fund act making member cities liable for one half total sum estimated by local retirement board to be necessary for expenses including proportionate share of expenses of supervisory board and giving supervisory board unlimited powers relative to incurring of expenses is unconstitutional as an unlawful attempt to invest power of taxation in persons who do not constitute the corporate authorities of cities on whom liabilities are imposed.—People ex rel. Gallenbach v. Franklin, 58 N.E.2d 555, 388 Ill. 560.

Statute authorizing officials of participating governmental units, not board of trustees elected from such units' officers and employees, to levy special taxes in limited amounts to pay units contributions for administration and operation of retirement system, if fund is insufficient therefor, is not unconstitutional as vesting power of taxation in others than corporate authorities.—McFarlane v. Purpose of statute

Statute requiring city council to determine amount of appropriation for corporate purposes and levy taxes for amount so ascertained by ordinance specifying in detail purposes for which appropriations are made, and amount appropriated for each purpose respectively, is for taxpayer's protection and designed to give him information in detail of each specific corporate purpose for which municipal taxes are levied.—People ex rel. Hoennicke v. New York Cent. R. Co., 196 N.E. 815, 360 Ill. 569.

General assembly by revised cities and village act granting to cities and villages power to license, tax, regulate or prohibit certain businesses has combined the power to tax with power to license.—City of Bloomington v. Ramey, 66 N.E.2d 385, 393 Ill. 467.

Enumeration of particular powers

Under provision of city home-rule law authorizing cities to adopt and amend local laws relating to preparation, making, confirmation, and correction of local assessments for taxation purposes, and the levy, collection, and administration of city taxes on realty, the enumeration of the powers was not intended to imply that any of such powers was not included within the power of city to adopt and amend local laws in relation to its property, affairs, and government.—Griffin v. City of Syracuse, 38 N.Y.S.2d 476, 179 Misc. 250.

and, if a statute is capable of a reasonable construction upholding its constitutionality, such a construction will be favored over one having a different result.¹⁷

Taxation statutes relating to the same subject matter should be construed together and harmonized if possible;¹⁸ and, in order to ascertain the intention of the legislature in the amendment of a statute, the course of legislation on the subject and conditions created under the former statutory provisions may be considered.¹⁹

General or limited grant. The enumeration of particular objects and purposes of taxation is deemed to be an exclusion of all others not enumerated,²⁰ but an authority to vote taxes for certain specified purposes and other necessary charges is not an enumeration within the meaning of this rule.²¹ If a general power of taxation is granted, the municipal corporation has all the power that the legislature itself possesses in respect of the imposition of a municipal tax;²² but, as discussed infra § 1992, where general taxation alone is authorized, the sum required may not be raised by special taxation. Likewise, a grant of power to impose a special tax will not confer authority to accomplish the same purpose by a general tax.²³ A rule of construction embodied in a city charter that enumeration of any particular power granted in the charter shall not limit or impair any general grant of power contained therein does not delegate to the city the power to assess, levy, and collect taxes which have not been authorized by charter or statute.²⁴

Mandatory provisions. Provisions in a statute designed for the protection of the taxpayer are mandatory.²⁵

Retroactive operation. Statutes authorizing municipal corporations to impose taxes do not have a retroactive operation²⁶ except where it is so provided in express terms.²⁷

b. General Laws and Special Charters or Statutes

While ordinarily the charter or act of incorporation is the source and measure of the taxing power of a municipal corporation, the taxing power may under some circumstances be exercised under general statutes independently of the charter.

The charter or act of incorporation ordinarily is the source and measure of the taxing power of a municipal corporation;²⁸ but the taxing power may be exercised under general statutes independently of the charter, in the absence of controlling provisions therein to the contrary,²⁹ especially where the general law is by its terms applicable to municipalities operating under special charters³⁰ or where the charter provisions are not self-executing and the municipal authorities have not acted thereon.³¹ Under a grant of powers incident to corporations of like character under the general laws of the state, a municipality has all the powers of taxation granted to municipalities generally under the general laws.³² In the case of a conflict between statutes covering the same subject matter, a special statute will prevail over a general law otherwise applicable.³³

General tax laws applicable to state and county taxation apply to municipalities only as far as, by the provisions of the laws imposing and regulating municipal taxation, they are either expressly or impliedly adopted.³⁴ In the absence of such adoption, a general law intended for other governmental units is not applicable to municipal taxation.³⁵

§ 1984. Change, Repeal, or Forfeiture of Power

- a. In general
- b. Presumption or implication

a. In General

Except where vested rights are concerned, the power of municipal corporations to tax may be enlarged, abridged, or entirely withdrawn, or taxing districts may be abolished, at the pleasure of the legislature; and on the dissolution of a municipal corporation the taxing power reverts to the state, but mere long continued nonuser will not be construed as a forfeiture of the power to tax.

At the pleasure of the legislature the power of municipal corporations to levy taxes, except where vested rights are concerned, may be enlarged, abridged, or entirely withdrawn,³⁶ or taxing districts may be abolished.³⁷ The law, however, remains unchanged to the extent that a repealing statute reenacts the provisions of the earlier law,³⁸ and in the change from one scheme of taxation to another the two laws must be read together, and omissions in the later law supplied by provisions in the earlier law whenever necessary for the support of a complete taxation system.³⁹ The legislature can take away the taxing power even after the tax has been legally assessed⁴⁰ or a vote authorizing a levy has been taken;⁴¹ it may authorize a city to alter its method of raising funds for an improvement from a special tax on the property benefited to a general tax on all the taxable property of the city,⁴² even though the change is not made until after completion of the improvement;⁴³ or it may authorize a municipality to divert funds raised for a specified purpose to other purposes;⁴⁴ but it cannot release the payment of taxes already levied.⁴⁵ Since municipal taxing power, as discussed supra § 1978, is only a delegation of part of the taxing power of the state, if the state does anything that alters or destroys its power to tax, the defect reaches to the municipal power.⁴⁶ A statute which authorizes a municipal corporation to increase its taxing power by a two-thirds vote of the council requires that two thirds of the aldermen constituting the council vote in favor of the proposition.⁴⁷

Forfeiture of power. Where power has been delegated, mere nonuser by the municipality of its power to tax certain property, no matter for how long continued, cannot be construed as a forfeiture of the power.⁴⁸ Where powers to tax are conferred by several distinct statutes, the exhaustion of the power under one statute will not affect powers existing under other statutes.⁴⁹ On the dissolution of a municipal corporation the taxing power reverts to the state,⁵⁰ and is to be exercised thereafter by the state.⁵¹

will not be presumed in the absence of a clear expression of the legislative intent.

Withdrawal or alteration of the power of taxation will not be presumed in the absence of a clear expression of the legislative intent.⁵² In the case of a conflict between general statutes covering the same subject matter and to the extent of the conflict, the later statute has been held to supersede an earlier statute in the absence of any provision therein to the contrary.⁵³ While the passing of a general law will not modify or impair former special laws authorizing the collection of taxes in the absence of a clear legislative intent that it shall so operate,⁵⁴ a change in the law takes place, to the extent intended by the legislature, where such intent clearly appears.⁵⁵ Where the clear general intent of the legislature is to establish a uniform system by providing for a new scheme of taxation, the presumption is that the scheme of taxation provided by the local acts is intended to be repealed.⁵⁶ A statute authorizing a municipal corporation to impose a tax and giving taxpayers a right to vote is not affected, as far as the tax is concerned, by a subsequent constitutional limitation or annulment of the right to vote.⁵⁷

b. Limitations on Power

§ 1985. Constitutional Restrictions in General

Limitations on municipal power to tax may be imposed by constitutional provisions expressly referring to municipal corporations or by provisions limiting the taxing power of the state, but provisions evidently intended to apply to state taxation only will not operate as a restriction on municipal corporations. Constitutional limitations should be strictly interpreted, and the courts may pass on the reasonableness and legality of ordinances imposing taxes, but not on their wisdom or folly.

Held not to constitute double taxation

(1) The fact that a business may be required to pay regulatory taxes under police power of a city, under one ordinance, and to also pay additional property taxes for purpose of revenue under another ordinance does not render the ordinances illegal or void on ground of double taxation.—Redwood Theatres v. City of Modesto, 196 P.2d 119, 86 Cal.App.2d 907.

(2) A home-rule city's annexation of territory embraced in water control and improvement district and water conservation districts was not void as subjecting private property within the annexed districts to taxation both by the city and the districts for purposes and services which could be rendered by only one of them, since the city and the districts were separate entities to each of which had been delegated the power to tax.—City of Pelly v. Harris County Water Control & Imp.

Dist. No. 7, 198 S.W.2d 450, 145 Tex. 443.

§ 1986. Legislative Restrictions in General

The legislature may place limitations on the exercise of the taxing power of municipal corporations, and restrictions thus imposed must be observed.

Since, as discussed supra § 1982 a, the legislature has authority to delegate the taxing power to municipalities, it may also place limitations on the exercise of such power,⁷³ and restrictions thus imposed by the legislature must be observed.⁷⁴ Under a constitutional provision authorizing the enactment of laws to limit the power of municipalities to levy taxes, the legislature may impose the limitation impliedly,⁷⁵ as by levying the same or a similar tax, and thus preempting the field.⁷⁶ Charter tax limitations are applicable only to the ordinary course of municipal operations, and have no application to additional undertakings inaugurated pursuant to additional legislative action.⁷⁷

§ 1987. Public Purpose

- a. In general
- b. Particular municipal purposes

a. In General

A municipal power to levy a tax is subject to the restriction that it must be for a municipal or public purpose; and the action of a state or municipal legislative body in determining a tax to be for a public purpose is subject to review by the courts, which will not, however, interfere except for clear abuse of power or unless the absence of public interest is clear and palpable.

A municipal power to levy a tax is subject to the restriction that it must be for a municipal or public purpose as distinguished from a private purpose,⁷⁸ and the legislature has no power to authorize the imposition of a tax for which the municipal corporation receives no benefit;⁷⁹ but the validity of a tax may be upheld on the presumption that it is levied for a public purpose in the absence of evidence to the contrary.⁸⁰ If the main object of the tax is to accomplish a proper municipal purpose it cannot be defeated on the ground that it may be used incidentally for a private purpose;⁸¹ but the incidental benefits which accrue to the inhabitants of the municipality from the development of its commercial interests will not sustain a tax in aid of such interests as being made for a public purpose.⁸² A tax is not necessarily void in toto where it is levied partly for a public

(3) A corporate purpose is such as is germane to the objects of the creation of the municipal corporation, or has a legitimate connection with those objects, and a manifest relation thereto—People ex rel. Toman v. Otis' Estate, 33 N.E.2d 202, 376 Ill. 112—People ex rel. Illinois Armory Board v. Kelly, supra—Kocsis v. Chicago Park Dist., supra—*Robbins v. Purpose both public and municipal Taxes levied by municipality must be for both public and municipal purpose.—Vrooman v. City of St. Louis, 88 S.W.2d 189, 337 Mo. 933.

Public interest, necessity, or convenience

Municipalities may use power of taxation only in public interest; they may not commercialize power of taxation, and the power of a municipality to tax must be exercised only for public necessity or convenience.—Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. City of Lakeland, 115 So. 669, 94 Fla. 347.

Benefit to municipality as whole

(1) Municipal taxation refers to municipal purposes that are beneficial to municipality as a whole.—Klemm v. Davenport, 129 So. 904, 100 Fla. 627, 70 A.L.R. 156.

(2) Objects to be attained must affect people as community and not merely as individuals.—Briggs v. City of Raleigh, 141 S.E. 597, 195 N.C. 223.

(3) Cities may impose a tax if funds collected from particular levy are to be used for benefit of all persons residing within the area.—Shilito v. City of Spartanburg, 51 S.E.2d 95, 214 S.C. 11.

(4) Where ad valorem tax is levied against all taxable property within village on ad valorem basis, validity does not depend on the receipt of some special benefit as distinguished from general benefit to the community.—O'Flynn v. Village of East Rochester, 54 N.E.2d 343, 292

N.Y. 156, certiorari denied 65 S.Ct. 39, 323 U.S. 713, 89 L.Ed. 574.

A municipal power to tax for benefits is bounded by its present or reasonably present capacity to replace taxes exacted with a commensurate benefit.—Smith v. City of Winter Haven, 18 So.2d 4, 154 Fla. 439.

Definite expression of corporate power required

The constitutional limitation on power of legislature to vest municipal subdivisions with taxing power, that taxes must be for corporate purposes necessarily implies that corporate purposes for which levy is made must be in some manner definitely expressed.—Weyerhaeuser Timber Co. v. Roessler, 97 P.2d 1070, 2 Wash.2d 304, 126 A.L.R. 882.

Constitutional provision authorizing the legislature to vest municipal corporations with power to assess and collect taxes for corporate purposes is a limitation on the vesting of the power to tax, and the legislature cannot vest such power in any municipal corporation other than the one for whose corporate purpose the tax is to be levied.—*People ex rel. purpose and partly for a private one.⁸³ Public purposes may include both proprietary and governmental purposes.⁸⁴ The application of these rules varies with the different and changing requirements of different states and localities;⁸⁵ and the question of what constitutes a municipal purpose should be determined as of the time the constitution is construed, rather than as of the time of its adoption,⁸⁶ and is dependent on the facts involved.⁸⁷

While the action of a state or municipal legislative body in determining a tax to be for a public purpose may be reviewed by the courts,⁸⁸ ordinarily the legislature may declare what is a municipal purpose of taxation, and a duly enacted statute designating a municipal purpose is subject only to the provisions of the constitution,⁸⁹ and the courts will not interfere with the action of a state or municipal legislative body except for clear abuse of power,⁹⁰ or unless the absence of public interest is clear and palpable,⁹¹ especially where the municipality acted under a home-rule statute.⁹² In determining the question of public purpose within the power to tax, the municipal council engages in the exercise of its legislative, as distinguished from either its administrative or judicial, powers.⁹³ Authority to vote a tax "for any purpose for which the council may call an election" is construed to mean any lawful purpose.⁹⁴

Whether a tax is necessary for purposes embraced within a charter is to be determined by the taxing power.⁹⁵

b. Particular Municipal Purposes

Municipal activities which the courts have sustained as public uses for which a tax may be levied include the reasonable use of public money for objects to promote the general welfare and the health, amusement, and recreation of the people, and to advertise the attractions and assets of the municipality.

Constitutional provisions authorizing municipal taxes for corporate purposes permit reasonable use of public money for objects to promote the general welfare;⁹⁶ and municipal activities which the courts have sustained as public uses for which a tax may be levied embrace health,⁹⁷ amusement,⁹⁸ recreation,⁹⁹ and advertising by a municipality of its attractions and assets.¹ Thus taxes upheld as

One of the purposes for which local governments are organized is to preserve the peace and order of the community, and to prevent and suppress riots, affrays, and disorder therein. Donating funds or property for an armory in a city is in furtherance of that corporate function, and thus is for a corporate purpose, particularly in view of the statute providing that cities are liable to the owner of property injured or destroyed in a riot of twelve or more persons, since the location of an armory and a military force in a city naturally tends to prevent such a liability.—*People ex rel. Although, when a proposition is presented to impose additional burdens on the people by taxation, it has been said to be the public policy to submit the proposition to a vote of the qualified electors to be affected by such proposed increase of taxation,⁴⁶ as a general rule, in the absence of any constitutional or statutory provisions to the contrary, a submission to the voters is not essential to the validity of a tax levy;⁴⁷ nor is a popular

Tax anticipation warrants are not obligations of the taxing municipality but represent taxes that have already been levied and presumably will be paid by the taxpayer, so that a tax for payment of defaulted tax anticipation warrants is a tax to pay that which is not a debt of the taxing district, but would amount to double taxation and is not for a corporate purpose.—*People ex rel. Ordinances under initiative and referendum laws generally see supra §§ 449-461.

Where amendment of city charter authorized city to advertise city, provision in amendment for tax was surplusage and except for limitation thereon amounted to no more than a confirmation of the authority necessarily incident to, and implied from, the general grant of power to advertise, and its only effect was restrictive so that tax could not exceed the amount authorized, and was not required to be submitted to voters, whether or not taxpayers.—Moreland v. City of San Antonio, Tex. Civ. App., 116 S.W.2d 823, error refused.

Ordinance held not subject to referendum

An ordinance levying an ad valorem tax, the enactment of which was declared an emergency measure, and which consisted of many integral paragraphs, was not subject to referendum under city charter which contained provisions for reference of ordinances.—Denman v. Quin, Tex. Civ. App., 116 S.W.2d 783, error refused.

Constitutionality of charter provision

(1) Constitutional provision directing that laws providing for tax levies, appropriations for current expenses of state government and state institutions and emergency laws necessary for immediate preservation of public peace, health, and safety shall not be subject to referendum applies only to acts of general assembly, and places no limitation on referendum powers reserved to people of a municipality—State ex rel. Snyder v. Board of Elections of Lucas County, 69 N.E.2d 634, 78 Ohio App. 194, appeal dismissed 67 N.E.2d 322, 146 Ohio St. 556.

(2) Provisions of city charter for a referendum on all ordinances, including one levying a tax passed as an emergency measure, do not violate such constitutional provision—State ex rel. Snyder v. Board of Elections of Lucas County, supra.

Construction and effect of constitutional provisions prohibiting municipality from contracting debt except for necessary expenses unless authorized to do so by popular vote see supra § 1860.

What constitutes necessary expenses

(1) The term "necessary expenses," as used in constitutional limitation, although not implying expenses without which government cannot exist, implies a certain degree of exigency, the essentials of frugality and economy, and a definite quality, governmental in character, which does not yield to arguments of convenience, and which cannot be dismissed from the provision without depriving it of all significance—Purser v. Ledbetter, 40 S.E.2d 702, 227 N.C. 1.

(2) Courts determine what class of expenditures by municipal corporations come under definition of "necessary expenses," but governing authorities of municipality determine when such expenditures are needed, and, except in cases of fraud, courts cannot control discretion of commissioners—Starmount Co. v. Town of Hamilton Lakes, 171 S.E. 909, 205 N.C. 514.

(3) Expense of acquiring and constructing electric plant for municipal use and for the comfort and convenience of the inhabitants of the municipality is a necessary expense.—Williamson v. City of High Point, 195 S.E. 90, 213 N.C. 96.

(4) Issuance of bonds for water and sewer and street improvement was for necessary expense.—Starmount Co. v. Town of Hamilton Lakes, supra.

(5) City expenditures for park and recreational purposes were not "necessary expenses" within constitutional provision—Purser v. Ledbetter, supra.

(6) Public hospital is not "necessary expense" of town—Burleson v. Board of Aldermen of Town of Spruce Pines, 156 S.E. 241, 200 N.C. 30.

54. N.C.—Williamson v. City of High Point, 195 S.E. 90, 213 N.C. 96—Henderson v. City of Wilmington, 132 S.E. 25, 191 N.C. 269.

44 C.J. p 1273 note 7.

imposition for necessary expenses is the exception.⁵⁶ A tax for a public purpose levied by legislative authority and approved by popular vote is valid under such constitutional provision without regard to whether the tax is for a necessary purpose within the meaning of the constitutional provision.⁵⁷

Resubmission. The requirement of a general law that proposed taxes once rejected by vote of the people shall not be resubmitted within a stated term thereafter does not apply to municipalities organized under special charters permitting submission at any time within the discretion of the governing board.⁵⁸

b. Sufficiency in General

Constitutional or statutory provisions specifically relating to elections on taxing propositions control with respect to the sufficiency of the submission; but, in the absence of such provisions, the rules relating to general elections control as far as applicable. Mere informalties or irregularities which cannot prejudice any substantial rights will not affect the validity of the tax.

Where the statute provides no method for the conduct of the election, it must be conducted in the manner provided for general elections in the municipality where it is held.⁵⁹ Where the statute prescribes a method, substantial compliance with its terms is necessary to validate the levy,⁶⁰ and the municipal corporation cannot avail itself of proceedings in an earlier election, in which the proposal for a tax had been defeated.⁶¹ The election must be authorized by ordinance, not by resolution, when the statute so requires,⁶² but an amendment to the ordinance after notice of the election has been given will not vitiate it, if the amendment does not materially affect its essential parts.⁶³ The submission of a tax proposition at a primary election is not sufficient under a charter or statute requiring its submission at a general or special election.⁶⁴ A November general election is a regular election within the meaning of a statute requiring the question to be submitted at a regular election.⁶⁵

Generally, a majority in number and amount of those participating in the election is sufficient to authorize the tax,⁶⁶ unless constitutional or statutory provisions require a larger vote in favor of the tax.⁶⁷

Taxpayers' petition for election. The taxpayers' petition for an election to authorize a special tax must conform to statutory requirements,⁶⁸ but it will be presumed that municipal officers have performed their duty in approving the petition as signed by the requisite number of qualified voters.⁶⁹ Such a petition has been held to be valid where it sets forth the tax rate and total amount of the tax to be levied and the purpose for which it is to be used.⁷⁰ An immaterial variance between the petition and notice is not fatal.⁷¹

Qualification and registration of voters. The qualifications of those entitled to vote on taxing propositions may be prescribed by constitutional or statutory provisions,⁷² and it has been said that

"Public taxpayers"

The words "public taxpayers of the parish," in constitutional amendment, authorizing recreation and park commission for parish to impose taxes, if authorized by majority in number and amount of public taxpayers of parish, mean "property taxpayers," in view of other provisions of amendment and enabling act.—Dresser v. Recreation and Park

the general policy of the state with respect to tax matters is to authorize the tax by a vote of the majority of the property owners affected who are qualified electors.⁷³ The legislature has no power to change the qualifications of electors when such qualifications are prescribed in the constitution itself.⁷⁴ In the absence of any provisions to the contrary, those qualified to vote at general elections are entitled to vote on taxing propositions.⁷⁵ Women, properly qualified, may vote.⁷⁶ Where the statute requires registration, it is a prerequisite to the right to vote.⁷⁷ Opportunity to register must be given to all persons qualified to vote, and failure to give it will vitiate the election where the denial materially affects the result.⁷⁸ It is not necessary that a taxpayer's property should be so described on the assessment rolls as affirmatively to show its situs in the district where the owner voted.⁷⁹ A canvassing of the voting list before the election is not required in the absence of a statute so providing.⁸⁰ Where tax elections are governed by special provisions of the constitution and special statutes, it has been held that laws dealing with the purging of the registration rolls are not applicable.⁸¹

constitutional requirements as to form,⁸² and show that the specific question contemplated by the act, which authorizes a tax for a specific purpose, was passed on.⁸³

In order to constitute the basis of a legal tax, the vote must be certified by the proper officers to the board or persons authorized to act on it,⁸⁴ and the certificate must conform to the law, or else it will confer no authority to levy the tax;⁸⁵ but a failure to return the certificate of the vote within the time required will not invalidate the tax voted.⁸⁶ The board canvassing the returns must proceed in compliance with the statute,⁸⁷ and, where the statute so authorizes it, may base its report on its own inspection of the ballots,⁸⁸ and the certificates of the inspectors is not conclusive on them.⁸⁹ The declaration of the mayor and common council as to the result of the election is conclusive until reversed by a direct proceeding,⁹⁰ brought within the time limited by constitutional or statutory provisions.⁹¹

Irregularities. Mere informalities or irregularities in the election proceedings which cannot prejudice any substantial right will not affect the validity of the tax.⁹²

In view of constitutional provisions defining the qualifications of electors generally and providing further that legal voters of every city or town are granted power to enact and amend their municipal charter, and further providing that the initiative and referendum powers reserved to the people are reserved to the legal voters of every municipality as to all local, special, and municipal legislation of every character, an ordinance referred to the people proposing an amendment to the city charter and authorizing and directing the council to comply with the terms of a gift of a building which required the council to levy an annual tax for the maintenance, operation, and upkeep of the building was properly submitted to all of the legal voters of the city, and not only to the taxpayers, notwithstanding the city charter prescribing the qualifications of persons entitled to vote on matters relating to taxation within the city expressly limited such voters to taxpayers only, since the effect of the constitutional provisions is to render nugatory the restrictions and limitations contained in the charter.—Johnson v. City of Pendleton, 280 P. 873, 131 Or. 46.

c. Notice

Where a vote for a tax is to be taken, due and sufficient notice of the time, place, and purpose thereof must be given in the manner prescribed.

When a vote for a tax for any purpose is to be taken, due notice of the time, place, and purpose thereof must be given in the manner prescribed,⁹³ and notice of some kind is necessary, even though the statute which authorizes the election contains no express provision for notice.⁹⁴ Where notice is in fact actually brought home to the great body of the voters, an election will not be held invalid for lack of notice where it does not appear that enough voters to change the result failed to vote because of lack of notice.⁹⁵

The notice of the election may be sufficient if it enables those interested to understand its purpose.⁹⁶ Even if the notice is ambiguously worded, it has been held to be valid if it can be construed to authorize the tax voted.⁹⁷ It is not necessary that the names of all the signers of a petition for a special tax election should be published in the absence of a statutory requirement.⁹⁸

d. Contest

The contest of a tax election is governed by the terms of the constitution or statute applicable thereto.

The contest of a municipal election on a tax proposal is governed by the terms of the constitution or statute applicable thereto;⁹⁹ and, where such terms refer to another statute on election contests as governing, the statute referred to as it existed at the time, unaffected by any subsequent amendment, will control.¹

e. Authority Conferred by Vote

Where an election is necessary, a tax can be levied

only in conformity with the terms of the power conferred by the election.

Where an election is necessary, a tax can be levied only in conformity with the terms of the power conferred by the election,² but the authorities may exercise such discretion as is conferred on them by the vote.³ The consent of the people applies only to legal conditions existing at the date of the election.⁴

Where the constitution authorizes the levy of a special tax by a vote of the taxpaying voters of a municipality, such tax is not levied by the municipality, but by the voters to whom has been delegated the taxing power.⁵

in this respect is not subject to judicial interference⁸ unless the discretion is clearly abused⁹ or the tax is so excessive as to be confiscatory or prohibitory.¹⁰ Spoliation under the guise of taxation will, however, be declared unconstitutional, whatever its name or form.¹¹

By constitutional, statutory, or charter provision the power may be restricted to a certain rate or amount which may be levied for any one year,¹² or, in the case of a statutory change of the fiscal year, for the interval elapsing between the close of the old, and the beginning of the new, fiscal year,¹³ and a taxpayer may invoke the protection of such provision regardless of its effect on the finances of the municipality.¹⁴ Constitutional limitations are not directed solely against the municipal council but are directed also against any agency

While the legislature has the power to fix a maximum rate of taxation for municipal purposes,¹⁶ such power must be exercised subject to the provisions of the constitution.¹⁷ The legislature cannot authorize a tax in excess of a constitutional limit,¹⁸ except in the particular cases and on the particular conditions permitted by the constitution.¹⁹ Statutes limiting the rate or amount of the tax at any point within the constitutional limit have been held to be constitutional;²⁰ and the legislature, fixing a limit at a point under the constitutional limit, may give power to the city to increase the rate up to the constitutional limit on certain conditions,²¹ and the city in such case has no power to tax up to the constitutional limit if it has not conformed to the statutory conditions.²² Where, however, the legislature first fully empowers the city to levy to the constitutional limit, it cannot then affix to a part of such levy an unconstitutional condition.²³ Where a municipal tax ordinance states that provisions of a certain title of the state statutes shall govern all matters not specifically provided for in the ordinance, the municipality is not required to comply with provisions of that title adopted thereafter which restrict the amount of taxes.²⁴ In the face of an evident legislative intent that the limitation prescribed shall not be exceeded, it cannot be enlarged by implication from general provisions conferring the power to contract, make improvements, and incur liability.²⁵

Taxes for special purposes. By constitutional, statutory, or charter provision a limitation may be imposed on the rate or amount of taxes levied for a special purpose.²⁶

Retroactive effect of limitation. The maximum rate authorized when municipal taxes are levied, rather than the rate authorized at a subsequent date, controls in determining whether rates are excessive,²⁷ and statutes limiting the rate or amount of taxes will not be given a retroactive effect unless the intention of the legislature to do so is clearly shown.²⁸ Statutes fixing maximum tax levies for operating purposes and for debt service in a city are ineffectual to place limitations on tax levies for the payment of contemplated refunding bonds of the city to refund improvement bonds issued prior to the enactment of the statutes.²⁹

Exemptions from restriction. A statute segregating certain property for state taxation and limiting the rate of the tax thereof and further providing that certain other property shall be subject to be taxed locally, "as prescribed by law," impliedly exempts the latter taxes from the rate restriction applicable to the segregated property³⁰ and makes them subject to the restrictions contained in other statutes applicable thereto.³¹

Change of limitation. While a statutory limitation may be abrogated by an amendment to the constitution,³² the legislature has no power to remove a limitation imposed by the constitution on the amount of municipal taxation.³³ A charter or statutory limitation of the rate of municipal taxation may, within constitutional limitations, be enlarged or further restricted by a statute amending or repealing the earlier law.³⁴ So it is competent for the legislature to remove provisions of a city charter limiting tax levies to support bonds of the city, and to provide an unlimited tax to support outstanding bonds;³⁵ and the statutory limit on municipal taxation for bond-paying purposes may be removed so that refunding bonds may not be affected by tax limitations in force when the bonds being refunded were issued.³⁶ Where the rate for city taxes is limited to the rate for county taxes "now levied by law," a subsequent increase in the county rate does not enlarge the limitation of the city rate.³⁷

b. Authorization of Increase by Voters or State Tax Commission

Under some constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions authorization of the increase by popular vote is necessary and sufficient to warrant an increase of a tax rate beyond a prescribed limit; and authorization of indebtedness by popular vote is necessary and sufficient under other provisions to warrant a tax in excess of the prescribed rate to discharge the indebtedness. Approval by a state tax commission is necessary under some provisions.

Under some constitutional, statutory, or charter provisions authorization by popular vote is necessary and sufficient to warrant an increase of a tax rate beyond a prescribed limit.³⁸ Likewise, under some provisions authorization of indebtedness by popular vote is necessary and sufficient to warrant a tax in excess of a prescribed rate to discharge the indebtedness.³⁹ Where the constitution fixes a minimum requirement with respect to the number of votes necessary to authorize an increase in the tax rate, the legislature may impose other, or additional, requirements or limitations.⁴⁰ Under constitutional or statutory provisions requiring propositions for excess levies to be submitted at a special election or at an election to be held for that purpose, the proposition may be submitted at a general election, since such election, as far as it relates to the propositions, constitutes a special election within the meaning of the provision;⁴¹ but in determining the number of votes cast at such special election within the meaning of a requirement that the number of voters voting shall constitute a specified per cent of the voters who voted at the last preceding gubernatorial election, only the number of voters voting on the proposition, and not the number of voters voting for officers in the general election, may be considered.⁴² Limitations of the increase which may be authorized by popular vote must be observed.⁴³

A statute making approval by a state tax commission a condition precedent to an increase of the rate or amount of taxation above a prescribed limit has been construed to apply only to a tax for ordinary expenditures⁴⁴ and not a tax for the purpose of providing a sinking fund and interest for bond issues voted by the people.⁴⁵

c. Municipalities Having Special Charters

Where the maximum limits of taxing power are fixed by the constitution, a municipal corporation may limit itself to a lower maximum rate fixed by its charter but may not exceed or increase the constitutional rate except as authorized to do so by the constitution. The general power to tax granted by a charter is subordinate to a general law of the state imposing a limit, but where the charter specifies a rate higher than the rate allowed by general law the charter rate controls; but the legislature may empower the municipality to levy a special tax in excess thereof.

A municipal corporation cannot go beyond the maximum limits of taxing power fixed by the constitution,⁴⁶ but it may limit itself to a lower maximum rate fixed by its charter.⁴⁷ Under some constitutional provisions the tax limitation prescribed by the constitution may be increased when provided for by the charter of a municipal corporation,⁴⁸ and, when the limitation has been thus increased, such increase is not in contravention of the constitution, but is in strict accord therewith.⁴⁹ It must be assumed that the framers of the constitution were conversant with established law under which charter provisions come into being by legislative enactment as well as adoption by local electors,⁵⁰ and such increase may, accordingly, be achieved by a legislative enactment read into the charter as well as by a charter provision adopted by the municipal electors.⁵¹

must be considered in subordination to a general law of the state imposing a limit on taxation by cities generally;⁵² but a rate limitation contained in a special charter will not be affected by a subsequent general law providing for an annual levy of taxes, but not containing any provision limiting the rate or amount,⁵³ or by later special legislation referring to the same city and giving a power to tax in general terms without mention of the limitation;⁵⁴ and where the charter, or an amendment thereto, specifies a rate higher than the rate allowed by general law the charter rate controls,⁵⁵ since it is a rule that a general law regulating the rate will not be deemed to take away greater powers granted to municipalities by special charter provisions unless it appears that the legislature intended such act to apply to them.⁵⁶ In some jurisdictions cities having special charters are excepted from general laws,⁵⁷ and among such cities, not subject to any particular classification, constitutional or statutory, higher rates may be allowed to some than to others.⁵⁸ The fact that the charter limits the amount of the tax does not preclude the right of the legislature to empower the municipality to levy a special tax in excess thereof,⁵⁹ as such a statute is in effect an amendment of the charter.⁶⁰

d. Municipalities of Stated Class or Population

Municipal corporations of a certain class or population may be made subject to, or exempt from, the operation of constitutional or statutory limitations on the rate or amount of taxes which may be levied.

Amendment of municipal charter by legislative action generally see supra § 92.

Some constitutional or statutory provisions place a limitation on the rate or amount of the taxes which may be levied by municipal corporations of a certain class,⁶¹ such as those possessing a certain population.⁶² In applying such provisions the population of a city may be ascertained by the city council,⁶³ which has a right to determine, on sufficient evidence, that the city has more inhabitants than shown by the federal census;⁶⁴ or the population of the city may be ascertained by a census taken under an ordinance enacted by the city.⁶⁵ A statute providing for determination of the population by taking the last preceding census and adding a certain per cent thereof for each year that shall have elapsed after the census was taken permits the addition of the percentage adjustment for the year in which the levy is made.⁶⁶

Exemption from restriction. The constitution or statute may exempt cities of a certain class from its operation.⁶⁷ A constitutional exemption from the restriction granted to a particular city applies also to territory subsequently annexed thereto,⁶⁸ provided such territory did not formerly belong to any city subject to the restriction.⁶⁹

e. After Reorganization of Municipality

A municipal corporation which has reorganized may exercise any right to impose taxes at a higher rate which it may have obtained by reason of the reorganization; and statutes relating to the expenses of reorganization are not violative of constitutional provisions relating to limitations on the power of taxation.

A municipal corporation which has reorganized under the general law, thereby obtaining a right to levy taxes at a higher rate than before, may levy taxes at the higher rate in order to pay a judgment obtained against it after the reorganization,⁷⁰ even though the accrual of the cause of action antedated the reorganization.⁷¹ A statutory provision that any expense incurred in the preparation of the charter of a new municipality formed by the merger of two or more municipal corporations shall be borne equally by the municipalities concerned is not violative of a constitutional provision requiring that legislative acts incorporating municipalities restrict their powers of taxation or of a provision limiting the amount of revenue which a city may raise by taxation.⁷²

f. Effect of Failure to Exhaust Limit in Previous Years

A municipal corporation may not generally add to the limit of the amount of tax allowed any one year the amounts under the limit not levied in prior years, although some statutes have been construed to allow the levying in one year of a tax for a preceding year provided the tax limit for the preceding year is not exceeded thereby.

A municipal corporation under restriction as to the rate or amount of tax which it is empowered to levy, may not generally add to the limit allowed any one year the amounts under the limit not levied in prior years,⁷³ although some statutes have been construed to allow the levying "in" one year of a tax "for" a preceding year provided the tax limit for the preceding year is not exceeded thereby,⁷⁴ especially where the tax authorized is to meet an annual charge against the city and the charges have not been paid for a number of years.⁷⁵

§ 1990. — Taxes Chargeable against Limitation

- a. In general
- b. Special tax or tax for special purpose

a. In General

Taxes chargeable against a limitation on the amount of tax which may be levied by a municipal corporation have been held, under various constitutional provisions, to include every tax levied, taxes to meet all items of expenditure during the fiscal year, and taxes levied to meet a debt assessed against the municipality; and have been held not to include special assessments for local improvements, except assessments covering all property in the municipality, loss and cost of collection, interest and penalties, and taxes for debts antedating the limitation.

Where a constitutional limit for "taxes of every kind and description, general or special" is fixed, every tax levied, whether general or special, is included in the computation;⁷⁶ and a constitutional limit for taxes to meet "current expenses" covers all items of expenditure during a current fiscal year,⁷⁷ including items in the nature of permanent investments⁷⁸ as well as the ordinary recurrent expenses of government administration.⁷⁹ Special assessments against abutting landowners for local improvements are not taxes in the sense of being chargeable against the general tax limit,⁸⁰ but a tax levied to meet a debt assessed against the municipality for public benefits from public improvements is chargeable against the general tax limit;⁸¹ and, where a special assessment for an improvement covers all the property in the municipality, it is subject to the same limitation as a general tax.⁸² Loss and cost of collection of the tax are not carried into the computation,⁸³ nor are interest and penalties chargeable against the limit.⁸⁴ A privilege or occupational tax is not within a provision limiting the annual tax rate to a specified percentage of the assessed value of taxable property in the city.⁸⁵

Tax for debts antedating limitation. A tax levied in payment of a debt created prior to the adoption of the constitution or statute imposing the limitation is not chargeable against the limit established thereby, where, at the time such indebtedness was incurred, the municipality had the power to impose a tax sufficient to discharge it.⁸⁶ The city is without authority to levy a tax outside the charter limitation to pay bonds which were issued prior to the effective date of the charter limitation, however, where at the time the bonds were issued they were subject to a lower limitation than that provided in the charter.⁸⁷

(1) Under constitutional amendment limiting amount of tax but excepting taxes levied for payment of prior debts, principal sum of obligations theretofore incurred and within exception of constitutional amendment cannot be increased by sale of new bonds or exchange of refunding bonds at less than par, and any difference must be absorbed by municipality under its other powers.—Wilcox v. Board of Com'rs of Sinking Fund of City of Detroit, 247 N. W. 923, 262 Mich. 699, rehearing denied 249 N.W. 467, 262 Mich. 699.

(2) The exception applies only when the basic constitutional rate is exclusively operative, moreover, and, where municipality increases basic rate by charter or vote under proviso in constitutional amendment, it cannot make separate levy to pay obligations theretofore incurred in addition to charter or voted rate unless charter or voted increase so provides.—Wilcox v. Board of Com'rs of Sinking Fund of City of Detroit, supra.

(3) Unless authorized by ordinance, unissued bonds of municipality are not "authorized" within schedule to tax limitation provision, providing that levies for interest or retirement of bonds issued or authorized before effective date of provision are not subject to limitation.—State v. Thatcher, 178 N.E. 843, 124 Ohio St. 382.

(4) Municipal bonds properly authorized prior to adoption of tax limitation amendment but not sold and delivered until subsequent thereto were held not to constitute municipal debt pre-existing adoption of amendment so as to be immune from the operation of the limitation amendment.—Zimmerman v. Town of New Martinsville, 188 S.E. 124, 117 W.Va. 752, 109 A.L.R. 958.

Refunding bonds

Refunding bonds of city were not subject to constitutional or statutory tax limitation adopted or enacted subsequent to issuance of original bonds, on ground that they constituted a new contract subsequent to adoption or enactment of limitation, since refunding bonds were entitled to benefit of same taxing power, the pledge of which protected and formed a part of the obligation of the original bonds.

b. Special Tax or Tax for Special Purpose

though for a purpose properly designated as a state function,⁸⁹ unless it is expressly or impliedly exempted therefrom.⁹⁰ The tax is not exempted by a statute authorizing the levy of an additional tax for special purposes,⁹¹ unless the implication is clear that the legislature intended it to be exempt,⁹²

Compromise of judgment

Statute providing for compromising of municipal judgment liabilities was held to authorize judgment creditor to enter into such a settlement with city and to receive bonds in payment of debt to be paid by levy of irrepealable tax, notwithstanding payment thereof might exceed limitation of a prior statute on additional tax levy to pay final judgments against a city.—G. W. Jones Lumber Co. v. City of Marmarth, 272 N.W. 190, 67 N.D. 309.

Pension fund

Taxes for policemen's and municipal employees' annuity and benefit funds are "taxes for purposes of pension fund" within statute exempting taxes for such purpose from limitation on total tax levy.—People ex rel. McDonough v. New York Cent. R. Co., 190 N.E. 94, 356 Ill. 67.

Bonded indebtedness generally

(1) A provision of village ordinance authorizing judgment-funding bonds for payment thereof by direct annual tax does not violate statute limiting amount of village taxes exclusive of amount levied to pay its bonded indebtedness.—People ex rel. Manifold v. Wabash R. Co., 59 N.E.2d 795, 389 Ill. 403—Elmhurst Nat. Bank v. Village of Bellwood, 23 N.E.2d 41, 372 Ill. 204.

(2) The legislature, in granting authority to municipalities, to levy an additional rate for hospital purposes, intended that the additional rate should include all taxes levied for payment of bonds and interest, issued for hospital purposes.—People ex rel. Goodman v. Wabash R. Co., 70 N.E.2d 718, 395 Ill. 520.

(3) The specific provisions in statute providing that all bonds issued for hospital purposes shall be paid out of the "Hospital Fund" must prevail over the general provisions of statute that taxes levied to pay refunding bonds shall be in addition to, and exclusive of, the maximum of all other taxes authorized to be levied, and that tax limitations applicable to municipalities under any statute shall not apply to taxes levied for payment of such refunding bonds.—People ex rel. Goodman v. Wabash R. Co., supra.

(4) Law respecting amount of tax levy was held not to limit power to make additional tax levy for payment of interest and principal on bonds to such bonds as were outstanding when act became effective.—Tabb v. Funk, 17 P.2d 18, 170 Wash. 545.

The statutory limitation of tax to be levied by city for interest and sinking fund on its outstanding bonds and certificates of indebtedness does not apply to bonds issued after effective date of act imposing such limitation.—State ex rel. Woman's Catholic Order of Foresters v. City of Fort Myers, 196 So 705, 143 Fla. 304.

Water tax

Under some statutes, a water tax is expressly exempted from the general tax rate limitation.—Bain v. Goldsboro, 80 S.E. 256, 164 N.C. 102.

Compensation for loss of tax revenue

The schedule attached to constitutional provision authorizing equalization of tax revenues through a tax rate outside the limitation provided in the provision, for bonds which had theretofore been issued, applies only to bonds issued within statutory limitation in force at time of issuance of the bonds, and then only to extent necessary to equalize tax loss resulting from a shrinkage in the tax base.—State ex rel. City of Akron v. Slusser, 61 N.E.2d 318, 75 Ohio App. 141, affirmed 56 N.E.2d 239, 144 Ohio St. 123.

Tax for payment of refunding bonds

The limitation on taxing power of city was not applicable to refunding bonds issued under subsequent general refunding act, since limitation was repugnant to later requirement of general act to levy a sufficient tax to provide for payment of refunding bonds and interest thereon.—City of Zephyrhills, Fla., v. U. S. ex rel. Favre, C.C.A.Fla., 95 F.2d 506.

Constitutionality

as, for example, where the additional power is granted for the execution of mandatory provisions of a public health law.⁹³ A reference in the statute to the tax as a special tax,⁹⁴ or "extraordinary levy,"⁹⁵ will not operate to exempt the tax.

While a statute granting the power to levy an additional tax for a special purpose and limiting its rate is sometimes construed, not as exempting the tax from the general tax levy, but as operating to increase the general tax rate by the amount of the special rate,⁹⁶ provided at least the specified amount is levied for the special purpose,⁹⁷ on the other hand it has been held that a statutory amendment exempting and increasing a special tax which formerly had been included in the general tax rate will not operate to decrease the rate of the general tax to the extent that it has been relieved by the exemption.⁹⁸

not apply to public utilities, a municipal corporation is not authorized to levy a special tax which, when added to a prior levy for a public utility, will exceed the specified amount.⁹⁹

Taxes to pay involuntary liabilities generally. A limitation placed on the amount of taxes which municipalities may levy has been held to refer only to obligations voluntarily incurred,¹ or to debts created or attempted to be incurred by contract,² and such limitation does not apply to taxes levied to pay an indebtedness or liability imposed by a superior authority on a municipality,³ or a liability imposed by law for what is done without right.⁴

Taxes to pay judgments against the municipality are sometimes held to be chargeable against the general tax limit,⁵ as where the judgments are for ordinary indebtedness,⁶ or where taxes to pay the claims on which the judgments are based would be chargeable against the limit;⁷ but sometimes they are held not chargeable against the general limit,⁸ as where they are expressly or impliedly excepted expenditures made necessary by legislative action from limitation imposed on municipal tax levy was held not unconstitutional—Los Angeles Gas & Electric Corporation v. City Council of City of Seal Beach, 63 P.2d 326, 18 Cal.App.2d 97.

Mandatory levy; current expenses

(1) Under statutes fixing limit at fifteen mills, but authorizing increase for current expenses, municipal current levy over eighteen mills is not defense to enforcement of mandatory duty involving additional mandatory tax levy, unless fifteen mills of current levy must be allocated to existing mandatory debt charges—State v. City of Van Wert, 184 N.E. 12, 126 Ohio St. 78.

(2) Where municipality's current expenses and bonds for complying with orders by state department of health cannot be provided for within fifteen-mill limitation, municipality must levy tax in excess of such limitation for current expenses.—State v. City of Van Wert, supra.

(3) In order to constitute defense to state health department's order requiring sewage plant construction, levy to pay bonds to finance plant, together with mandatory levies, must exceed fifteen-mill constitutional and statutory limitations.—State v. City of Van Wert, supra.

Necessity of specifying particular portion as tax for special purpose

Under statute authorizing levy by common council of tax not exceeding three and five tenths per cent of the assessed value, with the exception that an additional tax for school purposes of eight mills on the dollar might be levied, the common council had authority to levy tax which in the aggregate did not exceed four and three tenths per cent without specifying any particular portion thereof as a special tax for school purposes, provided at least eight tenths per cent thereof is levied for school purposes—*Sheldon v. § 1991. — Levies within, or in Excess of, Limitation

- a. In general
- b. What constitutes excessive levy
- c. Emergency taxes

a. In General

The rate or amount of the tax levied must not be in excess of the constitutional or statutory limitation applicable thereto, and levies in excess of the rate or amount permitted by law are illegal and void, but only to the extent of the excess if the taxes are separable. On the other hand, a levy within the constitutional or statutory limit is valid.

The rate or amount of the tax levied must not be in excess of the constitutional or statutory limitation applicable thereto,¹¹ and levies in excess of the rate or amount permitted by law are illegal and void,¹² but only to the extent of the excess if the taxes are separable.¹³ An excess levy cannot be sustained on the ground that the assessor has rated the taxable property below its real value;¹⁴ nor can an attempt to tax in excess of the limit be upheld as an exercise of the police power, where its real and professed object is to raise revenue.¹⁵ The city council and the electors, whether acting separately or conjointly, may not levy taxes in excess of a constitutional limit,¹⁶ even though the legislature has authorized the electors of a municipal corporation to levy taxes.¹⁷

On the other hand, a levy within the constitutional or statutory limit as to amount or rate is valid;¹⁸ and, where the levy does not itself exceed the limit, it is not invalidated by a subsequent levy which taken together with the former is in excess of the limit.¹⁹ A tax in excess of the original general limit is not void if it is within the limit as increased by the statute authorizing the tax;²⁰ and a special tax in excess of the rate allowed by statute therefor is not invalid where it is levied for purposes within the scope of general taxes and the power to levy general taxes is unlimited.²¹

Where a tax is levied, which might have been authorized by either of two statutes, but which would be excessive if levied under one of them, it will be presumed to have been levied under the other.²² Also, if an excessive tax levy can be justified on the ground that the excess is for a purpose exempt from the limitation, there is a presumption in favor of the validity of the tax in the absence of proof that the tax was not levied for the exempted purpose;²³ but, where it is shown that the excess cannot be accounted for in this way, it is void.²⁴

An excess levy, while invalidating the tax, does not affect the validity of any particular appropriation ordinance alleged to have caused the excess.²⁵ Statutes authorizing municipal corporations to provide waterworks or other public utilities or improvements and issue bonds therefor payable solely from the revenues of the proposed system are not in violation of constitutional provisions prohibiting such municipal corporation from levying a tax exceeding prescribed limitations.²⁶ Where levies in excess of the constitutional limit are necessary to prevent impairment of a preëxisting debt, the excess levies need not be laid on the basis of a classification of property contained in the constitutional provision, but, under statutory authorization, may be laid uniformly on all classes of property.²⁷

"Excessive levy" refers to the amount of the levy regardless of the amount collected thereunder and, as applied to general taxes, to a levy on all the property in the municipal corporation; and some provisions limiting the rate to a specified percentage of the valuation of the taxable property are construed to refer to actual rather than assessed value.

The words "excessive levy" refer to the amount of the levy regardless of the amount collected thereunder,²⁸ and, as applied to general taxes, to a levy on all the property in the municipal corporation.²⁹ Some charters or statutes limiting the rate to a specified percentage of the valuation of the taxable property are construed to refer to actual rather than assessed value;³⁰ and, under such a construction, a rate which is less than the specified percentage of the actual value of the taxable property is not excessive,³¹ although it is more than the specified percentage of the assessed valuation.³² A statute which does no more than require a city to set apart annually for a certain purpose a certain proportion of whatever amount it may derive from taxes imposed by itself cannot be said to be the levying of a tax in excess of the constitutional limit.³³ In jurisdictions where the purpose of the levy must be specifically set forth, it has been held that a tax for contingent or miscellaneous expenses must be a very small proportion of the total amount levied,³⁴ and that a tax in excess of the amount deemed reasonable for such purpose, taking into consideration the wealth and population of the city, is void as to the excess.³⁵

c. Emergency Taxes

An excessive tax can be justified as an emergency tax under statutes permitting it in certain cases on proof of an unforeseen emergency or necessity of grave character and serious moment, provided the levy ordinance segregates the expenditure for the purpose of meeting the emergency from others of a nonemergency character.

Determination for court

The court will determine whether, in view of wealth and population of municipality, a tax levy for contingent purposes is an unreasonable amount.—People ex rel. Goodman v. Wabash R. Co., 70 N.E.2d 718, 395 Ill. 520.

moment;³⁶ but it cannot be justified by a showing merely that the municipal corporation was unable to meet otherwise all of its alleged necessary running expenses,³⁷ or by a showing of an emergency of a nature that could have been foreseen and provided for in the annual levy;³⁸ and even where an emergency within the meaning of the statute is shown to exist, the excess tax cannot be upheld unless the levy ordinance segregates the expenditures for the purpose of meeting the emergency from others of a nonemergency character.³⁹ A municipality which has levied a tax for one year in excess of the amount allowed for that period cannot justify its action on the ground of a charter amendment changing the fiscal year and necessitating a tax to cover the interim between the old and new fiscal years;⁴⁰ but the tax may be sustained where, in the light of the report of a committee recommending the tax levy and the circumstances surrounding the council at the time the levy is made, it appears that the intention was to levy a tax for a period longer than one year and the tax is not in excess of the limit allowed by statute for the actual period covered.⁴¹

c. Power and Duty to Tax for Special Purposes

§ 1992. In General

A municipal corporation may levy taxes for special purposes only to the extent that authority to do is expressly or impliedly conferred on it.

The general rule is that taxes cannot be imposed by a municipal corporation for special or unusual purposes, as distinguished from general municipal purposes, except to the extent that power to impose such taxes is delegated either expressly or by necessary implication.⁴² A power to tax for general purposes does not include a power to tax for special or unusual purposes.⁴³ Even where a municipal corporation is authorized and required to provide a fund sufficient for a particular purpose, its power to levy a tax for such purpose may be limited by statutory restrictions.⁴⁴ It has been held that a general grant of power to expend municipal funds for a particular purpose impliedly authorizes the levy of a tax necessary and sufficient to raise a fund therefor;⁴⁵ but it has also been held that, where a statute makes expenditure for a particular purpose optional, it does not thereby impliedly authorize the levy of a special tax therefor.⁴⁶ In the absence of an authorizing act, municipalities have no power to tax and raise money for the purpose of abating a particular class of taxes,⁴⁷ but, by statute, one form of special tax may be substituted for others named in prior statutes.⁴⁸

§ 1993. Public Improvements

Under proper authority a municipal corporation may levy a tax to pay for a public improvement, and where the improvement is one inuring to the benefit of all the taxpayers the cost thereof may be taxed as a common charge on all.

Under delegated authority, a municipal corporation may levy a tax to pay for a public improvement,⁴⁹ provided it serves a public⁵⁰ or corporate or municipal⁵¹ purpose, and provided there has been a proper determination of the necessity of levying the tax in question.⁵² Authority may be implied from a statute giving a city power to establish and maintain the improvement⁵³ or authority to tax for city purposes.⁵⁴ While a special tax for the maintenance of an improvement may be authorized by statute,⁵⁵ provisions for a special tax

A municipality, when engaged in business, does not act as an arm of the state, and hence a rate charged for a public utility service or product is not a tax but a price at which and for which the service or product is sold, and the excess charged over and above cost as a profit enters into and becomes part of price.—City of Niles v. Slum clearance

Where a statute declared as a matter of public policy that a slum area was detrimental to public safety, health, or morals, and gave city authority to eliminate slum areas, elimination of such slum area was a corporate purpose within the meaning of constitutional provision authorizing vesting of municipal corporations with authority to assess and collect taxes for corporate purposes.—People ex rel. for the erection of a permanent improvement do not authorize the maintenance of such improvement by a special, as distinguished from a general, tax.⁵⁶ It is within the power of the legislature to limit the power of a city council to levy assessments for the cost of public improvements.⁵⁷

Before a tax for a public improvement project may be levied, it is necessary that a definite program for effectuating the project shall have been adopted;⁵⁸ a levy cannot be made to accumulate a fund for some project to be developed at some indefinite future time.⁵⁹ Under some statutes the power to levy a sewerage fund tax is restricted to cities which establish a system of sewerage,⁶⁰ but in the absence of any provision to the contrary, a city may levy a tax for constructing sewers and disposal plants to connect with, and dispose of the sewage from, sewer mains built not by itself but by sewer districts.⁶¹ The erection of a public utility plant under a statute providing that the costs thereof shall be paid out of earnings of the utility does not result in the incurring of a general obligation and the cost is in no manner payable by taxation.⁶²

Street or road poll taxes. As a general rule statutes authorizing municipalities to impose street or road poll taxes, and ordinances imposing such taxes, have been held not unconstitutional,⁶³ and this is true of ordinances imposing such a tax but allowing persons liable therefor to perform work on public streets or roads for a stated number of days in lieu of payment of the tax.⁶⁴

Districts. Under some constitutional and statutory provisions a special tax for a public improvement may be levied by or for a special taxing or improvement district,⁶⁵ but after a repeal of the statute authorizing a tax on a special district a tax cannot be levied on the district to pay for improvement bonds issued while the district law was in force.⁶⁶ A utility district embracing within its limits another municipality may not tax property within such municipality for the purpose of purchasing or constructing utilities which would duplicate utilities already owned and operated by the municipality.⁶⁷

Taxation or special assessments. The power to levy a special tax for a particular improvement on the entire city and the power to make an assessment on abutting property are not inconsistent with each other⁶⁸ and may be possessed concurrently by the same municipality.⁶⁹ Where the improvement is one inuring to the benefit of all the taxpayers, the cost thereof may be taxed as a common charge on all,⁷⁰ although the operation of the project may not be a governmental function⁷¹ or some taxpayers are benefited less than others.⁷² It has also been held that a part of the cost may be assessed on abutting property and the balance raised by a tax on all the taxpayers;⁷³ and even after the improvement has been paid for by abutting landowners in the form of a local assessment the burden may be shifted from them to the taxpayers, reimbursing those who have paid the local assessment.⁷⁴

As a general rule, when a municipality levies a special assessment and uses due diligence to make it productive in accordance with the statutes under which it is levied, no further liability of the municipality attaches except such as may be specifically provided by statute.⁷⁵ However, in addition to the imposition of a special assessment against property to pay the cost of a public improvement, the taxpayer may be required to pay an additional amount to make up deficiencies;⁷⁶ and the mere failure to collect special assessments from some property owners, necessitating the levy of a special tax, does not constitute unlawful imposition of double taxation.⁷⁷

§ 1994. Waterworks or Water Supply

Power to levy a tax for waterworks or for a water supply may be conferred on a municipal corporation either expressly or by implication; the exercise of such power is subject to constitutional, statutory, or charter limitations.

While power to levy a water tax may be expressly conferred on a municipal corporation by statute⁷⁸ or constitution,⁷⁹ the grant of authority to erect waterworks,⁸⁰ purchase an existing water plant,⁸¹ or contract for a water supply⁸² or for the construction of waterworks⁸³ carries with it by implication the power to levy taxes for such purposes; and an implication of power may arise from the course of legislation and existing conditions created under former statutory provisions.⁸⁴ When authorized by statute, the tax may be levied even in advance of the execution of a contract for the construction or purchase of the waterworks.⁸⁵ A water tax is not void because not every part of the municipality is supplied with water.⁸⁶

The power to tax for water purposes, whether express or implied, is subject to constitutional, statutory, or charter limitations,⁸⁷ such as limitations on the rate or amount of the tax;⁸⁸ and statutes enlarging the power by increasing the tax limit do not operate retroactively.⁸⁹ Some statutes confer power to determine the rate and amount, within certain limitations, on a board of trustees, and impose on the council the duty of levying the tax determined by the board of trustees.⁹⁰ A power to tax for maintenance will not be extended to permit the levy of a tax, the result of which would be the building up of a needless surplus.⁹¹ On the other hand, the power to tax is not impaired by a charter provision requiring the amount of water rents collected over expenses to equal a certain per cent of the water debt.⁹²

§ 1995. Educational Purposes

In the absence of a constitutional prohibition, a municipal corporation may be authorized to levy a tax for the support of public schools and free libraries.

A municipal corporation has no power to levy a school tax where the constitution prohibits a delegation of such power by the state.⁹³ In the absence of constitutional prohibition, however, a municipality may be expressly authorized to levy a tax for the support of public schools,⁹⁴ but it cannot levy a tax in favor of a private⁹⁵ or parochial⁹⁶ school. Under a constitutional declaration making public education a state function, it has been held that the power to levy a school tax cannot be implied from authority to tax for the erection and construction of public buildings, bridges, and works of public improvement,⁹⁷ or from the general welfare clause of a charter.⁹⁸ A tax for the establishment of a state university in the municipality⁹⁹ or to induce it to remain there¹ has been upheld as a tax for corporate purposes within the meaning of the constitutional provision granting power to tax there-

Under some statutes the power to tax for school purposes resides in a local board of education,³ subject to the approval of the city council.⁴ Under other statutes the board determines the amount necessary,⁵ and the council determines the rate and levies the tax.⁶ Under still other statutes the whole power to levy the tax is in the city council,⁷ and a statute granting the power to the city council has been held to repeal, by implication, an earlier statute granting it to the board of education.⁸ Where the power is in the city council, it acts as a state agency,⁹ and not as a municipal body,¹⁰ in carrying into effect the objects and purposes of the general school system. An ordinance giving the board of education power to say what taxes within the prescribed limits are necessary to maintain the schools is not subject to the objection that it vests in such board the power of a body politic where the tax is to be levied by the city commissioners.¹¹

Libraries. An express power to tax for the support of "free public libraries" may be exercised¹² in favor of libraries which are free and open to the public,¹³ even though privately owned and managed.¹⁴ Where a city is required by statute to levy a library tax, it cannot evade the law by allowing the time to pass in which it may regularly act,¹⁵ and a city is under a legal obligation to tax for the maintenance of a free public library where, under a power to tax for its establishment and maintenance, it has already passed a vote to do so and has accepted donations for its establishment.¹⁶ The power of a municipal corporation to tax for library purposes may be inferred from an express power granted to a county board to approve such tax.¹⁷ A power of library trustees to levy a tax for library purposes will be implied from an express power of school trustees to levy for school purposes taken in connection with a constitutional provision making it the duty of the legislature to provide for the creation and maintenance of an educational system.¹⁸

§ 1996. Aid to Corporations

A municipal corporation may not levy or be authorized to levy a tax in aid of a private manufacturing establishment; but it may be authorized to levy a tax in aid of railroads or corporations owning and operating toll roads and bridges.

No tax can be levied, even by legislative authority, as a bonus to a private manufactory.¹⁹ However, a tax levy for public purposes is not invalidated because it incidentally benefits private corporations.²⁰ A tax levy for dues to be paid to corporations organized to give service and confer benefits on municipalities and their officers, such as municipal leagues and conferences of mayors, is a levy for a proper municipal purpose and not for the purpose of aiding private corporations.²¹

Railroads. In the absence of any constitutional prohibition,²² a municipal corporation may under legislative authority, express²³ or implied,²⁴ levy taxes to aid a railroad running from, by, or through the municipality, unless under the terms of the act it appears that the aid so given does not necessarily serve a public purpose.²⁵ It is immaterial that the railroad extends beyond the city or state limits,²⁶ and, under some statutes, if the statutory conditions are met, it is not necessary that the railroad should pass through, or terminate in, the municipality.²⁷ Where, under established municipal divisions, one is included within the limits of another, each may levy a separate tax in aid of the same railroad company on the same property situated within the limits of both.²⁸ In some jurisdictions a constitutional prohibition against aid to private corporations has been construed to prohibit a tax in favor of railroad corporations, privately owned,²⁹ and, in the absence of delegated authority to do so, a municipality has no power to tax to aid a railroad.³⁰

Toll roads and bridges. Under constitutional or legislative authority, a municipality has power to tax in aid of private corporations owning and operating toll roads³¹ and bridges.³²

§ 1997. Payment of Debts and Bonds

- a. In general
- b. Implied power
- c. Necessity of municipality's liability for debt
- d. Duty to tax

a. In General

A municipal corporation has no power to levy a tax for the payment of its debts in the absence of delegated authority; but such authority is usually conferred by constitutional or statutory provisions.

In the absence of delegated authority to do so, express or implied, a municipality has no power to levy a tax for the payment of its debts.³³ Such authority, however, is sometimes conferred by constitutional provision,³⁴ and frequently by statute, either expressly or by implication;³⁵ and it has been

Constitutional provision, prohibiting levy of taxes for benefit of chartered companies or payment of interest on bonds issued thereby for such purpose, is not violated by act creating Greater Miami Port Authority, which has no authority to levy or pledge proceeds of any taxes, but is authorized only to pledge net earnings of particular facilities or utilities to be acquired, benefited, extended, or constructed.—Gardner v. held, without express reference to the source of its power, that a municipal corporation may make a levy so that it may pay its indebtedness as it becomes due.³⁶ Where the legislature authorizes a municipal corporation to contract and to exercise the power of taxation to meet its engagements, once the municipality enters into a contract the power thus given cannot be withdrawn until the contract is satisfied.³⁷

Where a restricted authority is granted, the power is confined within the limits of the restriction,³⁸ as, for example, where authority is granted to a designated class of municipal or quasi-municipal corporations,³⁹ or for the payment of a particular class of debts⁴⁰ or debts maturing within the year,⁴¹ but the restriction is removed by the subsequent enactment of legislation inconsistent with its continued existence.⁴² The grant of authority to tax for the payment of a particular indebtedness carries with it authority to tax for payment of the installments of the indebtedness as they fall due from year to year.⁴³ Under a statute to such effect, a city required to levy a tax sufficient to pay the interest and principal accruing on a bond issue within the year for which the levy is made may, in its discretion, levy sufficient taxes to meet in whole or in part the balance of the bond issue, including both principal and interest.⁴⁴ Where authority is granted to levy a tax at a limited rate for the payment of a particular class of debts, a levy of a special tax may be made, even though the indebtedness is payable out of the general funds.⁴⁵ The power to tax for the payment of a particular indebtedness is not affected by a failure to exercise it due to a misunderstanding as to the city's liability for the debt.⁴⁶ The taxing power of a public corporation is not exhausted by a single levy which does not actually produce the money necessary to pay the debts, because a portion of the levy is never collected.⁴⁷

In the absence of provisions or indications to the contrary, the power of a municipal corporation to tax for payment of its debts may be implied; and such an implication may arise from the grant of power to incur indebtedness.

Implied power to tax for payment of debts or bonds see infra subdivision b of this section.

Cumulative levies or double taxation

(1) In so far as a statute attempts to provide for cumulative levies of special taxes to discharge delinquency of local improvement district in prior years, such statute is unenforceable, because thereby a landowner would be charged for benefits conferred on his neighbor's land—Gordon v. Wheatridge Water Dist., 109 P.2d 899, 107 Colo. 128.

(2) However, a levy of taxes by a municipal corporation was not subject to attack on ground of double taxation, because levies had been made in previous years, where the taxes collected were insufficient and the amounts represented by the judgments or bonds remained unpaid, since, in order to constitute objectionable double taxation, the two taxes must be imposed during the same taxing period.—People ex rel. Toman v. Crane, 23 N.E.2d 337, 372 Ill. 228—People ex rel. Lindheimer v. Schweitzer, 16 N.E.2d 897, 369 Ill. 355.

(3) A levy for the payment of judgments entered against the city was not objectionable on the ground that it constituted double taxation in that levy had been made in prior years for the payment of such judgments which amount remained unpaid, since a levy to pay judgments is for a single purpose—People ex rel. Toman v. Advance Heating Co., 33 N.E.2d 206, 376 Ill. 158.

The legislature may by implication grant a municipal corporation the power to levy taxes to pay municipal debts⁴⁸ unless there is some provision in the constitution requiring such grant of power to be in express terms⁴⁹ or unless the power to tax is limited in rate or amount and the exercise of the power would result in a tax in excess of the limit.⁵⁰ Where the act authorizing the creation of an indebtedness provides for the levying of a special tax to meet it, and the municipality, in accordance therewith, levies a tax sufficient on its face for such purpose, there is no implied power to levy an additional tax thereafter on the ground that the first levy proved insufficient in fact because of the non-payment of some of the taxes levied.⁵¹ A power to compromise disputed claims implies a power to tax for payment of the amount agreed on in settlement.⁵² Likewise, a power to tax for a special purpose is very clearly implied from provisions creating a special maintenance and operating fund for its execution and from further provisions that such fund shall consist of all moneys collected by assessment or otherwise for maintenance and operation.⁵³

Implication from power to incur indebtedness. The power to tax may be implied, in a proper case, from the power to incur indebtedness.⁵⁴ Thus, where authority is granted by the legislature to a municipality having power to levy taxes, to contract a debt, or to issue bonds, for some specific object, and no special provision is made for payment, the municipal authorities are clothed with power by necessary implication to levy the requisite tax to pay the debt⁵⁵ unless there is in the act itself, or in some general statute or in the constitution, some limitation or restriction which repels the inference;⁵⁶ and if the debt is for an extraordinary purpose, requiring special authority for its creation, a general limitation on the power of taxation for ordinary municipal purposes will not exclude such inference;⁵⁷ but where other provision is expressly made for the payment of the debt the power to levy a tax to pay the debt will not be implied⁵⁸ except to the extent that the provision so made proves to be inadequate for the purpose.⁵⁹

Implication from other powers to tax. The power to tax for payment of debts generally may be implied from the power to tax directly for the purposes in the execution of which the debts were incurred⁶⁰ or from a power to tax "for general and contingent expenses, or any other expenses not herein otherwise provided for;"⁶¹ but a power to levy to pay a floating indebtedness will not be implied from an express power to tax for a sinking fund.⁶²

A municipal corporation has no power to levy a tax for the payment of a claim which is not its lawful debt or valid obligation; authority to tax for the payment of bonds is conditioned on the liability of the municipality on the bonds.

There is no power to tax for the payment of a claim which is not a lawful debt of the municipal corporation,⁶³ such as the payment of a debt in excess of the constitutional debt limit, in so far as the excess is concerned,⁶⁴ the payment of a contract indebtedness incurred prior to the current year where no binding contract calling for payments beyond the fiscal year can be made,⁶⁵ or for the payment of a judgment where a tax could not be legally levied to pay the claim on which the judgment is based,⁶⁶ although it has been held that, under a statute making it the duty of a city council to levy a tax to pay a final judgment recovered against the city, the city cannot go behind the judgment and determine whether or not the judgment should have been entered.⁶⁷ However, where a contract indebtedness may be classed as a current expense of the municipality and is incurred during the current fiscal year, there may be power to tax for its payment as a current expense independently of the validity of the contract.⁶⁸ A municipality succeeding to the liability of another municipality as a result of obtaining a new or amended charter, as discussed supra § 97, has power to levy taxes to discharge such liability.⁶⁹

A constitutional provision prohibiting a city from incurring indebtedness in any year exceeding the income provided for that year does not bar a levy in subsequent years for payment of a judgment obtained on a contract claim in a prior year, where at the time of incurring the obligation under which the judgment arose there was money provided for its payment and such money was not exhausted at the end of the year in which the obligation was incurred, although it was subsequently diverted to other purposes.⁷⁰ Where default of a maturing obligation is threatened by reason of a deficit in the proceeds derived from a tax levied to pay it, and money is temporarily diverted from some other fund to prevent such default, the municipality may levy a tax to repay such money to the fund from which it was diverted⁷¹ if the proceeds of the levy against which the loan is made are insufficient to complete repayment thereof.⁷²

Bonds. Authority to tax for the payment of the principal of, or interest on, bonds is conditioned on the liability of the municipality on the bonds;⁷³ but to the extent that such liability is established the authority to tax, when granted, exists.⁷⁴ A municipality has no power to levy a tax to pay bonds where the issuance thereof was forbidden by statute,⁷⁵ or in excess of the legal limit,⁷⁶ or where the bonds are otherwise invalid.⁷⁷ A constitutional provision giving the legislature power to authorize cities and towns to impose taxes for "municipal purposes" does not permit the giving to municipalities of such authority to issue bonds and to levy a municipal tax to pay the bonds, when the proceeds are to be used to erect schoolhouses and maintain a system of public education in the municipality contrary to other provisions in the constitution.⁷⁸ Under provisions for the levy of a tax each year sufficient to pay the principal and interest on the bonds falling due that year, a municipality may not levy a tax for any year in which no bond or interest on any bond will fall due,⁷⁹ and hence may not levy a tax to pay bonds which, although authorized to be issued by the taxpayers, have not been issued.⁸⁰

Tax anticipation warrants. A municipal corporation is without authority to levy a tax to pay tax anticipation warrants⁸¹ for a previous year,⁸² or the interest on such warrants for the current year⁸³ or for a preceding year.⁸⁴

Presumptions and burden of proof. To support the regularity of a tax, a presumption exists, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that the indebtedness, for the payment of which the levy was made, is valid,⁸⁵ and the burden to prove the invalidity of the indebtedness rests on the taxpayer who is seeking to avoid the payment of the tax.⁸⁶

d. Duty to Tax

It is the duty of a municipal corporation to levy taxes to pay its indebtedness, including bonded indebtedness, lawfully created and incurred.

It is the duty of a municipal corporation to assess, levy, and collect taxes to pay its indebtedness, including bonded indebtedness, lawfully created and incurred,⁸⁷ such duty being sometimes expressly imposed by statute⁸⁸ or constitutional provision.⁸⁹ Where bonds have been issued with a provision for the levy of stipulated taxes for their payment, the fund contracted to be raised by the agreed taxes is the foundation on which the bonds themselves rest, and the tax cannot thereafter be severed from the contract⁹⁰ so as to permit the municipality to refuse

Reasons for rule

(1) Tax anticipation warrants are not debts of the municipality as the term is commonly understood and are not a general liability against the city, but are to be paid only out of the taxes for the year against which the warrants are issued.—People ex rel. Lindheimer v. Axelrod, 26 N.E.2d 512, 373 Ill. 446.—People ex rel. Gill v. Schiek, 14 N.E.2d 223, 368 Ill. 353.—People ex rel. Gill v. Hamilton, 9 N.E.2d 243, 366 Ill. 455.

(2) One fund has already been created to pay such warrants, and a new levy would not be for a corporate purpose.—People ex rel. Lindheimer v. Axelrod, supra.

Warrants issued by another district to levy the tax as long as it is in default on its obligations,⁹¹ and, similarly, constitutional or statutory provisions for the levying of a tax to support bonds or pay an indebtedness in effect at the time of issuing of the bonds or incurring of the indebtedness become part of the contract and binding on the municipality⁹² and the power and duty to levy taxes to meet such obligations cannot be abated or destroyed until the obligations have been fully satisfied.⁹³

The grant of power to tax for a payment of municipal indebtedness imposes on the municipality the duty of exercising such power⁹⁴ unless the whole amount of the taxes which it is allowed by law to levy has already been absorbed by the necessary current expenses of the corporation.⁹⁵ In some jurisdictions, when a judgment has been rendered against the city on its indebtedness, and is not barred by the statute of limitations,⁹⁶ the officers thereof are charged with the duty to levy and collect sufficient taxes to pay it,⁹⁷ as by providing therefor in the general levy,⁹⁸ or by a special levy, if not already included in the general levy.⁹⁹ An agreement to levy a special tax cannot be implied from an ordinance making it the duty of the council to provide means to meet the payment of a designated debt when it becomes due.¹ A tax to be imposed as long as needed to pay a particular debt means an imposition of the tax until the debt is satisfied² or until a sum sufficient for that purpose has been raised.³ The obligation to levy a tax to pay bonds is a continuing one, and, where the time for the levy elapses, the duty remains and the tax must be levied in a subsequent year.⁴

Provisions requiring a municipality to provide for collection of taxes to pay municipal indebtedness contemplate not merely the levy of taxes sufficient to meet principal and interest payments but collection thereof as well;⁵ such obligation is not satisfied by an assessment and rate of levy sufficient to pay the debt if all the taxes levied are collected,⁶ but requires that there be a sufficient assessment and levy actually to pay the debt after deduction of losses in collection.⁷ The municipality is vested with a certain amount of discretion as to the amount to be levied to pay maturing obligations,⁸ but the right to exercise such discretion is in the city council or board having power to tax⁹ and does not extend to other officers charged with ministerial duties in the assessment and collection of the tax.¹⁰ The city cannot be compelled to levy a tax greater than that which will produce a fund sufficient to pay its outstanding maturing obligations.¹¹

Under a statute providing for the issuance of improvement bonds to represent assessments levied for improvements, and providing that on default of payment of such assessments the land securing them shall be sold, and that if the city becomes the purchaser it must pay the amount of the delinquent assessment into a bond redemption fund or, if there are no available funds in the treasury to make such payment, levy a special tax and pay the proceeds into the redemption fund, the duty to levy such tax in a proper case is mandatory;¹² also, where special assessments under a statute authorizing a municipal bond issue are not imposed or collected in season to pay the principal and interest on the bonds, the municipality may be under a duty to

Commencement of foreclosure proceedings by the city does not permit it to escape such mandatory duty;¹⁴ nor is a mandatory duty to levy a tax to pay bonds satisfied by appropriating delinquent taxes or setting aside prospective future collections of special assessments to pay the bonds,¹⁵ by the fact that the bonds are based on mechanics' lien agreements,¹⁶ or by an assessment of costs of the improvement against abutting property owners.¹⁷ The poverty or unfortunate financial condition of a municipality does not excuse it from carrying out its mandatory duty to levy a tax annually sufficient to pay the principal and interest on its bonds;¹⁸ nor is the oppressiveness resulting from taxing in one year property within a municipality to pay accumulated defaults of many years on municipal bonds a good excuse.¹⁹

§ 1998. Sinking Fund

Under some constitutional or statutory provisions municipal corporations are authorized or required to levy taxes to create sinking funds for the payment of certain municipal obligations when due.

to levy taxes to create sinking funds for the payment of certain municipal obligations when due; and, under some provisions, where bonds are issued a tax levy sufficient to take care of sinking fund requirements must be levied each year during the life of the bonds.²³ A power to tax for a sinking fund will be implied from a charter provision that sinking fund charges must be annually provided for.²⁴ An express power to tax for a sinking fund authorizes a tax levy to pay the installments of the indebtedness which, by the terms of the contract creating it, fall due from year to year,²⁵ but, as discussed supra § 1997 b, does not authorize a levy to pay a floating indebtedness. The authority or duty to levy a sinking fund tax is controlled by the terms of the statute in force at the time the tax is levied²⁶ rather than by an earlier statute in force when improvement proceedings, because of which the sinking fund was established, were commenced.²⁷

A tax for a sinking fund in excess of the amount needed for such purposes in any one year is invalid as to the excess;²⁸ and a sinking fund tax cannot be continued after the purpose for which it was authorized has been accomplished.²⁹ The validity of the tax is not affected by its insufficiency to provide the fund necessary to discharge the indebtedness at maturity;³⁰ by its being made payable to a sinking fund commission which no longer exists;³¹ by the fact that the city invested the proceeds of the tax in bonds representing the indebtedness;³² by the fact that the bonds representing the indebtedness were issued by the municipality to provide funds to comply with orders promulgated by a state board under the mandatory provisions of a statute;³³ or by the fact that the tax for sinking fund purposes will result in a general tax rate in excess of the legal limit, where the electors have power under the law to vote the excess tax and have so voted.³⁴

Where the legislature, however, acting under a power granted by the constitution, has provided that "in no case shall the combined maximum rate for all taxes levied in any year exceed" a stated amount, a tax cannot be levied for the sinking fund if it results in a general tax levy in excess of that amount.³⁵ Under a statute providing for a levy to be made to reimburse the sinking fund for the amount paid out of it in payment of a judgment against the municipality, such levy must include the principal amount of the judgment together with the interest thereon.³⁶ In determining the amount required to be levied for sinking fund purposes, no deduction can be made for estimated receipts from other sources.³⁷ Taxes levied for sinking fund

Number of levies

(1) The number of levies authorized to retire municipal bonds at maturity is the number of fiscal years between the date of issue and the date of maturity.—Berryman v. Bonaparte, 11 P.2d 164, 155 Okl. 165—Jones v. Blaine, 300 P. 369, 149 Okl. 153—In re Gypsy Oil Co., 285 P. 66, 141 Okl. 298—Aaronson v. Smiley, 285 P. 59, 142 Okl. 29—C. D. Coggeshall & Co. v. Smiley, 285 P. 48, 142 Okl. 8.

(2) Where the maturity of the bonds during the fiscal year is on or after June 15, the number of tax levies should be equal to the number of fiscal years between the issuance of the bonds and their maturity, but the number of levies should be one less than the number of intervening years if the maturity date is before June 15.—Berryman v. Bonaparte, supra—Jones v. Blaine, supra—Protest of Trimble, 300 P. 406, 151 Okl. 74.

(3) Municipality may begin sinking fund levy on twenty-fifth year before maturity of bonds maturing twenty-five years from issue, notwithstanding statute relieving municipality of duty of levying a tax for a sinking fund before the twentieth year prior to maturity—Commerce Trust Co., Kansas City, Mo., v. purposes under a composition plan must be sufficient to satisfy the requirements of the plan.³⁸

Existence and nature of indebtedness. The nature of the indebtedness for the payment of which a city is authorized or required to create a sinking fund by taxation is determined by the statutory or constitutional provisions.³⁹ Unless the statute so authorizes,⁴⁰ a tax for the sinking fund cannot be levied before the creation of the debt,⁴¹ but a tax to pay interest for the fiscal year and the sinking fund charges may be levied, even though the indebtedness was created less than one year prior to the levy.⁴² Where only part of the authorized indebtedness is in existence at the time of the levy, and the indebtedness is divisible, as is the case if bonds are issued therefor, a tax for the sinking fund will be upheld to the extent that it is required for sinking fund charges on that part.⁴³ So, where municipal bonds payable in equal installments at intervals of several years constitute one transaction, a levy for the sinking fund should be made equally each year.⁴⁴ Taxes cannot be levied to create a sinking fund for void bonds.⁴⁵ The burden, however, is on the taxpayer to prove that the bonds are void.⁴⁶

Levy for sinking fund deficit. In some jurisdictions, in the absence of statute, a municipality has no authority to levy a tax to replenish a sinking fund deficit,⁴⁷ but it may be expressly authorized to do so by legislature;⁴⁸ and a statute conferring such authority is not unconstitutional.⁴⁹ The sole requisite of such a levy is that there must be a deficit in the sinking fund at the time of the levy,⁵⁰ and no greater deficit levy should be made in any one fiscal year than is necessary to provide sufficient cash in the sinking fund to meet obligations when due,⁵¹ although it is not necessary in order to authorize the levy that those obligations fall due within the current fiscal year.⁵²

Report or approval as condition precedent. Under some statutes a report to the common council by sinking fund commissioners as to the amount to be raised for such fund is required before such a levy can be made.⁵³ Where the power to tax for a sinking fund is once shown to exist, its exercise is not made subject to the approval of the state tax commission by a statute making such approval a condition precedent to an increase of the general tax rate by the municipality.⁵⁴

Compelling levy. Where a levy for the sinking fund is discretionary with the council, such a levy cannot be compelled by the courts.⁵⁵ The rule is otherwise where under the statute the duty to tax is mandatory.⁵⁶

§ 1999. Deficit Tax

Under proper authority a municipal corporation may levy a tax to make up a past deficiency or to provide for a prospective one.

In the absence of statutory or charter restrictions, a municipal corporation may assess the deficiency of the preceding year in the next,⁵⁷ or may levy a
